HEARING WAS PRIVATE.

Case of Frankie Britt up Before Judge in Boston.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Application was made before Judge Hayden in the Roxbury court to-day for a warrant charging manslaughter against young Frankie Britt, of New Bedford, who was the opponent of Terry McGovern, of Philadelphia, in a boxing bout Monday, when the latter was fatally injured. After listening to the testimony of the medical examiner, who performed an autopsy on the body, and of police officials, Judge Hayden continued the case until Saturday for further investigation. Britt was in the building but was not taken before the court. The hearing was private.

GERMAN'S PLAN POLAND'S RUIN

Deliberately Hold Vilna to Hand City Over to Bolsheviki Massacre.

WARSAW, Dec. 31.—(Delayed.)—The fate of Vilna, in Lithuania, is trembling in the balance. Bolshevik agents are spreading their propaganda throughout the province, the iortheastern part of which is under Societ rule. Bands of robbers and tramps, advance guards of the Bolsheviki regular troops and refugees are coming into Vilna. The Germans apparently are making no effort to restore order in the city, although they have five thousand troops there.

A Polish committee called upon Colonee Wernef, in command of the German troops, and requested arms for Poses and others so that they might defend the city against the Bolsheviki. Colonel Werner replied: "Berlin has given us order to the contrary. We won't be a monkey to draw the chestnnts out of the fire for the British. I am sorry for your wives, daughters and children, but this country must be destroyed."

The Poles have organized the young men for the defense of the aity. The correspondent has seen a copy of the letters which have passed between the Polish committees and the Germans regarding the defense of Vilna. The Germans declare categorically that they intend to turn over the city to the Soviets, and also refuse to permit the Poles to receive arms.

Conferences have been carried on between Captain Bobiabnisky of the Polish army and the German delegate, Major von Shoeder, and two other delegates representing the soldiers, all from the Tenth Army under von Falkenhayn.

Semi-Annual at Barries', Limited

Ladies' Fashionable Ready-to-wear Garments to be Offered at Clearance Prices

The announcement from the Ready-to-wear Department of Barries Limited, printed on another page, giving the particulars of the Semi-Annual Sale of Ladies' Ready-to-wear Garments, will doubtless prove of more than usual interest. Beginning to-morrow, all Ladies' Fashionable Coats, Suits, Dresses, Skirts, Blouses and Sweaters, will be offered below the regular values. Regular prices will be discontinued for a radical disposal of all lines. Buyers will be getting an unusually desirable lot of garments of correct modes, originally purchased for cash of the best material obtainable. Since the inception of this department at Barries, the policy has been to encourage only two special sales yearly, at which regular tagged prices are discontinued. So that during this event, buyers will be offered money-saving possibilities in securing garments of correct modes, purchased originally for cash, and of the best materials obtainable. This policy has proved very satisfactory with Barries Limited—a steady, increasing business having resulted, together with clean stocks, which have proved that this department has filled a valuable need.

LOSS BY RAILWAY CONTROL.

U. S. Government Out of Pocket $150,000,000 Through Operation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Government's loss in operating the railroads in 1918 is calculated by railroad administration officials at less than $150,000,000. This represents the difference between the aggregate amount the Government will be compelled to pay railroad companies as rental for the use of their properties—the so-called guaranteed return—and the net income which the Government will receive from the railroads.

It will take six months more or receipts from the increased freight rates to permit the Government to recoup its losses, officials believe. If Congress does not approve the proposed five years' extension of Federal control, and as a consequence President Wilson carries out his announced intention of returning the roads to private management at an early date, the Government's loss will not be made up.

This deficit does not include the big sums—between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000—which have been loaned to railroads to help them pay for the extensive programme of improvements and purchase of new cars and locomotives. These loans will be repaid eventually.

80,000 ARMENIANS KILLED.

Kurds Kill 2,000 Women to Recover Swallowed Jewels.

PARIS, January 2. — In giving details of the Armenian massacres in Turkey in the last five years, the Constantinople correspondent of the Petit Parisien says that at one time 100,000 Armenians were concentrated for alleged strategical reasons at Dorgor, Arabia. The Turkish authorities in Constantinople thought the number was too high and gave order that 80,000 of the Armenians be put out of the way.

In the Mush Valley, the correspondent adds, the Kurds robbed 2,000 Armenian women. Later suspecting that the women had swallowed their jewels, the Kurds killed them in a horrible manner and then burned their bodies. The next day, the correspondent continues, these monsters quetly sifted the ashes seeking the jewels." The correspondent reports that in the same region 7,000 children between the ages of three and ten years died of starvation, and 100 women were buried alive in trenches which the Turks first forced them to dig.

HARDEN ASKS GERMANS TO SHOW REPENTANCE

Says They Still Refuse to Face the Facts—London Times Scoffs at Revolution—Fifty-one Months of Brutal Rule in Belgium.

London, Jan. 4.—The London Times says that in Die Zukunft of Dec. 14, Maximilian Harden published a sort of appeal to the German Government to approach the allied powers with assurancees that Germany really placed all her hope on the abandonment of her militarist ambitions and the creation of a "new world": that she was quite ready to fulfill all her just obligations and to give absolute guarantee with a view to "negotiation about the future."

Harden suggests hat Germany is gradually drifting toward the certain danger of an armed invasion and a dictated form of Government with the object of securing payment for the war and also of proving to the German people that their submission is absolute. He reprints relevant declarations of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George about the attitude of the allies toward a reformed Germany and looks to the fulfillment of their promises, but he maintains that the German people are still failing to face the facts about their own plight and about enemy opinion, just as they have always failed to face them. The Germans, he says, do not really understand what an account is being made up against them—an account which he describes as follows:

"Fifty-one months of brutal rule in Belgium, where administrative unity was broken and raw materials, machinery goods of every kind, and three millions in cash and banknotes alone were carried away. All laws was broken, forced labor imposed, civilians were deported, and at the eleventh hour industries were still destroyed and towns plundered.

"The devastation of Northern France and the destruction of Cathedrals, monuments, mines, factories and orchards.

"Air raids against all law and all customs.

"The sinking of passenger ships and hospital ships.

"Secret agreements with the Irish and the Flemish.

"The smuggling of explosives, bacilli, and incendiary instruments into neutral countries.

"Everywhere bribery, fraud and theft.

"A cloud of witnesses brought to answer every accusation.

"A country fertilized with the blood of the Armenian people, and all over the earth hardly a voice for Germany."

Do Not Understand

Harden says that the German people simply do not understand the situation that they have to face, and that since he revolution they have been muddling along and indulging in all sorts of political and economic follies, merely waiting for the peace which they supposed to have been secured by the "acceptance of all of President Wilson's points." The only result, Harden declares, is that the enemy countries become more and more suspicious.

It is worth while, says The Times to quote Harden's account of the enemy attitude toward Germany as he sees it. He makes the enmey say that "this stupid copy of Russian disorder is not up to the standard of German cunning which for three years has made the war-hell so tiot for us. It is a new trick to deceive us. They still have 6,000,000 or 8,000,000 men under arms. They can quietly replace the heavy artillery that they have lost, and then fire a refreshed and reformed army with the cry that the soil of the Fatherland must be defended.

"Our socialists would fall upon us and ask whether the army is to be misused for the purpose of conquest The boches have driven away the Kaiser and his fellows because the promised victory could not be had. Yet only children believe in their 'revolution.'

"The walls of this empire were not so loosely built that a puff of wind could overthrow them. Nowhere has there been the storming of a bastile or even an attempt at serious resistance. A naval or military strike, which was either ordered by Admirals and Generals or effected by Foch's blows is given, but as the German revolution it is the usual Berlin trash.

"From the old Field Marshal down to the young Prince in the diplomatic service, all offer their services to the new Government—a Government in Russian Germany, containing men, who before yesterday were accused of high treason. Behind the sham front the old officials sit at their old work, and no legation, no centre of propaganda, has cleaned out Hindenburg and Haase, Erzerberger and Ledebour, Solf and Kautsky. That is the appearance of the much advertised revolution.

"Official language is unchanged. It is still the boast that the army is 'undefeated,' and as regards the approach of starvation, mentioned only to deceive us, where should starvation come from, since if the war went on, the last year's harvest must suffice until Spring?

"There is no trace of repentance or of an attempt to separate the innocent from the guilty, nor can there be because so many sharers in the guilt are partners in business. They raged when the Baverian published the report by he Berlin Miniser and said that such disclosures could only help the enemy. It is a put-up game."

GRAIN MARKET

Receipts of live stock of all classes have been extremely light for the past two weeks, even for the double holiday season, which is usually a quiet time in the cattle markets. In consequence of the light offerings, buyers have not been too keen to rush matters, a proceeding which would have resulted only in unduly boosting prices to higher levels than the situation at present really calls for. Insteady, therefore, of forcing up prices in a scramble for the limited supplies offering, the packers have been content to draw upon supplies already in hand, which admittedly were large, and amply sufficient to meet all immediate requirements for the holiday trade. As a result of this policy, prices have been kept practically steady during the past two weeks, with very slight movement, either up or down, but with a tendency rather up than down, except in the case of common and medium butcher cows. Good to choice butcher steers, and good feeders have been in steady demand, sufficiently so to prevent any weakening in the general tone of the market. As present supplies in the hands of the trade have been already pretty well drawn upon, prospects are that prices will remain firm at the present levels. There is likely to be good markets in fact from this out for good quality butcher cattle of all weights.

As with the cattle, the runs of all the small meats have been light, and prices in consequence very firm, lambs and calves in particular making substantial advances.

The hog market has held practically steady and unchanged this week, though receipts have been very light.

CATTLE MARKET

Corn market "came back" with a good swing yesterday, apparently on the strength of a statement given out to the effect that corn stocks amount to only 300,000 bushels, and that these are held by one or two houses. Although the colder weather is favourable for a freer delivery of corn, the present strength of the cash situation more than offsets the weather conditions. Oats effected the strength of corn, advancing 7-8 to 1 3-8c. on both the Winnipeg and Chicago markets.

BURNING PEA COAL IN FURNACE

(By Chas. K. Farnington.)

The high cost of living makes it necessary that the householder should obtain all necessities at the lowest possible cost. The writer plans in this article to tell how teste were made with pea coal to determine if this coal could be used to advantage for furnaces, instead of the larger and more expensive kinds. The experiments proved that if care was used in burning the pea coal excellent results followed, and that it was also a very economical size to employ. It costs from $1.00 to $1.75 per ton less than the sizes ordinarily used for furnace work.

There are two specially good qualities which we soon discover about pea coal. It will allow the fire to come up very quickly if the damper in the smoke pipe and the drafts are opened. For obtaining heat at the time it is most needed, i.e., in the early morning on a cold winter dar it is admirable. Those of us who like a warm room in which to eat breakfast will appreciate this feature. Again it may seem strange to say it is a good size to use to 'bank' the fires at night, or also to use at any time during the day when no heat is required from the furnace. It will "keep the fire in" at such times very well indeed.

It is of a size that will pass through most furnace grates if it is used when the fire is being lighted at the beginning of the winter season. This is not a serious objection to its use by any means, for all that is necessary is a small amount of coal of a larger size to use when the fire is being lighted. In the average home the furnace fire is kept burning without it being out at all for the entire winter. Once the fire is made, pea coal gives admirable results. To use it economically a good "body" of fire is essential. Therefore, when the fire is being "forced' on cold winter mornings in order that a good amount of heat may be obtained in a short time, do not put on too large a quantity at once so as to smother the fire, but put on a moderate amount, and then more when it is properly ignited. After a good "body" of fire is obtained a sufficient quantity may be put on to carry the fire for some time. When shaking down and cleaning the fire if "holes" appear (and they sometimes do, especially if the work is not done carefully) fill them up with a larger sized coal so as to prevent any of the pea coal passing down through the grate. But such holes are rare if care is used, and let me say that care should always be employed in caring for any furnace no matter what sized coal may be burned, and if it is not it is possible to waste a large amount of coal. So many persons handling a furnace do not realize this, and get the fire so "low" that it requires a long time and much coal before a sufficient quantity of heat may be obtained for the house. Therefore shake the fire gently at all times. If coal of good quality is used clinkers are not numerous and the use of the poker is not necessary as a rule. I have seen inexperienced people stir the entire fire up with the poker with the idea that they were doing the best thing to secure a good fire. A good grate will always allow all the ashes to be quickly and surely removed from the fire without disturbing it too much.

As soon as the advantages of pea coal are realized its use for furnaces will be increased. The writer until recently had been under the impression that it could not be burned to advantage in the furnace, but he finds he was mistaken. If any reader wishes to test for himself let him order a ton or so of pea coal and follow the simple directions given in this article. I have no doubt as to the results, both as regards the burning qualities of the coal and last, but not least by any means the economy.

FOOD CONDITIONS IN FRANCE LOOK BETTER

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Food conditions in France will improve considerably in the near future, declares Victor Boret, the Food Minister, in an interview in the Matin. However, new restrictions will be imposed on the consumption of meat because of the necessity of re-stocking herds. The sugar ration will be increased shortly, while large quantities of coffee are now on the way from Brazil. Butter is being imported from foreign countries. Regulations imposed on restaurants, the Minister concluded, will be ameliorated shortly.

The Old Year and the New

Another year, at God's behest,
Into the past has flown,
And may His holy name be blest,
For all the joys we've known.

What humble gratitude we owe,
For patient mercy found,
When justly He had laid us low
As cumberers of the ground.

With prospects beaming fair and bright,
Fresh dawns another year,
And on its annals pure and white
May no dark blot appear.

But may devoted service fill
Each hour with glad employ,

WOMEN'S BEST LAXATIVE

Proved Every Day That Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are Just Right for Woman's ills

Little wonder woman suffers so much from constipation. She always hesitates continually puts off taking medicine.

Of course a woman's system is delicate, is easily injured by drastic purgatives. Bitter experience with harsh medicines makes her cautious, and to the great injury, chronic sluggishness of the system is permitted.

Few pills are suited to the actual needs of woman—they are too strong

But there is a good woman's laxative, and it combines mildness with thoroughness of activity—it is known to the people of many nations as Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which never gripe, never cause nausea and are safe to use no matter what the conditions or strength or circumstances of health may be. A naturalness and regularity of the system, so important to every woman, is quickly acquired by the regular use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. As a health-bringer, as a tonic laxative, as an all-round ladies' medicine, there is positively nothing so efficacious as Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut; 25c per box, at all dealers.

Policeman Shot As Seven Men Battle Over Automobile

Harold Neal Wounded by First Holders of Touring Car—Two Arrested, Five More Sought.

NEW YORK, January 3. — One policeman is in the Lincoln Hospital with a bullet wound in the head; one man is in Fordham Hospital with a wound in the shoulder; another is held in the Alexander avenue police station on a charge of grand larceny, and five others are being sought by the police as the result of an attempted theft of an automobile at Brook avenue and 136th street, the Bronx.

As Harold Neal, 22 years old, an electrician, of No. 1497 Southern Boulevard, and Robert Radcliff, 21, a laborer, of No. 548 East 136th St., were leaving Youngs restaurant, at No. 124 Brook avenue, a large touring automobile bearing the designation "69,563 Connecticut," was driven up to the restaurant and five young men alighted from it and entered the place.

According to the police account, Neal jumped into the automobile, followed by Radcliff. The latter took the wheel and the car started off down Brook avenue. Apprised of the action of the two men, the five men who had come in the car rushed from the restaurant and one of them fired, wounding Neal in the shoulder.

Leo Sexton, a policeman, of the Alexander avenue station, who was near, heard the shot and started after the man that he thought had fired at Neal. The man took refuge in the vestibule of the house at No. 504 East 136th street, and when Sexton came up he shot him in the left side of the head near the car, and escaped.

At Brook avenue and 134th street, Radcliff, with Neal groaning at his side, was stopped by Detective Budermeyer, and both men were placed under arrest charged with grand larceny.

The wounds of Policeman Sexton and Neal were dressed by Drs. Spindler and Zeller of Lincoln Hospital, and the two men were taken there, but as it has no prison ward Neal was later removed to Fordham hospital.

Mystery surrounds not only the identify of the man who shot Policeman Sexton, but the other four men who arrived at the restaurant in the automobile, for they abandoned it and disappeared before Detective Budermeyer reached the restaurant. This leads the police to believe they had also stolen the automobile.

Radcliff was arraigned before Magistrate John E. McGeehan, in the Morrisania Police Court, yesterday morning and was held without bail on a charge of grand larceny contained in a short affidavit.

It was not known by the police to whom the automobile belonged. No record of Connecticut automobiles is kept in New York, it was said.

Cure That Cold Don't Get Grippe

You know how quickly Zutoo tablets cure headache and break up colds—how soon they allay the fever.

Take them at once when you feel the first pain or shiver—the first symptom of a cold.

Taken then, they will prevent the Grippe. Taken after it has developed, there is nothing better for the pain and fever.

Arthur Mandel Knows About Brian's Evenings With Mollie.

ARTHUR MANDEL KNOWS
CHAPTER LXXVIII

Kenyon Roberts had not been the only one who had seen Brian going toward the Square with parcels under his arm; but while Kenyon had not investigated where he was taking them, Arthur Mandel had.

It all came about trough an accident. One night while Ruth was away Mandel was in the locality of Brian's office. He saw him come out, and thinking he would like to know if he —Brian— were taking that girl out again, he followed him for a block or two. He saw him stop and buy fruit and then go into a butcher shop and come out with a brown paper parcel. To Manedl's amazement he walked directly to one of the shabby houses near the Square and disappear.

With a slow whistle pursing his lips, Mandel turned and went about his business, but joyfully. Surely Ruth must soon find out that Brian was unfaithful. He of course crediting Brian with doing far more than he had; and of being in love with Mollie, and not with Ruth.

Arthur Mandel, with his disposition could not conceive of caring for a woman like Ruth, and yet being tempted to hurt her because of loneliness, or because of a liking he might feel for a woman so much her opposite, as was Mollie King.

He was not the sort of man who carried tales; yet he sorely longed for Ruth to know what he suspected as truth. The longer she was with him, the more he saw of her the more in love had he become. It seemed at times that he could not live without her, that she must belong to him. Yet instinctively he knew that to make the slightest advance would be to lose her altogether. Even to lose her from the store, did she so much as mistrust his feelings, he knew was a probability. Yet day after day it became harder to hide the love he had for her, the desire to try and make her return it.

"I know I could make her care if I could try," he would often mutter to himself. Yet he dared not try.

Ruth had no slightest idea that she was more to her employer than any of the other clerks, except as her work made her perhaps a more valuable asset to the fiem. She gave herself whole-heartedly to her work, never slighting anything, never asking favors, or presuming in any way because she had found it was necessary Arthur Mandel was not unaware of this, and he thought the more of her because of it.

"There never was another like her," he said, one day, after she left some finished plans for him to consider. "What is that fool husband of hers thinking of to neglect such a woman?"

That Brian did not call it neglect, that he felt perfectly justified because of what he considered neglect of him, would have surprised Mandel. Had he known that Ruth paid most of the expenses of the living, so that Brian would feel he could use his money for what he liked, would have surprised him still more.

Ruth had paid the rent ever since they took the new and larger apartment. She had paid it in advance, and then as it came due had stopped on her way home and paid the agent. She explained to Brian that, as she had to go right by his office, it would be foolish for him (Brian) to make a trip up there purposely to pay it. After the second month it had not been mentioned; but Ruth went right on paying. She also paid Rachel. Brian looked over the grocery and meat bills, and paid those as well as the gas and electric light. But often Ruth brought in a roast or a chicken, fruit, etc, so the bills were small. She was determined that Brian should not feel embarrassed because he had money in his pockets. Had she known that almost every cent outside of that expended on the home, his smoking and carfare, was spent with Mollie King, or in some way to be with her, she might not have been so generous in her impulses.

Brian had gone regularly twice a week for his lessons, Tuesday, and Friday. He came home punctually at about ten-thirty, and aside from asking how he was getting along, had not again questioned. But Mollie had one night remarked that it was a pity to go away up-town and then back again. Brian decided that it WAS a pity, and also unnecessary. He would stay down to dinner the nights he took his lessons, and then go home earlier.

He mentioned the subject to Ruth. "I can get a snack, Ruth, then have my lesson early and get home at nine instead of ten."

Ruth had acquiesed, as she usually did in anything Brian proposed that would make him more comfortable.

Someway she happened to mention the next Tuesday night that there was no need of hurrying away—Manuel had told her she needn't stay, although there was important work to do—because she was alone. He at once seized upon the fact and asked her to dine with him.

"If you will, I shall accept your offer to remain until seven. If not I can't allow you to do so," he had said so kindly that Ruth had agreed to take dinner with him after they had finished the work in hand.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

13	1	14	25	-	9	19	-
4	5	6	5	1	20	5	4
-	1	14	4	-	14	15	20
-	1	-	13	9	14	21	20
5	-	2	5	6	15	18	5

This fore-told when the War would end. What does it say?

CAN you work this out? Do you want to know how it was decided long before peace came when the war would be over? The answer is contained within the 42 squares above. What is the answer? Solve it and valuable prizes await you.

HOW TO SOLVE IT

The above squares hold the answer. It is in one sentence of nine words, containing forty letters. Each letter is represented by a number, and that number is the position of the letters in the alphabet. For instance, A is represented by the figure 1, as it is first in the alphabet, and so on. Now, to help you get started, we will tell you that the first letter in the puzzle is "W," because W is the 23rd letter in the alphabet. Get to work and figure out the words in the sentence, and try to find the answer to the great question, "When will the war be over?" It is not easy, but it is worth while trying for.

FIRST PRIZE

Real 6 horse power auto with high class, six seated 4 cylinder, gasoline motor; fast, big enough for men, boys or girl. Looks like big autos. Has artillery wheels, solid rubber tires, spring seat and cushions, 2 brakes, tool box, tools, horn, clutch. Any boy or girl can run it easily. A real prize for boys and girls.

THE PRIZES

PRIZE	VALUE
1st—Five Horse Power Auto	$150.00
2nd—Dandy Folding Camera	25.00
3rd—Magnificent Gold Watch and Chain, or Girl's Wrist Watch	15.00
4th—Lovely 26-inch Doll, handsomest and beautiful English Doll Carriage	10.00
5th—Electric Projectoscope. Better than a magic lantern. Will show any picture or post-card photo on screen	7.50
6th—Full-size Football	5.00
7th to 10th—Self-Filler Fountain Pens, each $2.50	10.00
Also 10 Extra Prizes for Boys and Girls, each $1.25.	12.50
Total Value of Prizes	$235.00

Copy your answer upon a plain white sheet of paper as neatly as you can; because neatness, spelling, handwriting, and punctuation count if more than one answer is correct. Put your name and address in the top right hand corner of the paper. If you have to write a letter, or show anything else, put it upon a separate sheet of paper. We will write as soon as your answer is received, and tell you if your solution is correct, and also send you a complete illustrated list of the grand prizes that you can win.

What Others Have Done, You Can Do

Here are the names of only a few of the boys and girls to whom we have recently awarded big prizes—

Shetland Pony and Cart, Helen Smith, Edmonton.
Shetland Pony, Beatrice Hughes, Hammond, Sask.
$150.00 Cash, Lyle Benson, Hamilton, Ont.
$50.00 Cash, Helen Beneach, Junkins, Alta.
$25.00 Cash, Florence Nesbitt, Empire, Ont.

We will send you names of many others, too. Only boys and girls under 17 years of age may send answers, and each boy or girl will be required to perform a small service for us for which an additional valuable reward or special cash prize will be given. The contest will close on March 31st at 5.30 p.m.

Send your answer this very evening. Address:

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DAN CUPID—MAGICIAN

A Ring That Told a Story

By HARRY HOUDINI.

In agony of apprehension Williams started to arrange his modest conjuring apparatus. A few hours earlier his debut as a parlor entertainer had been a matter of joyous and ambitious anticipation. Now the brocaded walls of Senator Morgan's music room fairly threatened to close in and choke him, while the fragrance of hothouse flowers oppressed him strangely. He wondered how he had ever dared to ask the vaudeville agent who supplied Mrs. Morgan and other fashionable hostesses with talent to let him substitute for Thorley, the eminent magician who had fallen a victim to la grippe.

"Can I help you in any way? I am Miss Morgan. The servants are all busy with supper, and I thought—perhaps"—

Young Williams had never thought of needing help, but as he faced the clear eyed, flower-like girl and the echo of her well modulated voice rang in his ears he felt that his one hope of succeeding lay in her presence. Men and women wiser in the social world than Frank Williams had fallen under the spell of Helen Morgan's rare sympathy and charm and wondered how this girl of high ideals and gentle manners could be the daughter of Senator Morgan, ponderous with the arrogance of newly acquired wealth, and Mrs. Morgan, who radiated commonplace attributes as her recently purchased diamonds scintillated light.

At Frank's faltering thanks Helen Morgan began quietly, but deftly, to carry out his instructions, placing a light gilt table here, a taboret there, and where it would be within reach of the conjurer's hand a candle or a gleaming revolver. And, though afterward Frank Williams could not tell how it had happened, before the settings for his act were prepared the girl had drawn out his tale of half tragic struggle, the prosaic, hard headed father storming over the visionary, inexplicable nature of his youngest son, the loyal mother secretly brooding over and abetting this odd chick of her little flock, his constant endeavor to learn the secrets of magic and then to secure a hearing, even the rented dress suit and the gold watch which had been pawned that very afternoon to buy bonbons and gilded trinkets to distribute among his youthful auditors. And as he finished it seemed to Helen Morgan that she stood in the presence of a struggling genius. She had read such stories of poets, musicians and inventors.

The performance was a great success. The children were duly mystified and more than delighted with the showers of trinkets and bonbons which apparently came from an inexhaustible source. Mrs. Morgan had condescended to express her appreciation, a footman had served a supper of such rare delicacies that Frank had longed to pack them all up with his paraphernalia and take them to his mother, and now as he walked down the broad avenue leading from the house he felt as if the house behind him was fairyland indeed and Helen Morgan its princess.

But he was roused from his dream by a grim faced butler, who came hurrying after him.

"You're to come back to the house," was the brusque order, and, re-entering his fairyland, Williams faced Senator Morgan, a glowering figure, in the foreground and Mrs. Morgan, a hysterical one, in the background. But in the eyes of the third he read pity, the same tender pity which he had seen in her eyes when Helen Morgan had stooped to pick up his trick rabbit as the frightened animal, escaping from his pocket and trembling at the shouts of the children, had run to the girl for protection.

"It's jail for you, young man, unless you produce my wife's rings. She left them behind the rock crystal vase in the music room, and we don't propose to have them 'disappeared' as you do handkerchiefs and rabbits."

The scene which followed was a horrible nightmare to the young magician—his own protestations of innocence drowned in Mrs. Morgan's hysterics, Senator Morgan's orders for an officer, Helen's pleading for time to search and finally the discovery of the rings by a maid in Mrs. Morgan's dressing room. And when it was all over Williams was thrust out in the night through a side entrance, feeling more like a thief than an acquitted man. Then suddenly a gentle hand fell upon his arm, and a gentler voice murmured in his ear:

"Just a minute, please. I want to tell you how sorry I am. I hoped this would be the greatest night of your life"—

For one long minute the young man who had his own way to make and the girl whose future had been assured so far as wealth could accomplish this feat looked into each other's eyes. And the soul of the man, suddenly born, went out to the divine tenderness of innate womanliness which is a greater power than mere physical beauty. He spoke quietly, but with new found confidence.

"It has been a wonderful, wonderful night to me, and some day I am coming back to tell you why."

* * * * * * *

Under the chaperonage of a dowager duchess who knew how to turn her title to financial account Helen Morgan was "doing" the London season. In a Mayfair drawing room she sat, and beside her was a man with a monocle, an English accent above reproach and a patronizing air. Of course the Morgan millions would mean the remantling of his ancestral but crumbling castles. But then the utter indifference of this girl irritated him even while it commanded his admiration.

"I suppose you saw Erskine in Paris. He's been the go over there—made by the American set, I understand. They say it's his manners as much as his art that got the women all going. He never speaks during his performance and has the most inscrutable eyes. Never could understand why women went in so heavily for eyes. Conjurers bore me, as a rule, but I'm curious to see this man."

Helen Morgan hardly heard what the man with the monocle was saying.

"Erskine!"

In a secret drawer of her jewel case there lay a card, "Frank Erskine Williams," the card of the man who had never come back, never sent her a message in five years, the man who had forgotten! But, no; this could not be he, for the man who had promised had a ready tongue—yes, a ready tongue, as all men had—who promised.

A flutter of fans and a murmur of subdued interest announced that the lion of the evening had arrived. A quick inclination of the head, a snapping of long, slender fingers, and the performance was under way. With lightning rapidity and wonderful deftness the conjurer worked, and the breathless audience watched, not so much the tricks as the unsmiling lips, the inscrutable eyes.

Only one person in the fashionable audience saw something, more, and that a quivering, blue eyed girl who for one brief second had met and held the magician's glance and seen burning in those inscrutable eyes a fire which had burned there on a night five years before, a fire lit centuries agone in the eyes of the world's first man—Adam.

The assistant called for a ring with which his master would work a new trick. Mechanically, Helen Morgan handed him a magnificent hoop of pearls. Erskine took the ring gravely, raised a silver hammer and apparently smashed the trinket into a thousand pieces on an anvil of curiously wrought silver. Then he produced a sealed casket of water, in which swam a goldfish, and in the mouth of the fish he found the hoop of pearls. But the ring was not returned to its owner by the assistant. Instead, as the room rang with applause, the magician himself walked quietly down the aisle, formed by the parting of many silken skirts, and placed the ring on the girl's trembling white hand. Not even the man with the monocle noticed that the conjurer for an instant held the slim fingers in his with a pressure that threatened to crush them, nor did he dream that within the girl's palm lay another ring at which she dared not look.

Somewhat awkwardly she slipped on her long white glove. She was so deeply engaged in this operation that she did not even see the conjurer as he left the improvised stage. In the privacy of the boudoir hours later she held the conjurer's ring under the ugly of a blazing electrolier.

"Such an odd—I was almost going to say ugly—ring," she murmured as she slipped it on her finger and turned it this way and that. A diamond, an emerald, an amethyst, a ruby, another emerald, a sapphire and a topaz formed the brilliant half hoop. Then suddenly her cheeks burned crimson. She had read the story of the many colored gems. Their first letters spelled "dearest," the message of the man who had not forgotten his promises.

With her chocolate the next morning came an oddly shaped French gray envelope, bare of crest or monogram.

"Forgive my temerity of last night," ran the message within, "but for years I have been carrying that ring in my pocket, waiting for our meeting. They were the first gems I bought when success came my way, and I gathered them one by one, each perfect in its way and worthy the one woman in all the world. Yet last night I heard you were to marry the Earl of Warburton. If this is true, do what you will with the ring. If it is but an idle rumor, drop me a single word to the Hotel Cecil, 'Come.'"

Erskine laid aside the morning papers, heralding him as the fashionable world's new found idol, to answer a summons to the phone. The voice at the other end of the wire faltered, then grew firm and strong: "Come. I could not wait to write."

Canker Sores.

Canker sores in the mouth result from a badly balanced diet. The stomach digestion may be satisfactory and yet cankers may develop. To cure cankers burn them with some aromatic sulphuric acid applied to the ulcers with a wooden toothpick. To prevent them eat regularly, properly and slowly. The diet should be a proper balance between vegetables, fruits, meat and bread. Constipation must be prevented. Cankers have a purpose. They warn. If the warning is not heeded more serious trouble follows.

Lakefield Men Returning Home

Christmas Treat for the Children—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 2. — Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, has received notice that the following Lakefield soldiers have landed in Halifax and are on their way home: Sig. P. W. Johnson, C.E., Pte. E. Tighe, Pte. J. Montgomery.

The first named soldier has been overseas more than two years with the Canadian Engineers, and the two latter are men of the 23rd Battalion. Pte. Montgomery will visit his sister, Mrs. McIlmoyle on Queen street, before proceeding to his home in Hall's Bridge. Pte. Montgomery enjoys the distinction of being the first repatriated prisoner to return to Lakefield.

Christmas Treat.

Owing the destruction of the dishes belonging to St. John's church, in the recent fire at the Town Hall, the annual Christmas treat for the children of the Sunday school could not be held on the usual day. Instead a sleigh drive was given the children, followed by games in the Sunday school. The prizes for the year's work were distributed, after which the children dispersed. The following were the prize winners:

Class I—Mrs. Mahood's— 1st prize, Grace Watson; 2nd prize, Madeline Junkin and Etta Webdale equal.

Class II—Miss Ogilvie— 1st prize, Helen Everett; 2nd prize, Gussie Fairbairn.

Class III—Miss G. Hampton— 1st prize, Fern Wannamaker; 2nd prize, Hazel Crawford.

Class IV—Mrs. Marling—1st prize, May Mahood; 2nd prize, Helen Watson.

Class V—Miss Hilliard—1st prize, Eric Morin; 2nd prize, Enith Wannamaker.

lass VII—Miss Graham—1st prize, Gwendolyn Simpson; 2nd prize, Ruth Crawford.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. Waldon

GERMANS NOT YET FEELING REAL PINCH

Food Situation, Though Bad, is Not Dangerous at Present.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION.—The general situation in Germany as regards supplies of all kinds is bad, but it is not immediately serious, reports of American intelligence officers show.

After a two weeks' investigation throughout the entire area occupied by the American forces, these officers reported that the food situation is not dangerous at the present time. They believe that within a short time, working people in the towns will begin to feel a real pinch.

Stocks now on hand, it is asserted, are sufficient to last until February 1 or 15, in the towns, while the farmers have been sufficiently foresighted to store their stocks until they have enough to last through the winter. Inasmuch as a greater part of the region is agricultural, conditions as a whole are fairly good. Many persons in the Moselle Valley —winegrowers— will be forced to buy foodstuffs

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course, if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1440 at age 21.

TALES OF THE V.C.

Sergt. Percy Clyde Stratton, Military Medal, Australians.

By LIEUT. J. P. LLOYD.

On the afternoon on the 12th of August, 1918, the 37th and 40th Battalions of the Australian Imperial Force attacked in the neighbourhood of Proyart, south of the Somme. The enterprise was of more than local importance because the long ridge east of the village of Proyart commanded the ground beyond the Somme. Any advance in the bend of the river at Etinehem must be preceded by the capture of the Proyart Ridge.

Our soldiers as they came out of Proyart towards the railway which skirts the ridge were swept by a terrible machine gun fire. Yet by 6 o'clock the 40th, on the right, were beyond the railway, and the 37th had reached it.

There was still stern fighting before them. Nests of snipers and machine guns lurked hidden here and there in the shell torn ground in front. The right company of the 37th Battalion were faced by no less than five of these strongholds, one 50 yards and four a hundred yards away. There was one post, too, upon the Chuignes road, and two more on the bare slopes of the Proyart Ridge.

One by one these strongholds were taken. The honour of taking the first of them fell to the 37th. Six or eight men of this battalion, leaping suddenly out of their trenches, ran shouting towards the nearest post. Some of them fell by the way, but the others reached the Germans, and killed them all with the bayonet. Yet they died in the moment of victory. As they turned to go back to their own lines, they were caught by a hail of bullets from the machine guns in the rear, and not a man of them escaped.

But vengeance was close at hand. Sergeant Stratton, of the left Company of the 40th, had seen what these brave men had done and how they had died. Pausing only to shout to some of his men to follow him, he climbed over the parapet. A corporal and two privates of his Company went after him into the storm of lead that drove in gusts across No Man's Land, but when they came to the nearest of the four remaining posts they saw its occupants, all dead, lying beside a silent gun and the Sergeant running towards the second post, firing his revolver as he ran.

The three men followed their leader, but the bullets were coming thicker than ever now. Before they reached their goal, the Corporal fell wounded and one of his companions was killed.

The Germans in the second post shared the fate of their fellows in the first. One of them charged down upon Sergeant Stratton with the bayonet, but the Australian was ready for him. Swerving to one side, he wrenched the rifle from his hands, and drove the bayonet home into the body of its late owner.

Meanwhile the tenants of the two remaining posts, thinking discretion the better part of valour, had abandoned their machine guns and fled. Our Lewis gunners did not miss this opportunity, and death overtook the fugitives before they had run far.

The two Australians took the change to regain their own lines. They raced for the shelter of the embankment with German bullets singing about their ears. The men of their company had seen what they had done, and as the pair of them leapt down into safety, the sound of a great cheer went up along the Australian trenches.

Later in the evening Sergt. Stratton with two volunteers went out to the scene of his triumph and brought in all the wounded under heavy fire.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat which Clogs Kidneys, then Back Hurts and Bladder Bothers You.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Vienna People Are in Sad State

Insufficient Food had made even the Children Wizened.

VIENNA, December 30. — The Department of Health has just issued a sensational report regarding the suffering of the Viennese since the bening of the war. Though people require from 2,500 to 5,500 food calories daily, the Vienna war rations (still in force and not always obtainable at that) yielded only 746 calories a day.

The result has been that a large number of persons have lost upwards of 38 pounds in the last four years. Even the wealthy lost an average of 28 pounds. Deaths rose appallingly, the city of Vienna alone registering 45,131 last year against 33,268 in 1914.

Every fourth death within the city boundaries is now due to tuberculosis which has assumed proportions that cause the doctors the gravest alarm. Although it is impossible to tell the number of the deaths due to starvation the report states that from 7 to 11 per cent. of the deaths this year have been due to underfeeding, but official reports of post-mortem examinaitions say that the percentage is much higher, ranging between 24 and 30 per cent.

The health of the children is causing great anxiety, for out of 56,800 examined during the year by the medical authorities, only 4,637 were found in a healthy condition. Their loss in weight is considerable, especially in children between 10 and 17 years of age whose average weight is only 77 pounds, whereas the normal average should be 95 pounds.

Moreover these children have not grown at all since the outbreak of the war with the result that the generation of future mothers and fathers consists largely of stunted adolescents, with prematurely old faces, pallid and hollow-eyed.

Wizened Children.

Vienna's industrial districts are filled with undersized, odd looking youngsters who never were young. Their wizened appearance is probably also due to all-night vigils outside the meat markets and other food stores, where they waited in the worst weather on empty stomachs, with insufficient clothing and with holes in their boots.

Another medical survey shows that out of every 1,000 children, 491 suffer from general debility, 137 from anaemia, 90 from catarrh of the lungs, 76 from bronchitis, 23 from heart disease, and 182 from malnutrition.

The State sick fund for the city of Vienna reports that the number of patients last year was 74,600 compared with 54,200 in 1914. The majority of these cases were caused by stomach and intestinal disorders, owing to insufficient food.

In the city's asylum for the aged poor, the staple diet is and has for a long time been cabbage and turnips, the latter of the quality formerly given to cattle, but promoted during the war to be food for human beings.

THE EXCEPTION.

(By Minna Irving.)

Everybody's doing it—the big and little kings,
The princelets and the dukelets and embryo kaiserlings;
E'en Enver Pacha's grabbed some gold and shot the chutes that run
From European palaces into oblivion.
The fad has crossed the water, and our own great McAdoo
Has caught the trend of fashion and has abdicated, too;
And Ryan, also, growing tired of aerial affairs,
Will soon return to issuing his gilt-edged copper shares.

I would not be a bit surprised to see the sun resign
His lighting contract, and the moon and stars refuse to shine,
For Dr. Harry Garfield, in a manner most polite,
Has signified his wish to leave his throne of anthracite;
And we can eat until our belts once more our middles fit,
For Herbert Hoover—so they say—has also up and quit.
George Creel and Bruce Bielaski their notice, too, are giving,
Lo! everybody abdicates but old Hi Costa Living

HANDLED 75,000 TONS OF BEETS AT CHATHAM

CHATHAM, January 3. — The Dominion Sugar Company plant here has shut down after a good run with sugar beets. Some 75,000 tons of beets were sliced. Owing to the wet weather a large quantity of beets which would have come here will now be sent to the plant in Wallaceburg. The local plant will start operations next week with raw cane sugar. The officials of the company express themselves as well pleased with the conditions this year.

Rescuers Fight With Raging Seas in Rescue Work Off Fire Island

Two Hundred Helpless Wounded American Soldiers Still Aboard Wrecked Transport, Together With Crew of 466.

"ALL'S WELL

(Special to The Examiner.)

FIRE ISLAND, Jan. 4.—Hidden from sight of those on shore by a blinding blizzard, which came whooping out of the northeast on the wings of a gale, the transport "Northern Pacific" was severely hammered by a rising sea this morning. Two hundred helpless wounded American soldiers and the crew of 466 were still aboard.

During occasional lapses in the winds' intensity, sounds on the stricken troopship could be faintly heard above the breakers' roar. The cry of "alls well" from the watch, the note of the ship's bell coming as if from a great distance, told the watchers ashore that the vessel was still holding out.

Those rescued yesterday included every woman aboard the Northern Pacific and the larger part of the men who were either unwounded or who had sufficiently recovered to be classified as "walking cases." Many were brought ashore through the surf by means either of the breeches buoy or of a lifeboat rigged so as to be operated as a "boat trolley" by cables stretched between the ship and the storm beaten shore. Before the trolley device was placed in operation, however, several boatloads were rowed ashore by the guards in their lifeboats, though at the most imminent peril to passengers and crew.

Hurled Into Breakers.

Twice the trolley device, through the heavy seas, caused the whip cables to foul the gunwale of the craft, overturning it and cast its ten or twelve passengers into the pounding breakers. Rescuers rushed into the surf from the shore and all were saved, though first aid and artificial respiration had to be resorted to in the cases of some of those longest submerged.

The work of taking off the refugees was abandoned only at nightfall and will be resumed at daybreak. To attempt to land any of the stretcher cases by the methods employed was regarded as wholly impracticable.

Barrels of oil were broached and spread over the seas in the hope of calming the water and thus making to-day's task of transfer less dangerous.

Women Taken Off First.

When the work of rescue began, about ten o'clock yesterday morning, the guards at first employed only their lifeboat, rowing it out through the surf to the beached ship, which lay then not more than two hundred wards from the shore line of Fire Island. The first who were thus brought ashore were the seventeen women, all Red Cross nurses returning home from their overseas duties. Thus the life savers maintained the time honoured tradition of the sea. There were no children on board the transport, but the women those first assured of safety.

Eager to Help in Rescue.

While one of these midair passages through the spray was in progress about two o'clock the lee whip caught on the stern of the liftboat, overturning it and tipping its load into the sea at a point about a hundred yards from the beach, where scores of willing helpers were watching the venture.

A shout of alarm was raised as the forms were seen struggling in the surf and the strong undertow, which was rapidly sweeping its victims down the coast.

Two of those who had been thrown out rose to the surface under the overturned boat and their position was most precarious.

A third volunteer who lost no time in dashing into the breakers to drag out the foundering men when the boat overturned was Bert Collins, a United States seaman attached to the U-boat chasers base at New London, Conn. He saved one of the men, but, like Vanderveer, made light of his exploit. "Oh, I just jumped in to pull some guy out," said the latter when he was asked about his deed. "I don't know who he was." All the rescuers were tenderly cared for by the nurses and physicians, who were present in force to make themselves useful.

Cigarettes and Whiskey.

To practically every man, as he was brought ashore from the stranded transport, cigarettes and whiskey were tendered by willing hands. Most of the men accepted the courtesy gratefully. But there was one exception. Father J. R. O'Mahoney, whose residence is in New York, but who is the chaplain of the Twenty-sixth infantry, came across the vertex between ship and shore chilled and wet from the flying spray. He held up his hands in expostulation when cigarettes were tendered, but smilingly accepted a swallow of spirit when a flask was extended. "That is different," he said with a smile.

Seaplane Low Over Ship.

The hundreds imprisoned aboard the grounded ship found a new diversion yesterday when Lieutenant Commander N. B. Chase, from the Naval

SUBMARINES LOCATED BY THE COMMISSION.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—One hundred and seventy submarines, all under construction, were found when the Inter-Allied Naval Commission visited Germany. These U-boats will be turned over to the Allies. Germany's newest battleship, Baden, will be surrendered at a British port within a few days. The Baden is a battleship of the very latest type. It has a displacement of 28,000 tons.

Wood Supply in Peterboro

Prices Paid for Wood Sold at Cost in Towns Like Guelph.

The cost of handling wood often exceeds the cost of cutting it into cordwood, and the original purchase price of the timber lot. Peterborough, together with many other centres, has had more than one opportunity to purchase cordwood at from five dollars a cord and upwards. Even at the low cost of five dollars a cord the city could not ship it in and handling for anythinug less than twelve or fourteen dollars a cord according to the location of the wood. It is this factor that has prevented the city from securing a larger wood supply.

Situation In Guelph.

The City of Guelph has had a similar experience. They were permitted by the Government to secure certain supplies of wood from Algonquin Park at cost.

The wood was handled at cost without profit to anybody and sold to the citizens of Guelph at the following schedule of prices:

4 ft. wood, per cord, delivered, $13.50.

4 ft. wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $7.15.

16 in. wood, per cord, delivered, $14.50.

16 in. wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $7.90.

12 in. wood, per cord, delivered, $14.75.

12 in wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $8.15.

The above prices apply only to wood which is ordered so that it can be delivered from the cars.

THE PEACE SETTLEMENT

British Ambassador Reading Will Probably Return to America With Wilson.

WILSON IN ITALY

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — British Ambassador Reading will probably return to America with President Wilson, according to information reaching the State Department to-day.

This fact is regarded as quite important, since it was reported when Lord Reading returned home several months ago he and the President differed vastly on the war aims or peace terms.

That he and the President should return at the same time is regarded as a very sure evidence of British American agreement at the present time. President Wilson's visit to London is deemed here to have swept aside any differences of viewpoint arising between the two nations, and to have made them a unit in peace terms at the forthcoming Versailles session.

It is felt that the French Premier's recent statement favouring the balance of power idea does not indicate in reality, an essential obstacle to the peace plans. It is believed that French politics prompted his statement at a time when his opponents were seeking to drive him into the open. France will be for the League of Nations at the proper time, it is said.

Italian Visit.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Jan. 4.— The visit of President Wilson to Pope Benedict at the Vatican to-day was regarded as one of the most important events of the President's Italian visit. It was believed that a clear understanding would be reached regarding the church's attitude toward the vital principles of the peace settlement.

Previous to his audience with the Pope, the President conferred with Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, regarding certain angles of political subjects that were later taken up with the Pontiff.

The President went to the Vatican direct from the American Embassy, where he had lunched with Ambassador Page. This was in deference to the peculiar relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal, which made it desirable that the President should proceed to the Vatican from America rather than Italian territory. The Embassy, of course, is regarded as being on American soil.

Conferences with Premier Orlando and other Italian statesmen were scheduled for the President after his return from the Vatican.

The Conditions Are Terrible

British Prisoners of War in Germany Dying Off Rapidly From Influenza.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The terrible conditions existing in the prisoners' camp at Pachim, Mecklenburg, are described by Sefton Deimer, the Daily Mail's special correspondent in Berlin, who visited the camp. He says: "The prisoners, hourly waiting to go to Stettin for the voyage home, are dying off rapidly from influenza. The German doctor leaves the camp at 6 o'clock every evening and locks his medicine cupboard before he goes. The prisoners had a terrible Christmas fighting influenza with their bare hands, so to say. On the day after Christmas the British were asked to furnish a burying party and found 17 dead men lying as they had been flung into the mortuary. All had been stripped, even of their shirts, and were unwashed, the sanitation servants having gone to Berlin for the holiday."

The Withdrawal of Japanese Troops in Siberia Is Bitterly Deplored.

LACK OF HARMONY

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 4. The announcement that 24,000 Japanese troops will withdraw from Siberia is reported by a Tokio despatch to the Express, quoting an official statement issued by the Japanese War Office on Dec. 27. The statement, according to the despatch, says that Japan intends to maintain henceforth only the smallest possible forces in Siberia. "Public opinion here," says the despatch, "deplores the withdrawal. Allied observers, Americans as well as British, speak bitterly of the intervention as being, relatively failure, owing to disunity among the Allies and their mutual jealousies."

LABOUR MEN CURIOUS ABOUT ORIGIN OF THE MURRAY TECHNICALITY

Labour men are not alarmed by the statement in the Review last nigh that Mr. Murray is likely to be debarred by a technicality," and prevented from taking his seat in the Council to which he ratepayers have elected him. The technicality of paying 25 cents a year to the city for the rent of a strip of land on which his fence is erected is explained in a letter from Alderman-Elect Murray in another column. Workingmen allege that for years past some aldermen and mayor's have occupied the city's land for which they paid rent and there was never an effort to disqualify them. They are also somewhat curious to learn origin of this manoeuvre which if successful would either require a new election or automatically advance Mr. A. H. Stratton from the eleventh to the tenth position.

It is freely stated that some person having knowledge of what the Labour men declare to be an absurd technicality has lost no time in taking advantage of it. Mr. Murray's formal lease has been standing for several years. It has been stated that this flaw was known before the election, but was probably deemed unnecessary for use because the up-town electors did not concede the Labour men a "look-in" at the polls.

Mr. Murray can cancel he lease by removing the fence, and thus circumvent the difficulty.

Visit Concludes This Evening

Another Dinner Will Wind Up Wilson's Visit to Rome.

(United Press.)
(By Robt. J. Bender.)

ROME, January 4. — President Wilson's strategy in driving straight to the heart of the Balkan situation was discussed by the people and the politicians alike to-day. It has promoted a freedom of expression that is expected to go far toward clarifying the relations of Italy and the new Slavic states, which have been somewhat tense of late.

The President's statement in his speech before the Chamber of Deputies yesterday evening that the Balkan people must now be independent, was believed to be a broad hint that Italo-Slavic differences must be adjusted and that Italy must join the other associated powers in promoting the establishment of a strong Slavic nation.

It is understood that there has been something approaching a cabinet crisis in Italy in regard to this very matter, the conflict of Italian and Slavic aspirations. Some of the Italian newspapers had predicted that Wilson's visit and his resultant attitude towards the trans-Adriatic political tangle, would precipitate the crisis.

The President visited historical spots to-day and laid wreaths on the tombs of Emmanuel II., and King Humbert. He was shown about the Pantheon and the Roman Forum, and went to the Academy Liucei.

After his audience with Pope Benedict the President received a delegation of Protestant bodies.

During the afternoon he conferred with with Premier Orlando, Cabinet members, and other Italian leaders. The formal programme of his visit in Rome is to close to-night with a dinner at the Quirinal.

A JOB FOR HINDENBURG

Has Been Invited to Lead a Volunteer Force Against the Poles in Posen.

PROTEST LODGED

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 4.—Berlin advices state that Polish troops have complete control of Posen. The despatch stated that Prussian Minister Ernst had conferred with some Polish delegates, and that the latter had agreed that no attempt would be made to sever the province of Posen from Prussia before the matter could be taken up at the peace conference.

It is not known whether these delegates had sufficient authority to effect an understanding by which the Polish union would be called off. Ernst is said to have admitted, after the conference, that the eastern portion of Posen province is in the hands of the Poles.

Volunteer Force.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Berlin will request Hindenburg to lead a German volunteer force against the Poles in Posen and revolutionary elements in Silesia, according to diplomatic advices to-day.

Germany objects to the Silesian manoeuvres on the ground that they are directed by the Czecho-Slovaks and the Poles and to the proposed Polish elections in Posen as in violation to the armistice, it was held. Cables indicated that Berlin has lodged protests in both matters with the United States and has warned the Entente that she will be compelled to protect herself unless Paris, London and Washington intervenes.

Getting Alarmed.

Special to The Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 4.— The Berlin Vossische Zeitung, alarmed at Bolshevik "inhuman cruelties," hints that a union will be effected between the Germans and the British to oppose the advance of the Soviet army toward the Baltic.

Children Killed.

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Jan. 4.—Several children parading at Posen in honour of Ignace Jan Paderewski, were killed when the Germans fired upon them with machine guns, it was reported here to-day.

Five soft-nosed bullets entered the room where Paderewski sat, but he was uninjured. He arrived here to-day with Col. Wade of the British army.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3RD, 1918.

SUPPORT THE COUNCIL.

As might be expected, all citizens of Peterborough are not pleased with the new council that has just been elected, and as might also be expected much of the complaint that is heard comes from electors who failed to register their votes on Wednesday. But wherever the dissatisfaction has its source, it is a feeling that should not exist in ePterborough. There is neither commonsense nor British fair play in condemning the Aldermanic Board before they have taken office, and before they have had a chance to show what they can do. There should be with a council composed to a great extent of new blood, an enrichment in ideas and plans brought forward. Not all of these of course are likely to prove feasible, but at the least they will be a sign of progress.

Give the new board a chance. The present is not the time for criticism or complaint. If the new council fails to measure up to its responsibilities, there may be occasion for grumbling. But it is the present duty of every citizen to fall in behind the new council and see to it that they do not fail—at least that they do not fail because of lack of support from their fellow citizens. The men that have been elected were put there by the electors ;the responsibility of the latter towards their civic duties should not end with their marking of a ballot.

THE NEW RATES.

Neither returned soldiers or the general public are likely to appreciate the new order issued by the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association, at the request of the Dominion Railway War Board, and which cancells all special privileges and reduced fares. The object of the order is to conserve rolling stock so that as many cars as possible can be diverted to the task of bringing the returning soldiers from the seaboard. It is thought that the elimination of club rates, such as have been given in the case of parties of ten or more will reduce the amount of travelling, although hockey clubs and other such organizations will have to use the trains as much as ever ,and the new order will not prevent them from travelling but will only make the operation more expensive.

One part of the order that will cause regret is that referring to soldiers, who for the past two years have been given a single fare rate on the Canadian railways to visit their homes during leave of absence from duty. This privilege is now cancelled and all soldiers will have to pay full fare.

THE SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Peterboro which ha snot failed in any patriotic campaign is expected to maintain its reputation in the Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army this month. The cause is in every way a most worthy one and in spite of the cessation of hostilities, the need is great for there is a vast amount of work to be done by the Army among Canada's soldiers and every cent of the million dollars Canada is asked to provide will be required. No war work has met with such general approval as that carried on by the Salvation Army. Returned soldiers are a unit in endorsing the Army's activities and it is worthy of note that the Salvation Army, although among the first in the field is the last to appeal for funds. Peterboro's share of the amount asked for from Canada should be readily forthcoming, and the cause is commended to citizens generally for their support and assistance.

Welfare work among Canadian soldiers and sailors is not completed because the fighting is stopped. If this work should end the demobilization would become demoralization and the fact stands us in the face that now the best effort has yet to be put forth, not so much to keep up the morale as to preserve the morality. Our soldier boys have yet a long siege before them, and it must be remembered that it took more than two years to demobilize after the Franco Prussian war, 18 months to disband the armies in the Turko-Russian war and 15 months after the Russo-Japanese, and it may require longer than that to disband our great armies in this the ending of the greatest war of all times and the morale of our men must be kept while they are in comparative idleness. With a big heart and hands outstretched the Salvation Army stands ready to continue to do her share of helping Canada's sons during these trying days with the many gifts which will come out of the generosity of the people in the Dominion.

The Red Shield Drive Campaign will open January 19th, 1919, the objective for the Dominion will be one million dollars, and every cent will go towards the welfare of Canada's fighting force in the demobilization of the army in the two next years, in the care for soldiers' widows and orphans, in establishing huts and hostels, where the need still remains especialy in Siberia and many other places.

AID FOR THE VETERAN.

In an interesting article on the official handling of the returned soldier repatriation problem, the Ottawa Citizen urges the elimination of red tape as much as possible—a plea that will be enthusiastically echoed by the men coming back from overseas. Says the Citizen:

Every man will naturally want to spend a few days looking round, enjoying the novelty of being in civilian clothes again, with feelings of relief on being restored to civil home life in Canada. The careful man will let very little time elapse, however, before setting out to find employment for himself. He will have been told about the department of civil re-establishment, a federal government department created especially to be of service to him during the time when he is getting back to steady employment in private enterprise or civil industry. A provincial government organization, called the Returned Soldiers' Commission, will also possibly have a representative in every city and town. It has been decided between the federal and provincial authorities that the returned men should first call for a talk over general plans, and to get in totich with the federal employment service and other helpful opportunities, through the Provincial Returned Soldiers' Commission.

The duties of the Provincial Commission's representative would seem to be merely to introduce the repatriated citizen—he should no longer be called a "returned soldier"—to the civil re-establishment office. Provided the provincial official does not humbug the applicant for information, with forms to be filled in, and too many official questions to be answered, but does with tact, and informally, the part of welcoming him on behalf of the province, the Returned Soldiers' Commission can be of real help. But there should be no fifth wheels to the coach. The representative of the Provincial Commission should be, whenever possible, in the same office building as the civil re-establishment representatives and the employment service bureau.

The returned man must be protected from too much officialdom, too much cross-questioning and form-filling. He should not have to go to a Provincial Commission office in one part of the city, merely to be passed on after being put through a list of questions, filling in applications and the like, to go through the same performance at a civil re-establishment and employment office in another part of the city. The returned man is liable to be feeling "fed up" with formalities, and far from being in the mood for more, even before he sets out to interview the provincial agents of the Returned Soldiers' Commission and the federal representatives of the civil re-establishment department in the local employment office.

The representative of the department of civil re-establishment in the employment office, or labour bureau, has an important function to perform. There will be employment offices probably in every city of 10,000 or more population, and in smaller towns if the need warrants it. The employment offices are to be state-controlled, organized by the province, but the federal government will exercise the administration of the employment offices by virtue of contributing half the cost of their establishment and upkeep from the federal treasury.

The employment offices are being organized to serve unemployed workpeople of every class in the community; but, as everyone will approve, first attention will be given to the applicant who has served during the war with the Canadian expeditionary force. It is for this special purpose that an office in every labour bureau will be maintained by the department of civil re-establishment. Wherever possible, the agent in charge of the civil re-establishment office will be himself a returned man.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

With an army of militant Poles heading towards Berlin, the Germans will have difficulty in believing the war is over.

The Northland probe should be deep and exhaustive. Simple justice to our returning men demands that this shall be the case.

The Germans in Berlin tangoed the New Year in. The allies will teach them some new steps at the peace conference.

The Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army will soon be launched. It should receive hearty support.

Rescuers Fight With Raging Sea

Air Station at Bayshore, flew a seaplane over and around the transport, winging very close to the ship. After looking her over he sped back inland.

Canteens on Beach.

At dozens of points along the beach they established canteens, preparing hot coffee and sandwiches for the rescuers and the survivors as fast as they were landed.

For hours and hours the women kept up this work, pausing for no more substantial food than sandwiches and coffee, without ever seeming to grow tired, nor did they grow excited or scream when the two boats capsized, throwing soldiers and coastguards into the roaring waves. Some in oilskins, some in the uniforms of the various Red Cross auxiliaries to which they belonged, the women laboured indefatigably in the downpour, unmindful of the penetrating wind that chilled to the bone.

These women had made the not unperilous trip across the Great South Bay, despite the exhortations of boatmen to stay on the mainland, for that body of water was almost as rough as the ocean. Heavy seas staggered the small craft used on the bay and drenched most of the women even before they took up their long vigil on the island.

In the second lines, as it were, at Bay Shore, hundreds more made ready for whatever might happen. The streets of the town were filled with motor ambulances, some belonging to the Red Cross Motor Corps, under Dr. Dorothy Smyley, others to the Motor Corps of America, under Major Helen Bastedo. As fast as boatloads of survivors reached the Ocean avenue pier the men were taken to the Naval Aero Station for warm clothing, food and sleeping quarters. The station will accommodate 1,500 of them.

Army Corps men, a few Red Cross workers, the coast guards, the United Press correspondent, and one other newspaper man, were the only persons to remain here during the night, due to the danger of food supplies being cut off by the storm. Rescue vessels stood by, but they were not visible, and even the powerful Fire Island light could not be seen at a distance of a mile.

Modifies Ban On Hun Trade

Germany Will Supply Fuel and Get Raw Materials in Return.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(British Wireless Service). — German appeals against suspension by the Allies of intercourse between the part of German territory occupied by the Allied armies and the rest of Germany have been taken into consideration at the headquarters of Marshal Foch at Luxemburg. A German delegation has been received at the Marshal's headquarters and has been informed that as far as military exigencies permit the appeals have been granted.

According to an arrangement reached with the German Government, the Germans bind themselves to furnish to the occupied zone during the armistice as much fuel as was sent there in the third quarter of 1918 and also such machinery and spare parts as may be required by industries in the occupied region. In return the Allies will appoint a commissioner to arrange for certain quantities of raw materials to be sent across the Rhine into Germany. This will prevent unemployment which otherwise might have resulted—to take one example—in the iron smelting district of Essen and Dortmund, whose supply of iron ore from the Lorraine and Saar region had been suspended since the armistice. In addition the British military governor at Cologne announces that beginning on January 1 importations of foodstuffs, raw materials and expressly authorized manufactured articles from unoccupied Germany will be permitted into the territory occupied by the British troops.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

Pursuant to an order of the supreme Court of Ontario, made in the matter of the above mentioned estate there will be offered for sale by public auction, in one parcel, with the approbation of the Master-in-Ordinary, by Chas. M. Henderson, auctioneer, at 128 King Street, Toronto, at twelve o'clock noon on Wednesday, the 15th day of January, 1919.

All and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the Township of Burleigh, in the County of Peterboro, in the Porvince of Ontario, being composed of the west part of Island No. 22, in Stoney Lake, in the said township of Burleigh, as shown on plan of island in the river of Otonabee and its lakes, made by J. J. Haslett, P.L.S., and filed in the department of Indian Affairs, the said west part being divided from the east part of the said island by a narrow shannel, not shown on the said plan, such channel having been formed by rising water of the lake since survey was made.

The said island is known as "Pinehurst."

The said island is about one-half mile from the Juniper Island Post Office and about two and one-half miles from Burleigh Falls.

On the island is said to be erected a frame cottage.

The property will be offered for sale subject to a reserved bid fixed by the said Master. The purchaser shall pay ten per cent of his purchase money on the day of sale to the vendors or their solicitors and the remainder thereof within 30 days thereafter, into court, to the credit of this matter without interest.

The vendors shall not be required to furnish any abstract of title, and to produce only such deeds, copies thereof, or evidences of title as are in their possession. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of sale of the court.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had from Messrs. Davidson & Folinsbee, Solicitors, 703 Lumsden Building, Toronto, or from Guardian Trust Company, Limited, Administrator of the Estate of William Andrews Collins, deceased.

Dated at Toronto, this 23rd day of December, 1918.

Geo. O. Alcorn.
Master-in-Ordinary.

Why Do We Drink Milk?

Because it supplies building material for the bones, teeth and muscles; it keeps the heart beating regularly; it strengthens the nerves and every other part of the body. It has a growing force which makes weak bodies grow into strong ones.

WOULD OTHER FOOD DO AS WELL?

No other food could be used in its place.
No other one food contains as many of the various growing materials needed by children.
No other one food supplies enough building material for bones and teeth.

HOW MUCH MILK?

Every child ought to have at least one quart of milk a day because it is so easily built up into body tissue.
Milk is also an excellent food for adults. It might take the place of some meat.
At least a cup of milk per adult per day should be used in the food or taken as a beverage.
The food value of the milk is the same whether the milk is taken in cooked foods or as a beverage.
Coffee and tea have no food value.
They are harmful for growing children because they dull the appetite so that the children FEEL satisfied before all the necessary growing material has been supplied.
If milk and sugar are used in the tea and coffee, some food value would be received, but the coffee and tea are not good for growing muscles and nerves.
Milk is the most economical food we have, costing in proportion to food value, less than one-half the amount paid for meat, eggs, chicken, fish, etc.

WHAT IS SAFE MILK?

Ordinary market milk is responsible for more sickness and death than most people think.
There is only one method by which these dangers can be eliminated from our milk supply—that is, SCIENTIFIC PASTEURIZATION.
Insure the health of your baby and your family by ordering our Pasteurized Milk for 1919.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Makes a Few Suggestions for Benefit of Labour

Sir: It is so important that we should proceed with all speed to reconstruction after the war and to a return to the works of peace that I suppose no excuse is needed for taking up your space and the attention of the public regarding it. Indeed, in view of the unrest and growing need of development in the relations of Labour and Industry, it is prudent to delay not an hour. This idea is rapidly becoming manifest everywhere. The U. S. and Great Britain have jumped to the front in a way that would startle the old fogeyism of this young country. We must all get tuned up to the proper key and degree of knowledge of requirements and then we may proceed with confidence and despatch. What then do I wish to call your attention to? To the creed adopted at the recent conference of practically all the manufacturers of the U. S. It was the one thing done at the conference, the details being left to the District Councils throughout the nation and to the U. S. National Chamber of Commerce at Washington. From this creed Labour will see what Capital and the Employer proposes as the basis of the coming solidarity. It is as follows:

"I believe that labour and capital are partners, not enemies; that their interests are common interests, not opposed, and that neither can attain the fullest measure of prosperity at the expense of the other, but only in association with the other.

"2. I believe that the community is an essential party to industry and that it should have adequate representation with the other parties.

"I believe that the purpose of industry is quite as much to advance social well-being as material well-being and that in the pursuit of that pursuit the interests of the community should be carefully considered, the well-being of the employees as respects living and working conditions should be fully guarded, management should be adequately recognized and capital should be justly compensated, and that failure in any of these particulars means loss to all four.

"4. I believe that every man is entitled to an opportunity to earn a living, to fair wages, to reasonable hours of work and proper working conditions, to a decent home, to the opportunity to play, to learn, to worship and to love, as well as to toil, and that the responsibility rests as heavily upon industry as upon government or society, to see that these conditions and opportunities prevail.

"5. I believe that industry, efficiency and initiative, wherever found, should be encouraged and adequately rewarded, and that indolence and restriction of production should be discountenanced.

"6. I believe that the provision of adequate means of uncovering grievances and promptly adjusting them is of fundamental importance to the successful conduct of industry.

"7. I believe that the most potent measure in bringing about industrial harmony and prosperity is adequate representation of the parties in interest; that existing forms of representation should be carefully studied and availed of in so far as they may be found to have merit and are adaptable to the peculiar conditions in the various industries.

"8. I believe that the most effective structure of representation is that which is built from the bottom up, which includes all employees, and starting with the election of representatives in each industrial plant, the formation of joint works' committees, of joint district councils, and annual joint conferences of all the parties in interest in a single industrial corporatio, can be extended to include all plants in the same industry, all industries in a community, in a nation, and in the various nations.

"9. I believe that the application of right principles never fails to effect right relations; that the letter killeth and the spirit maketh alive; that forms are wholly secondary while attitude and spirit are all imporant, and that only as the parties in industry are animated by the spirit of fair play, justice to all and brotherhood, will any plans which they may mutually work out succeed.

"10. I believe that that man renders the greatest social service who so co-operates in the organization of industry as to afford to the largest number of men the greatest opportunity for self development and the enjoyment by every man of those benefits which his own work adds to the worth of civilization.

Now Labour may rely upon it that this creed will be at the back of Mr. Carvel's head in his talk next Wednesday night. If Labour knows this and has absorbed it, it can ask Mr. Carvel what the government proposes to do about it, and thus possibly we may do our bit towards getting on into a settled stride for the future.

If I were Labour in Peterboro I would interview Mr. Carvel when he comes here and have a chat with him about the best ways and means of providing for the future. It would give me great pelasure to facilitate the matter if the city will allow us to cut into the proposed programme so far. Presenting views to two ministers prior to the session ought to produce some effect and at a most important juncture.

November Power Bill in Peterboro Was the Highest in History

Milling Industries in City Will Consume More Power.

Due to the rush of the munition factories to complete the contracts now on hand the power bill for November was the highest in the history of the city. In that month 4,276 horsepower was used, while the highest previous record was for January, 1917, when 3,967 was used. With the closing of the munition plants the rate dropped 1,000 horse-power per month, but this is already being taken up by the flour industry which will use at least 600 horse-power a month. Mr. H. O. Fiske, manager of the Utilities Commission, expects conditions to come back to normal by summer.

FIRE ISLAND BEACH HAS LONG BEEN NEMESIS OF SEA CAPTAINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Nemesis of the sea-captain since the days of the four-masted frigate, Fire Island beach and the entire south shore of Long Island has been the graveyard of many steamships as they hugged close to her shores, picking their way through a dense fog into New York Harbour by the tinkle of her submarine bells.

Before submarine bells made their appearance on the Atlantic seaboard messages of danger were conveyed to all seamen by fires built on the Long Island shores, principally in the vicinity of Fire Island, whence comes its name. The fires as signals first came into vogue during the war of 1812 and were continued until improved devices for signalling were evolved. The grounding of the troopship Northern Pacific recalls that the Prinzess Irene, of the North German Lloyd Line, also ran up on Fire Island beach early on the morning of April 6, 1911. There were 1,724 passengers aboard the vessel, but all were rescued by other steamships which went to her assistance.

Fire Island beach more recently was the scene of the sinking of the United States destroyer San Diego on July 19 last, with the loss of six lives. A United States court of inquiry since has decreed the destroyer was sunk by a mine, banishing a previous contention she had been sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine.

Of the numerous steamships and sailing vessels which have run aground on the south Long Island shore during the last decade more than seventy-five per cent. of them were again floated. Among those which suffered total destruction was notably the Baroness, a whaleback barge, which sank off Fire Island on the night of November 10, 1910, with the loss of six lives.

The Baroness was making her way from Newport News, Va., to Providence, L.I., when she was caught in a severe storm. Nestling in close to shore, it is believed, she hit a rock, which stove a hole in her side. She sank with her crew of six men before help could reach her.

Again on May 2, 1908, the four-masted steamship Peter Rickmers went aground and sank off Fire Island. Her crew, however, fared better than that of the Baroness, because they were able to get away in small boats and landed on Long Island near Point o' Woods.

ORANGES TO COME DOWN.

Ottawa Investigates High Prices and Finds No Ground For Action.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The cost of living branch recently made an investigation into the orange market and reports that the chief cause for high prices having been removed, prices during the succeeding months should be decidedly lower. While there are instances of large profits per case handled, there are also instances of loss. Average profits were not so great for the abnormal conditions as to warrant any action against the firms showing apparently large profits.

Now, however, that normal market conditions are restored with the main California crop upon the market, competition should not longer be resrtricted, and the dealers' margins have declined from the former amounts. Nevertheless, we deem it advisable to assure ourselves that profits throughout the winter are reasonable, and for this purpose shall continue our investigations.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS OVERCOME BY SAFE METHOD

Worry, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia.

Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First the blood circulation must be improved:

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes the irritation, because it removes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into overworked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To keep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched, a boon to the sleepless—sold in 50c boxes, six for $2.50 at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Blame Ourselves, Not the Almighty, For Epidemics

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., Punctures an Ancient Belief as to Disease Causes—Pay Wife as Much as Her Husband.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—"I regret to say that the ancient belief that epidemics of disease were visitations from the Almighty has been handed down from generation to generation until to-day many still believe it. To my mind nothing could be more libelous on God than that belief. Let us rather place the blame where it belongs—on ourselves," said Dr. Charles Hastings, city Medical Health Officer, in an address to the members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the King Edward Hotel yesterday.

Continuing on the epidemics and their causes, the doctor regretted the fact that to-day in the Christian burial service the lines "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away" were still used.

"Many times have I thought where the deceased had died from some epidemic that proper care on the part of the authorities might have prevented that it should have read, 'The Lord gave and the municipality hath taken away.'"

Pure Milk, Pure Water.

Speaking of the necessity of a pure water and milk supply for any city, the doctor declared that any case of typhoid fever that had occurred in Toronto during the last five years at least was not traceable to the water supply, which was very pure. The city water was tested six times every twenty-four hours by an expert right out of the taps.

Human hands were the most frequent carriers of disease, and there was great truth in the ancient proverb, "To eat food with unwashed hands, defileth the man."

The doctor then dwelt on the regulations regarding the milk supply, and told how it was possible now to test the milk for barnyard contamination without actually visiting the farms. Barnyard cleanliness plus pasteurizing would guarantee a pure milk supply, and not a quart of milk was to-day sold in Toronto that was not subjected to these requirements and tests.

Give Child a Chance.

Referring to the protection that ought to be given every mother in poor circumstanecs, with her husband incapacitated, he thought it deplorable that she could not obtain work at the same wages and remuneration that her husband or any man would receive, though she might be the breadwinner of the home. Money played altogether too much part in the Governments of to-day, even in the democracies of Britain and the United States.

"I don't know of any system of Socialism existing to-day that does not contain enough anarchy to make it unsafe. But perhaps when all are thrown into the melting pot we will eventually have a true democracy where every child will at least have an opportunity to develop as it should."

In conclusion the doctor stated that it was highly creditable to the manufacturers of Toronto that they had always co-operated fully with the Board of Health in making conditions healthier for their employees.

Robert Shaw is Once More Elected Reeve of Harvey

Contests in Some of the Townships on Monday—Reeve Walsh of Donro Has Retired and Reeve Brown of Asphodel is Opposed.

ELECTIONS ON MONDAY

Some of the Reeves of Peterborough's townships have an election on their hands for Monday. In Dummer C. J. Darling is opposing Reeve Albert Webster, and in Asphodel Andrew Quinlan is a contestant against Max Brown. Reeve Michael Walsh of Donro has resigned, and Martin Coughlin was elected by acclamation to succeed him. In Harvey township Mr. Ingram resigned, and Robert Shaw was elected by acclamation. Mr. Shaw has had long experience in municipal experience, and will be welcomed back into the County Council fold. Mr. Ingram made a capable representative of Harvey, and held a high place in the opinions of his colleagues of the County Council. W. E. Griffith has been re-elected Reeve of Belmont by acclamation, but Reeve Matheson of Havelock is opposed by W. T. Curtis.

MR. ROBERT SHAW

Is again elected Reeve of Harvey Township, succeeding Mr. Ingram, who has retired.

Close home, Harold B. Rye is running against Reeve John McIntosh in North Monaghan.

Stewards Served Christmas Pudding With Their Hands

Soldiers Testified That Food on the Transport "Northland" Was Much Worse Than in France—Scarcity of Drinking Water, and Stewards Were Dirty.

DISHES UNCLEAN TOO

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Lieut. Vantelet, of the Royal Canadian Field Artillery, for six months in France and wounded at Lens, was the first witness at the Northland inquiry this afternoon. He had been in charge of a Montreal party of returning men, he said, were supposed to clean the vessel, his men being located on the decks below C.

He was in charge personally of D section, and it was his duty to look after mess parades, etc. The men, he said, were supposed to clean quarters, supply fatigues to bring food, and to wash dishes.

"The stewards were supposed to do what they could and to be assisted by the men on fatigue. The men were responsible for cleaning up dishes and the stewards were expected to help to the best of their ability."

The orderly officer was supposed to inspect quarters every day.

Complaints Made.

Witness had recieved complaints from time to time as to the extent of the rations. "I found that when they got their full rations they were about the same as for troops in training, but the stewards at times served the first men too freely, and had to go back to the galley for more. When they got back in many cases the men had left. The galley was amidships, and it took time to bring it down for the second table. The men got tired waiting. In the nature of the arrangements this could not very well be avoided. This difficlty occurred four or five times, mostly at dinner."

The quality of the food was generally good, though the eggs were not too fresh.

With regard to the steward service he said that at first men were detailed to assist but that later volunteers were called for and this proved more satisfactory.

The men in the galley, he said, always claimed that the quantity of food sent down at first was the full ration for that number of men.

There were complaints about ventilation but these complaints were largely due to the fact that owing to stormy weather portholes had to be closed.

As to Selling Food.

He had heard that stewards were selling food. An order was thereafter read to the troops on parade requesting them not to purchase food from the stewards.

Everybody had been disappointed when they found they could not land on Christmas Day. This disappointment found vent in grumbling. The Christmas dinner given to the men was not a tip top Christmas dinner. There was a good dinner for them had they got on the deck, but they couldn't.

"What kind of a dinner did the officers get?" "Very good."

"Was there any complaints about the ship being verminous?"

"Only this, that the medical officers made an inspection and several of the men were found to be verminous."

Witness stated that at first the officers and sergeants were given a preference as to the side of the ship on which they should promenade according to weather conditions. Later the whole starboard deck was allotted to the men, and there was no more changing about.

Two days out complaints had reached him that the water in the taps was salt. He had tasted it and found it so. He had called the attention of the O. C. of the troops, Major Westmore, to the fact, and the latter declared that it was condemned water. This condition lasted throughout the voyage. The water in the state rooms was fresh, however. He had heard no complaints about the bathing facilities.

Bought Meat at Canteen.

Pte. Lewis Bevis, C.A.M.C., 19 years of age, enlisted in January, 1916, in the 166th Battalion, and had failed to reach France because he was under age. He testified that after the third day out there was not sufficient meat food. He had managed to get enough by buying at the canteen though he had not bought from the stewards.

He had complained and was told that if he would wait till the second sitting he would get more.

"I suppose it is natural to grouch about food all the time," said Mr. Orde. "That is one of our privileges," said witness.

"In fact grouching is common in England?" "But not to the extent it was on this occasion."

Used Word Rotten.

"You are reported as having been interviewed as to conditions and as having declared, 'Absolutely rotten.' Did you say that?"

"Not to that reporter and I did not use the word 'absolutely' either."

"Did you use the word rotten?" asked his lordship. "Yes."

"What did you want to convey?" "That everything in general was not up to the mark. Of course, it was the handiest word to use at the time."

"Did you apply it to the food?" "Not particularly. To general conditions."

"What did you mean by saying that you did not tell it to 'that reporter?'" asked Mr. Orde.

"I saw the words in the Telegram and the Telegram hadn't any man there."

"And I Said 'Rotten.'"

"But a reporter did ask you a question."

"Yes, he asked how things were on the Northland, and I said 'Rotten'."

"If you hadn't been asked for your complaint would you have volunteered it?" "Probably not, I hadn't time. But there were complaints."

"Had you been able to get ashore on Christmas Day would you have comlained?"

"We would probably have forgotten all about it."

"You were disappointed at not getting ashore for Christmas?"

"We all were."

On one occasion a steward had come to the door of the quarters and offered to sell food. He had been told that they didn't want any of his stuff.

Corporal Floyd Higgins, of Stratford, the next witness, had not got to France, but had been an orderly officer at several camps in England. He was N.C.O. in charge of a section on board the Northland. His duty was to see that the men got their rations and got on parade. The berthing accommodation, he declared, was narrow and limited. There was on room to dress or undress.

Sapper T. Aylett, walking with a cane, was the next witness. He had enlisted in the 84th Battalion in August, 1915, having seen eleven months' service with the Engineers and having been wounded at Passchendaele.

"Have you any complaint to make about the quality of the food?" "No I have not."

Counsel for the company suggested that sea travel at all times was uncomfortable. In times of heavy weather there was no doubt that complaints would be made. He instructed that the witnesses should stick to specific complaints.

Say Stewards "Very Dirty."

Questioned further he declared the stewards and their assistants were "very dirty." On Christmas Day the men had to march up to the galley to get their pudding. "The stewards," he said, "gave it out to us in their hands instead of on plates."

The ship was then in Halifax harbour, and the place was piled with odor" that it was not nice for a man to sit on them and eat his Christmas dinner. Had they been leaving the ship that afternoon he wouldn't have kicked so much. The mattresses should have been left on the bunks till after dinner.

"Who gave the orders for their removal?" "Our own officers."

"What kind of a Christmas dinner did you have?" "One pork chop with about two inches of fat which we couldn't eat and Christmas pudding served by hand. It was otherwise passable."

The chief steward said the witness had no control over his men.

Bunks Were Crowded.

Questioned by David Loughnan witness stated that in spite of a wounded shoulder he had been placed in an upper berth into which he had some difficulty climbing.

His Lordship observed that as there were twenty-four men in the room surely one of them would have been pleased in his condition to exchange with him.

He had been berthed on C deck of the Northland. The bunks were very crowded, there being twenty-four men packed together in one bunk room. The passage between was only two feet wide and the men slept with their feet to the passage. A seaweed mattress was supplied to some, a stray mattress to others.

"Have you any complaint to make of the bedding?" "Generally speaking, no."

Served on Dirty Dishes.

"Have you any complaint to make of the food." "There wasn't enough of it. I asked for more, but was refused. On one occasion we had mulligan stew and I complained to the steward that there was no more meat in it than the size of a walnut. They said there wasn't enough to go round and we had better wait till others were served. We waited but we didn't get any more. This was the fifth day out. At the noon-day meal there was only seating accommodation at one table for about two-thirds of the men in the section. Those who didn't come first had to take dirty dishes of those who sat down first."

Witness stated that men were detained to help the stewards get the rations, etc. He declared that the conditions described in regard to the table seating was of common occurrence.

Witness said he hadn't complained to anyone.

Steward Had No Control.

His Lordship suggested that as the witness hadn't complained there did not appear to be any use in raising the inquiry. To this Mr. Loughnan declared that the G.W.V.A. was not there to press complaints.

"When food was short," asked his lordship, "was it because the men on fatigue duty didn't bring enough?" Witness said he was complaining of what the stewards brought. Complaints to the chief steward didn't have any effect. He came down one day and his hired men told him to go to ——. He went upstairs instead, and that is the last I saw of him." The tables for the second relay of feeders were never cleaned.

Shortage of Men.

It was the duty of the stewards' assistants to take away the plates and clean them, but the stewards' assistants stayed mostly in the pantry. There were not sufficient stewards in the first place. With two more stewards in his dining room the work could have been done splendidly.

Private Joseph Hawkes, who enlisted in the Machaine Gun force in January, 1916, was the next witness. He had been eleven months in action around Lens and was badly gassed in March. He had also been on C deck. The sleeping quarters on the Northland were "very cramped" and the ventilation was poor because the deck was a cargo deck. In rough weather for five or six days — the waves broke over the bows and the hatches and vents had to be closed.

Henry J. Learmonth, master of the steamer Northland, a dark, clean-shaven, well set up man, was called to show what promenade space was accorded the men.

Not Sufficient Food.

Private Hawkes re-called, declared that after the second day the men had been allowed to use the promenade deck on the weather side.

With regard to food he declared there was not a sufficiency. During the first few days there was enough to go around because many of the men were sick. After that it was scarce. The dinner was very poor and the meat —boiled beef mostly — was not of good quality. Mostly gristle and fat. He had made no complaints as there were lots of others to do that.

Worse Than in France.

"You served in France," said His Lordship. "How did the rations on the Northland compare with those in France." "Very poorly, sir, except ing when the Commissariat broke down in France."

"What do you say was wrong with the food on the Northland?" "The food was badly cooked and unappetizing. Three-quarters of the meat would be left on the men's plates. Fat, gristle and bone—there was not enough eatable food."

Private Fred Leigh, of the 208th Battalion, Irish, a Toronto man, enlisted in May, 1916, had not reached France. His battalion was broken up and they had "Let the old crocks go." His hair was white.) He went to the 8th Reserve at Sandling, afterwards being attached to the C.A.M.C.

No Fresh Water.

Asked regarding the berthing, he declared that "If a fat man undertook to say his prayers he would never get up again. There was no drinking water. At Buxton he had filled his own water bottle, and it was a good job he did or he would not have had a shave. About three days before reaching Halifax there was no fresh water to be had.

Had to Buy Coffee.

There was lots of fresh water, however, during the first seven days of the voyage.

"How did you get along during the other days?" "I had to buy coffee."

"Did you shave with that?" asked his Lordship. "I was going to one time."

"Where did you get the coffee, from a steward?" I don't know. He looked too dirty for a steward. I offered him a shilling for all he had, but he gave me a drink for six pence. I was glad to get it. At other times the men drank soda water from the canteen. I would have given anything for a water bottle full of water."

He had tried to shave with salt water, but it was "like sand paper." Some were lucky and got hot water out of the galleys. It was always all gone when he went there.

Says Water Was Wasted.

"Did you read one of your interviews given to a reporter and put in a Toronto paper?" "I did, and I thought he was crazy to put it in."

"Did you say the food was fierce?" "No, I didn't, I am ready to back up what I say but not what I didn't say. I wanted to go down and have the interview pulled out of the paper."

"Have you no other complaints?" "No."

Witness admitted that there would have been lots of water if it hadn't been wasted.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

The Peterborough Poultry Association Should Be Supported

Annual Exhibition in the Armouries January 7th, 8th and 9th.

The Peterboro Poultry Association deserves the support and encouragement of the citizens of this city and district and unless it gets this support it is just possible the Association may be an organization of the past. The officers of the Association have prepared an excellent show for next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with specially attractive feautres, which will make it worth while to attend. One way you can help the Association is by attending the exhibition this year.

Old Folks' Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis Quickly Cured

This Tells of a Method That Cures Without Using Drugs

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia.

Cough Syrups seldom much good because they upset digestion. Any doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach,—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

A Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold wit hthe first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months, small size, 50c; trial size, 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

New York Cast and Production Coming Here With "Turn to the Right"

Winchell Smith, master stage-craftsman, must have borne in mind the old dramatic adage, "Send your audience home laughin'," when he put the finishing touch to "Turn to The Right," for by the simplest of tricks the final curtain of the most successful of comedies is invariably rewarded with a storm of laughter and applause. The scene of the last act is the peach orchard of the Bascom farm at night. Dear Old Mrs. Bascom has just waved good-bye to her son and his young bride who are to motor to their own little cottage that can be seen on the hill-top in the distance. The curtain is about to descend and there is no one in the audience whose eyes are not dimmed with tears of joy and sympathy at the happy ending of all the Bascom troubles, when slowly ascending the distant hill, is seen the bridal car—its headlight piercing the gloom of the night. The car stops in front the tiny cottage. It is too distant to see the young couple descend, but as the car proceed on its way and the lights of the cottage flash up there is no one in the audience who is not positive he hsa actually seen the bride and groom enter their new home. Then the lights are lowered and a single light in an upper window flashed for a moment until a falling shade brings darkness again and the big curtain descends amid storms of laughter and applause.

"Turn to the Right" will play here at The Grand Opera House, Tuesday evening next, January 7th, with exactly the same cast that appeared before H. R. H. The Duke of Devonshire and Vice-Regal Suite last Saturday in Ottawa, going back to His Majesty's, Montreal, from here for a return engagement inside of three months.

COAL OUTPUT BROKE ALL RECORDS LAST YEAR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.— With an estimated output of 587,500,000 tons all records for the production of bituminous coal in the United States were broken during 1918, said a statement issued to-day by the National Coal Association. This total was approximately 36,000,000 tons in excess of the former record output in 1917.

"The nation's war-time demand for coal, the heaviest in the country's history, has been met in full," said the statement.

"A year ago the country faced an unprecedented coal shortage, to-day it faces the prospect of a sufficient bituminous coal supply to meet its requirements."

Voice of The People

Jan., 3, 1919
491 Sherbrooke St.,

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Some time ago I erected a wire fence on the north and east sides of my property at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets. While I was busy with the fence I received a letter from the City Engineer asking me to stop building and to remove the fence at once as I had encroached on the City line by several feet on Park street. As this statement appeared a little vague to me I went to the Engineer to see what he meant by several feet and to find out the exact position of the street line. This he did not know but he knew I was five or six feet over. He promised to come up the following day and mark off the street line for me. This he failed to do. I then reported the matter to Mayor Duncan, who advised me to take it up with the Board of Works. On doing so it was agreed that I let the fence remain where I had built it. And pay the city twenty-five cents per year in order that they may retain their claim on the ground I had fenced in.

It has been brought to my knowledge that under the above circumstances I cannot qualify for a seat in the City Council, and some of the election day soreheads is getting a bit jubilant over the situation and no doubt sees prospects of having a say in the city affairs for 1919.

I am also informed that one of my neighbours is playing an important part in the game, not one of the love thy neighbour as thyself but one of a kind that brought the following words from the pen of R. Burns. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

To save any further disappointment to those who cannot take a defeat, let me give them a hint by further quoting a verse from R. Burns' address to the Wee Mouse,

But, mousie, thou are no a'lane
In proving foresight may be vain:
The best laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft a-gley
And le's us no but grief and pain
For promised joy.

Alex. Murray.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—Now that Peterboro has almost a complete change of Aldermen for the city council I would like to make a suggestion; the advisability of which may be left open for discussion, and the decision of the Mayor. The labour aldermen do not claim infallibility. The aldermen in the past were not infallible, or they would not have left such a legacy of trouble for the new council. Therefore in order to make a new start I would suggest that the Mayor, elect for himself a Mayor's Chaplain (Hon. position) usually the minister of the church the mayor attends, and that the council form a civic procession to the church, on Sunday morning previous to the opening of the new council for the years business. It would be the duty of the chaplain, during his sermon to tell them why they are there, in case they do not know. The procession might include the mayor, aldermen, board of education and any other local governing body, also civic officials, city clerk, chief of police with any men at his disposal. The chief including some of his men, invite any public organizations like the G.W.V. who would I am sure if asked, supply a band to head the procession. Everything to be as dignified as possible, the mayor wearing his chain of office etc., police and firemen in full uniform. This civic procession could take place also anytime called for by the mayor or thanksgiving services called by Proclamation.

This course is adopted by municipalities of the greatest of nations, and some people ascribe, her power to such appeals for divine guidance in all affairs of state or municipality; I personally believe that righteousness can be realized in the complex conditions of modern life, only through the application to all human affairs of the principles of the Kingdom of Heaven. We have a lot of religion in Canada let us try a little applied christianity.

I now leave this matter to those better qualified to deal with it.

Thanking you Mr. Edior for space.

Yours truly,

Labour Man.

Will Use Vessels For Foreign Trade

Canadian Government Ships to be Employed Wherever They Are Needed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The Dominion Government's new steamers are to be put into commission for the development of foreign trade of Canada. Three vessels of 8,100 tons capacity will be ready this month and will be used wherever there is demand for space.

It is the intention ultimately to establish regular steamship lines on the Atlantic, Pacific and South American trade, but for the present the vessels will be used more as tramp steamers to run wherever there are cargoes to develop Canada's foreign trade.

The first vessels will likely sail for the West Indies and possibly touch at South American ports with manufactured goods for that trade. It is expected that Canada will get a large share of the West Indian and South American trade.

The steamers are to be run in conjunction with the Canadian Northern and will form a department of that system, just as the C.P.S. steamship lines are operated by that line. The announcement of the appointment of a manager is expected shortly. The board of directors are selecting one of the best men in the business.

BANTFORD PAYS UP FIRST WATER BONDS ISSUED 30 YEARS.

BRANTFORD, January 3. — The original debentures issued thirty years ago for the purchase of the Brantford waterworks system, at $185,000, from a private company, have been paid by City Treasurer Bunnell. The bonds were sold at 96 and bore four per cent interest, and were sold in Montreal and delivered by the council members of that day. The city investment in waterworks since then has grown to $1,000,000.

Lawless Says He Was Nearly Down and Out When He Began Taking Tanlac.

"When I first began taking Tanlac I only weighed ninety-seven pounds, and was just about down and out," said O. D. Lawless, the well-known Omaha produce merchant, residing at 604 South 28th Street, recently, "but I now weigh one hundred and thirty-seven, and so far as my health is concerned, I couldn't ask to feel much better.

"I have not gotten all my lost weight back yet," he continued, "for I had dropped down sixty-one pounds. But I am still taking Tanlac and expect soon to tip the beam at one hundred and fifty-eight, my weight before my troubles began. I began suffering from stomach trouble and getting into a run-down condition five years ago, when my appetite went back on me. I lost all desire to give up my coffee and many other things I like best, as I could not retain them, and the only thing that half way agreed with me was fruits. There were terrible pains in my right side, which would almost cramp men double two or three times a week. I became uneasy, fearing appendicitis, and no one seemed to understand my case or do me any good. I just kept suffering and losing weight until it looked like I would shrink up to nothing.

"My condition had become noticeable to all who knew me, and while talking over my case with a friend one day he asked me why I didn't try Tanlac. Well, this put me to thinking there might be something in Tanlac for me, and there certainly was, for I have already picked up forty pounds and my old time strength and energy have come back to me. I hadn't finished my first bottle until the pains, which I feared were caused by appendicitis, had disappeared. I can drink my coffee now and eat just anything I want and never have the least trouble with my stomach. So you can see why I'm so strong for Tanlac. It has made life worth living for me, and I feel like I ought to pass the good word along."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

15 Believed Dead in Lebanon, N.J., as Gas Tank Bursts

LEBANON, N. J., Jan. 3.—Fifteen persons are believed to have been killed here when the explosion in the basement of the Oddfellows' Building desroyed the entire structure and made itself felt through the surrounding country for a radius of twenty miles.

A preliminary investigation indicated that the explosion was caused by a tank which supplied gas for the lighting of the building.

The only persons who were in the building and who it is thought escaped death in the blast are George N. Manning, a farmer, and George Schomp, a resident of the village. Both men are in Somerset Hospital, eighteen miles from this village. It is feared they will not recover. Neither is able to tell what caused the tank to explode.

Stories From Some of the Workers On Election Day

If the idea prevails that the success of Labour in the municipal elections was due to thorough organization it is considerably wide of the truth. There was an organization to be sure and it worked indefatigably, but it was only the nucleus of the strength that could have been marshalled. But the spirit of devotion to the cause fired those who had volunteered to help, and some of their experiences are rather interesting.

Mr. Malcolm Campbell of the Trades and Labour Council was passing along a street early on New Year's morning when he was stopped by a woman who pointed to a house and told him that her neighbour was the enquiry of an elderly workmen sick, and no one to help her. Mr. Campbell immediately went in with his informant and found the wife of a soldier, who is overseas too ill to attend to her household duties, and to give the needed attention to her baby. He went for a doctor and made other arrangements for the care of the soldier's wife, and casually mentioned the elections to the doctor, who replied that he hadn't paid much attention to the municipal campaign. Mr. Campbell suggested that he ought to vote for the four Labour men. The doctor asked for their names, said that he would vote for the whole four, and then remarked that he ought to vote for several others. Mr. Campbell recommended Ald. A. A. McIntyre and Ald. Jones, and the doctor added their names to the list.

First Vote in 15 Years.

"Can you tell me where I vote?" yas the enquiry of an elderly workingman as he swung his dinner pail up on to a show case in Gainey's barber shop about 6 o'clock on the last day of the old year.

A search through the voter's list failed to produce the information desired but the old toiler was directed to the poll nearest to his home, and to other guidance should that source fail.

"I haven't voted in about 15 years or more," he said, "and that was the last time there was a Labour candidate for the council. You may be sure I wouldn't miss this chance."

Quick Action This.

It was just three minutes to five, when a street car passing Lillico's shop caught the attention of a Labour worker who caught sight of a worker he had been looking for all day.

"There's my man," he shouted to the driver of an automobile, in the same voice ordering him to follow the street car. They quickly caught up with it, attracted the forgetful elector's attention, who signalled for a stop, and got out at the next corner. The automobile picked him up, turned about and set him down at the polling booth with scarcely a minute to spare.

The Cards Helped.

An old woman entered one of the north end polling booths and informed the official that she could neither read nor write. She opened her hand bag and fumbled for the little card bearing the name of the Labour candidates, which the organization committee had prepared.

"I want to vote for these four Labour men," she said, and her difficulty was soon smoothed out. It was another vote for the ticket, and was only one of the instances related of how the cards helped in the election.

The Vote was Solid.

The election figures proved conclusively that the Labour candidates were solidly supported by the workingmen who made sure of the election of the Labour Council's representatives by "plumping" for them. There were evidences of slight exceptions, but they are not worth mentioning.

Glance at the vote at Freeburn's store, polling sub-division No. 1, in the south end. The returns were Gainey 89, Garside 88, Morrison 107, Murray 88. It is obvious that there were 88 voters who did not lift their eyes from the names of the four Labour men. Take No. 2 next, R. C. Braund's store, and the figures were Gainey 75, Garside 77, Morrison 90, Murray 82.

Turn to the North Ward, Kennedy's store for example, and this is the count: Gainey 62, Garside 56, Morrison 60, Murray 61. Not much variance there. Barringer's store, also in the north: Gainey 32, Garside 38, Morrison 46, Murray 40.

Also Matthews-Blackwell's store, in the West ward: Gainey 87, Garside 88, Morrison 133, Murray 87. The workingmen played their ticket right across the whole four, and Mr. Morrison gained other votes probably as a personal tribute and because business men and others evidently picked him from the Labour four to join their more or less indiscriminate selection from the rest of the fifteen candidates.

Finally the East Ward's figures left no ground for complaint by the Labour men. Kylie's store give them the following vote: Gainey 100, Garside 76, Morrison 90, Murray 92.

Hill's, at No. 21, showed Gainey 60, Garside, 51, Morrison 71, and Murray 53.

The total vote was small and unquestionably among those who stayed at home to avoid the rain and the slippery walking was a large percentage of workingmen. But had there been a compelle organization the Labour vote would have been greatly increased, and as one opinion expressed it, they could have been elected in the first four places.

Mr. Garside's Story.

Up in the North End, Mr. Garside was supervising a section that was not as familiar as his own South Ward. One ratepayer who was called upon told the worker that his property was in his wife's name, and his own name was not on the voters' list. He had been in the West. When it was suggested that the wife should go out to vote the husband refused to permit her, and like a little lord and master stood firm. He wasn't strongly in favour of the Labour men anyway, and certainly he wouldn't allow her to go out to vote. He intimated that he was afraid she might vote for the Murray-Morrison group.

There is no doubt of the attitude of the head of that house toward equal suffrage.

Other stories equally interesting might be related of how Labour secured its "place in the sun," but the above reflect the spirit of the little groups of workers for whom a Labour medal should be struck to commemorate the New Year's victory.

German Offered to Remove Time Fuses From Bruges Mines

City Saved by Mysterious Officer Who Volunteered for Perilous Work.

BRUGES, Dec. 28.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press). — Citizens of Bruges were greatly puzzled, after the signing of the armistice, by the presence of a German officer in full regalia in and about the city. This officer was at times accompanied by two Belgian officers of the second section of the Belgian general staff, but more often he was in command of ten or twelve German prisoners of war. He appeared to do pretty nearly what he pleased, no control apparently being exercised over his activities. For several days his work centered in Bruges, the post office, city hall, and railroad station in turn being visited by him and his soldiers.

Some unfavourable comment was heard because this German was allowed to dine at one of the leading hotels and murmurs became so loud that after a few days a makeshift uniform was provided for him. It looked like a combination of Russian, French and British uniforms, but speculation as to the identity and business of the German persisted.

It is now known that this man saved Bruges from destruction. He was the officer who during hostilities was in charge of the work of mining the town and the Zeebruge docks, bridges, etc. After the signing of the armistice he volunteered to remove the caps from the mines. It was dangerous work and several prisoners were called in to help. Some of the mines were timed to explode ten or twelve days after the departure of the troops.

Huns Will Pay Only Rent For French Trenches

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Captain Andre Tardieu, head of the General Commission for Franco-American War Matters, speaking to the Associated Press relative to certain extraordinary rumours which have been in circulation in Paris, denied officially that the American army had been required to pay rent for the trenches it occupied at the front or for territory occupied militarily behind the front.

"Numerous reports of French, as well as American and British origin," he said, "have revealed to us that German propaganda is not dead and the work of its organization is making itself felt. One indication, among many others, is found in the persistence of the absurd rumour. It is almost inconceivable, and I would not take the pains to deny it if I were not informed that it is still in circulation to-day. It has been said that when American troops took up a new sector on our front they had to pay rent for it to the French Government and that when American troops captured ground from the enemy in battle they had to pay rent for the reconquered territory. I deny it officially in the most categorical fashion.

"The rule followed since the American army arrived in France has been inspired by an exactly contrary spirit. When an American unit relieved French troops the unit leaving the sector passed over the material collected there, and the same rule was in effect when the French relieved the Americans. In cantonments, the requisition price paid for private buildings is the same for the French and allied armies. As for hospitals, schools and other public establishments, they have been placed at the disposition of the American army gratuitously.

"It is Germany who will pay the war indemnities when claims shall be established.

"In the rear zone all questions of indemnity to private parties are treated on the same basis by the French and Allied armies. The regulation of these questions is vested with the American Staff Bureau at Tours. All claims are considered under the provisions of the American law of April 18, 1918. The American staff is sole judge of all claims, and no recourse has been opened to claimants up to this time for appeals from its decision.

"Besides, we have organized an advisory service to protect American soldiers against exorbitant charges. In addition to the aid given in the supervision of prices on purchases by the army, every possible effort has been made to protect officers and soldiers in their individual purchases that could not be supervised by this service. Several decrees and ministerial circulars have prescribed public posting of prices. Soldiers on leave in Paris have been furnished guides with an invitation to file any complaint with the Central Bureau of Soldiers on Leave, which is in permanent contact with the Prefecture of Police."

TO REORGANIZE POLICE.

Dismissals Foreshadowed by Vancouver's Mayor.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 4.—A reorganization of the Vancouver Police Department "from top to bottom" which may include the dismissal of certain officials and the suspension of others, was forecasted here by Mayor R. H. Gale.

"The fact of so much liquor having been brought into the city illegally as has been brought out by the recent revelations without the knowledge of the city police, proves that there is something radically wrong," he said. "The police commission will leave no stone unturned to improve the department." The Mayor has called a meeting of the Police Commission to consider the matter. He refused to give the names of any members of the force who might be disciplined.

SPECIAL CALL TO RED CROSS WORKERS

A special call has gone forth to Red Cross workers to make garments for war refugees. The Red Cross workroom in the Public Library will be open beginning Monday, January 6th, three afternoons a week, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, throughout this month, when a determined effort will be put forth to make as many of these garments as possible. As this will in all probability finish Red Cross work in this city, it is hoped that every woman who can sew, will be present Monday and each succeeding Red Cross day, that this final Red Cross drive may be a compelte success.

All Northern France Is In Ruins Reports Herbert Hoover

A TREMENDOUS PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—In an out-spoken cablegram received here Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator and Chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, tells of the wanton destruction wrought by German Armies in parts of northern France which they occupied, and states that the work of rehabilitation has been made so difficult by these outrages that it will be impossible for the commission, as it had hoped to turn over the task at this time to the French Government.

"The entire industrial life of the region has been destroyed by the Germans," Mr. Hoover states. "There is scarcely a single factory that can be operated without a very large portion of new equipment. The coal mines are totally destroyed and the network of railways in this region has been rendered almost hopeless of reconstruction for many months.

"The German method of destruction was to bend every single rail by exploding a hand grenade under it, rendering it useless for all time. The Grand Canal du Nord, which connects this section of France with the Belgium canal system and is the natural entrepot for goods for Antwerp or Rotterdam, was itself practically he fighing line for months antd is so badly destroyed that it will take fully a year for its complete reconsructiion."

Destitution Widespread

Discussing general conditions, Mr. Hoover states that the relief is based upon the allowance of food to the value of about 35 cents a day to the destitute, those having any resources or employment being required to pay. The whole extent of destitution is not yet known, he asserts, but appears to include fully 60 per cent. of the people. His cable adds these details:

"The Commission for Relief in Belgium had hoped to surrender the task of relief of Northern France to the French Government immediately upon the German retreat. It has been found impossible, however, for the French Government to undertake the food supply of this area for some months to come, and upon the urgent request of that Government, the commission has decided to continue

"After the four-year paralysis of wholesale and retail business with the destruction of the principal towns and shops, these trades have disappeared, and the people are today dependent upon a ration issued directly to them, just as before the German evacuation. Until transport and trade can be rehabilitated the present system must go on, for the French distribution is done by the trades. These arrangements necessitate some reorganization of the relief work and its entire separation from Belgium.

"Twenty members of the Commission for Relief in Belgium who joined the American Army as officers have been released by General Pershing to undertake this work.

Army Trucks Being Used.

"Transportation connections with the region are maintained through Dunkirk and through one Belgian canal still operating supplemented by motor trucks originally installed by the armies and now being gradually taken over by the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

"The population of this area at the moment of the retreat was about 1,500 000 there being also about 300,000 refugees in Belgium who are returning and some 500,000 refugees in France, all of whom are anxious to return to their native sail.

"The destruction of some twenty principal towns and literally hundreds of villages renders the return of these refugees a stupendous problem. Every effort is being made to restrain them from going back until some systematic provision for shelter can be completed, but they evade all official urgings and the roads are a continuous procession of these pitiable bodies. Thousands of them reach their villages to find every vestige of shelter destroyed, and finally wander into the villages further back from the actual battle area, which are themselves already overcrowded to a heart-breaking degree.

"In order to remedy this situation to some extent the Commission for Relief in Belgium has obtained the services of 150 volunteers from the American Navy and is taking over a large amount of second-hand barrack material from the navy and army. Those barracks are in course of erection adjacent to the destroyed villages under the superintendence of the navy volunteers.

Army Clothing Distributed

"A large amount of boots and shoes and warm clothing has been taken over from the Quartermaster's supplies, and these are being distributed to the people.

"The French Government is endeavouring to obtain some cattle from Switzerland and horses from the various armies, which, together with the meagre supply of agricultural implements, may enable the population to get in some portion of next year's crops in such of these areas as are not too badly destroyed by battle."

Since Jan. 1, 1915, the Commission for Relief in Belgium has transported food and clothing to the occupied territory of Northern France. These supplies were distributed through a French agency, the Comite Francais, made up of representatives from various towns and districts.

From canal terminals the supplies were handed over to local committees in the towns and villages, which were headed by the Mayors and selected from the representative citizens of the community. These committees attended to the actual distribution of the daily ration to the inhabitants. The goods were paid for by municipal issues of paper money, back of which stood only the responsibility of the particular villages of issuance

The French Government is supplying some food from France to the Relief Commission, and imports required from the United States amount to about 30,000,000 pounds a month. The total food shipments from America for Belgium and Northern France amount to more than $30,000,000 a month in value.

INTERESTING CASE IN DIVISION COURT

Plaintiff Seeks to Recover Damages From George Street Dressmaker.

A case of unusual interest involving the rights of a dressmaker was heard yesterday in division court by Judge Huycke. It appeared that Mrs. MacDonald, a niece of Mr. J. Guise Bagley, desired to have a coat made and took the material to a George street dressmaker.

The evidence of the plaintiff, Mrs. MacDonald, showed that she, relying upon the advertised skill of the dressmaker to whom she took the coat, entrusted her with 6 3-4 yards of cheviot serge with the agreement the coat was to be of a length and style agreed upon and to be completed December 1st. After several fittings the final fitting was made in a dark room and eight dollars was paid by the plaintiff. On her return home Mrs. MacDonald found the coat to be too short and a patch an inch wide put around the hem, also two large patches in front.

In correspondence from the plaintiff it was stated that she would not entrust the defendant to rectify the coat, as she thought if she could not make it right in the first instance she could not alter it properly.

Harry Deutsch and Benjamin Rogow, two tailors, testified to the defects of the coat.

The defendant stated that she was quite willing and able to rectify the defects.

Judge Huycke ordered the dressmaker to make the coat right if possible, and the case to stand over in the meantime.

Mr. Bagley stated that the plaintiff had been obliged to buy another coat in the meantime and thought the defendant should make it right.

The Judge decided to consider that question at a later date.

Mr. Bagley appeared for the plaintiff, Peck, Kerr & McElderry for the defence.

HARDEN ASKS GERMANS TO SHOW REPENTANCE

Says They Still Refuse to Face the Facts—London Times Scoffs at Revolution—Fifty-one Months of Brutal Rule in Belgium.

London, Jan. 4.—The London Times says that in Die Zukunft of Dec. 14, Maximilian Harden published a sort of appeal to the German Government to approach the allied powers with assurances that Germany really placed all her hope on the abandonment of her militarist ambitions and the creation of a "new world": that she was quite ready to fulfill all her just obligations and to give absolute guarantee with a view to "negotiation about the future."

Harden suggests that Germany is gradually drifting toward the certain danger of an armed invasion and a dictated form of Government with the object of securing payment for the war and also of proving to the German people that their submission is absolute. He reprints relevant declarations of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George about the attitude of the allies toward a reformed Germany and looks to the fulfillment of their promises, but he maintains that the German people are still failing to face the facts about their own plight and about enemy opinion, just as they have always failed to face them. The Germans, he says, do not really understand what an account is being made up against them—an account which he describes as follows:

"Fifty-one months of brutal rule in Belgium, where administrative unity was broken and raw materials, machinery goods of every kind, and three millions in cash and banknotes alone were carried away. All laws was broken, forced labor imposed, civilians were deported, and at the eleventh hour industries were still destroyed and towns plundered.

"The devastation of Northern France and the destruction of Cathedrals, monuments, mines, factories and orchards.

"Air raids against all law and all customs.

"The sinking of passenger ships and hospital ships.

"Secret agreements with the Irish and the Flemish.

"The smuggling of explosives, bacilli, and incendiary instruments into neutral countries.

"Everywhere bribery, fraud and theft.

"A cloud of witnesses brought to answer every accusation.

"A country fertilized with the blood of the Armenian people, and all over the earth hardly a voice for Germany."

Do Not Understand

Harden says that the German people simply do not understand the situation that they have to face, and that since the revolution they have been muddling along and indulging in all sorts of political and economic follies, merely waiting for the peace which they supposed to have been secured by the "acceptance of all of President Wilson's points." The only result, Harden declares, is that the enemy countries become more and more suspicious.

It is worth while, says The Times to quote Harden's account of the enemy attitude toward Germany as he sees it. He makes the enmey say that "this stupid copy of Russian disorder is not up to the standard of German cunning which for three years has made the war-hell so hot for us. It is a new trick to deceive us. They still have 6,000,000 or 8,000,000 men under arms. They can quietly replace the heavy artillery that they have lost, and then fire a refreshed and reformed army with the cry that the soil of the Fatherland must be defended.

"Our socialists would fall upon us and ask whether the army is to be misused for the purpose of conquest The boches have driven away the Kaiser and his fellows because the promised victory could not be had. Yet only children believe in their 'revolution.'

"The walls of this empire were not so loosely built tha t a puff of wind could overthrow them. Nowhere has there been the storming of a bastile or even an attempt at serious resistance. A naval or military strike, which was either ordered by Admirals and Generals or effected by Foch's blows is given, but as the German revolution it is the usual Berlin trash.

"From the old Field Marshal down to the young Prince in the diplomatic service, all offer their services to the new Government—a Government in Russian Germany, containing men, who before yesterday were accused of high treason. Behind the sham front the old officials sit at their old work, and no legation, no centre of propaganda, has cleaned out Hindenburg and Haase, Erzerberger and Ledebour, Solf and Kautsky. That is the appearance of the much advertised revolution.

"Official language is unchanged. It is still the boast that the army is 'undefeated,' and as regards the approach of starvation, mentioned only to deceive us, where should starvation come from, since if the war went on, the last year's harvest must suffice until Spring?

"There is no trace of repentance or of an attempt to separate the innocent from the guilty, nor can there be because so many sharers in the guilt are partners in business. They raged when the Baverian published the report by he Berlin Miniser and said that such disclosures could only help the enemy. It is a put-up game."

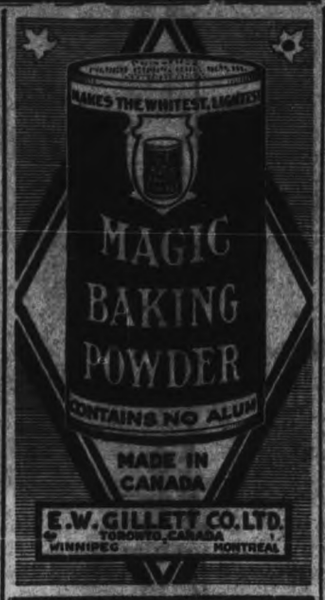
WOMEN'S BEST LAXATIVE

Proved Every Day That Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are Just Right for Woman's Ills

Little wonder woman suffers so much from constipation. She always hesitates continually puts off taking medicine.

Of course a woman's system is delicate, is easily injured by drastic purgatives. Bitter experience with harsh medicines makes her cautious, and to be great injury, chronic sluggishness of the system is permitted.

Few pills are suited to the actual needs of woman—they are too strong But there is a good woman's laxative, and it combines mildness with thoroughness of activity—it is known to the people of many nations as Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which never gripe, never cause nausea and are safe to use no matter what the conditions or strength or circumstances of health may be. A naturalness and regularity of the system, so important to every woman, is quickly acquired by the regular use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. As a health-bringer, as a tonic laxative, as an all-round ladies' medicine, there is positively nothing so efficacious as Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut; 25c per box, at all dealers.



GRAIN MARKET

Receipts of live stock of all classes have been extremely light for the past two weeks, even for the double holiday season, which is usually a quiet time in the cattle markets. In consequence of the light offerings, buyers have not been too keen to rush matters, a proceeding which would have resulted only in unduly boosting prices to higher levels than the situation at present really calls for. Instead, therefore, of forcing up prices in a scramble for the limited supplies offering, the packers have been content to draw upon supplies already in hand, which admittedly were large, and amply sufficient to meet all immediate requirements for the holiday trade. As a result of this policy, prices have been kept practically steady during the past two weeks, with very slight movement, either up or down, but with a tendency rather up than down, except in the case of common and medium butcher cows. Good to choice butcher steers, and good feeders have been in steady demand, sufficiently so to prevent any weakening in the general tone of the market. As present supplies in the hands of the trade have been already pretty well drawn upon, prospects are that prices will remain firm at the present levels. There is likely to be good markets in fact from this out for good quality butcher cattle of all weights.

As with the cattle, the runs of all the small meats have been light, and prices in consequence very firm, lambs and calves in particular making substantial advances.

The hog market has held practically steady and unchanged this week, though receipts have been very light.

CATTLE MARKET

Corn market "came back" with a good swing yesterday, apparently on the strength of a statement given out to the effect that corn stocks amount to only 390,000 bushels, and that these are held by one or two houses. Although the colder weather is favourable for a freer delivery of corn, the present strength of the cash situation more than offsets the weather conditions. Oats reflected the strength of corn, advancing 7-8 to 1 3-8c. on both the Winnipeg and Chicago markets.

BURNING PEA COAL IN FURNACE

(By Chas. K. Farrington.)

The high cost of living makes it necessary that the householder should obtain all necessities at the lowest possible cost. The writer plans in this article to tell how tests were made with pea coal to determine if this coal could be used to advantage for furnaces, instead of the larger and more expensive kinds. The experiments proved that if care was used in burning the pea coal excellent results followed, and that it was also a very economical size to employ. It costs from $1.00 to $1.75 per ton less than the sizes ordinarily used for furnace work.

There are two specially good qualities which we soon discover about pea coal. It will allow the fire to come up very quickly if the damper in the smoke pipe and the drafts are opened. For obtaining heat at the time it is most needed, i.e., in the early morning on a cold winter dar it is admirable. Those of us who like a warm room in which to eat breakfast will appreciate this feature. Again it may seem strange to say it is a good size to use to 'bank' the fires at night, or also to use at any time during the day when no heat is required from the furnace. It will "keep the fire in" at such times very well indeed.

It is of a size that will pass through most furnace grates if it is used when the fire is being lighted at the beginning of the winter season. This is not a serious objection to its use, by any means, for all that is necessary is a small amount of coal of a larger size to use when the fire is being lighted. In the average home the furnace fire is kept burning without it being out at all for the entire winter. Once the fire is made, pea coal gives admirable results. To use it economically a good "body" of fire is essential. Therefore, when the fire is being "forced' on cold winter mornings in order that a good amount of heat may be obtained in a short time, do not put on too large a quantity at once so as to smother the fire, but put on a moderate amount, and then more when it is properly ignited. After a good "body" of fire is obtained a sufficient quantity may be put on to carry the fire for some time. When shaking down and cleaning the fire if "holes" appear (and they sometimes do, especially if the work is not done carefully) fill them up with a larger sized coal so as to prevent any of the pea coal passing down through the grate. But such holes are rare if care is used, and let me say that care should always be employed in caring for any furnace no matter what sized coal may be burned, and if it is not it is possible to waste a large amount of coal. So many persons handling a furnace do not realize this, and get the fire so "low" that it requires a long time and much coal before a sufficient quantity of heat may be obtained for the house. Therefore shake the fire gently at all times. If coal of good quality is used clinkers are not numerous and the use of the poker is not necessary as a rule. I have seen inexperienced people stir the entire fire up with the poker with the idea that they were doing the best thing to secure a good fire. A good grate will always allow all the ashes to be quickly and surely removed from the fire without disturbing it too much.

As soon as the advantages of pea coal are realized its use for furnaces will be increased. The writer until recently had been under the impression that it could not be burned to advantage in the furnace, but he finds he was mistaken. If any reader wishes to test for himself let him order a ton or so of pea coal and follow the simple directions given in this article. I have no doubt as to the results, both as regards the burning qualities of the coal and last, but not least by any means the economy.

FOOD CONDITIONS IN FRANCE LOOK BETTER

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Food conditions in France will improve considerably in the near future, declares Victor Boret, the Food Minister, in an interview in the Matin. However, new restrictions will be imposed on the consumption of meat because of the necessity of re-stocking herds. The sugar ration will be increased shortly, while large quantities of coffee are now on the way from Brazil. Butter is being imported from foreign countries. Regulations imposed on restaurants, the Minister concluded, will be ameliorated shortly.

Policeman Shot As Seven Men Battle Over Automobile

Harold Neal Wounded by First Holders of Touring Car—Two Arrested, Five More Sought.

NEW YORK, January 3. — One policeman is in the Lincoln Hospital with a bullet wound in the head; one man is in Fordham Hospital with a wound in the shoulder; another is held in the Alexander avenue police station on a charge of grand larceny, and five others are being sought by the police as the result of an attempted theft of an automobile at Brook avenue and 136th street, the Bronx.

As Harold Neal, 22 years old, an electrician, of No. 1497 Southern Boulevard, and Robert Radcliff, 21, a laborer, of No. 548 East 136th St., were leaving Youngs restaurant, at No. 124 Brook avenue, a large touring automobile bearing the designation "69,563 Connecticut," was driven up to the restaurant and five young men alighted from it and entered the place.

According to the police account, Neal jumped into the automobile, followed by Radcliff. The latter took the wheel and the car started off down Brook avenue. Apprised of the action of the two men, the five men who had come in the car rushed from the restaurant and one of them fired, wounding Neal in the shoulder.

Leo Sexton, a policeman, of the Alexander avenue station, who was near, heard the shot and started after the man that he thought had fired at Neal. The man took refuge in the vestibule of the house at No. 504 East 136th street, and when Sexton came up he shot him in the left side of the head near the ear, and escaped.

At Brook avenue and 134th street, Radcliff, with Neal groaning at his side, was stopped by Detective Budermeyer, and both men were placed under arrest charged with grand larceny.

The wounds of Policeman Sexton and Neal were dressed by Drs. Spindler and Zeller of Lincoln Hospital, and the two men were taken there, but as it has no prison ward Neal was later removed to Fordham hospital.

Mystery surrounds not only the identify of the man who shot Policeman Sexton, but the other four men who arrived at the restaurant in the automobile, for they abandoned it and disappeared before Detective Budermeyer reached the restaurant. This leads the police to believe they had also stolen the automobile.

Radcliff was arraigned before Magistrate John E. McGeehan, in the Morrisania Police Court, yesterday morning and was held without bail on a charge of grand larceny contained in a short affidavit.

It was not known by the police to whom the automobile belonged. No record of Connecticut automobiles is kept in New York, it was said.

The Old Year and the New

Another year, at God's behest,
Into the past has flown,
And may His holy name be blest,
For all the joys we've known.

What humble gratitude we owe,
For patient mercy found,
When justly He had laid us low
As cumberers of the ground.

With prospects beaming fair and bright,
Fresh dawns another year,
And on its annals pure and white
May no dark blot appear.

But may devoted service fill
Each hour with glad employ,
Our highest aim to do His will,
His smile our sweetest joy.

Lord as the fleeting years go by,
Thy spirit on us pour,
To fit us for the life on high
When time shall be no more.

Arthur Mandel Knows About Brian's Evenings With Mollie.

ARTHUR MANDEL KNOWS
CHAPTER LXXVIII

Kenyon Roberts had not been the only one who had seen Brian going toward the Square with parcels under his arm; but while Kenyon had not investigated where he was taking them, Arthur Mandel had.

It all came about trough an accident. One night while Ruth was away Mandel was in the locality of Brian's office. He saw him come out, and thinking he would like to know if he —Brian— were taking that girl out again, he followed him for a block or two. He saw him stop and buy fruit and then go into a butcher shop and come out with a brown paper parcel. To Manedl's amazement he walked directly to one of the shabby houses near the Square and disappear.

With a slow whistle pursing his lips, Mandel turned and went about his business, but joyfully. Surely Ruth must soon find out that Brian was unfaithful. He of course crediting Brian with doing far more than he had; and of being in love with Mollie, and not with Ruth.

Arthur Mandel, with his disposition could not conceive of caring for a woman like Ruth, and yet being tempted to hurt her because of loneliness, or because of a liking he might feel for a woman so much her opposite, as was Mollie King.

He was not the sort of man who carried tales; yet he sorely longed for Ruth to know what he suspected as truth. The longer she was with him, the more he saw of her the more in love had he become. It seemed at times that he could not live without her, that she must belong to him. Yet instinctively he knew that to make the slightest advance would be to lose her altogether. Even to lose her from the store, did she so much as mistrust his feelings, he knew was a probability. Yet day after day it became harder to hide the love he had for her, the desire to try and make her return it.

"I know I could make her care if I could try," he would often mutter to himself. Yet he dared not try.

Ruth had no slightest idea that she was more to her employer than any of the other clerks, except as her work made her perhaps a more valuable asset to the firm. She gave herself whole-heartedly to her work, never slighting anything, never asking favors, or presuming in any way because she had found it was necessary. Arthur Mandel was not unaware of this, and he thought the more of her because of it.

"There never was another like her," he said, one day, after she left some finished plans for him to consider. "What is that fool husband of hers thinking of to neglect such a woman?"

That Brian did not call it neglect, that he felt perfectly justified because of what he considered neglect of him, would have surprised Mandel. Had he known that Ruth paid most of the expenses of the living, so that Brian would feel he could use his money for what he liked, would have surprised him still more.

Ruth had paid the rent ever since they took the new and larger apartment. She had paid it in advance, and then as it came due had stopped on her way home and paid the agent. She explained to Brian that, as she had to go right by his office, it would be foolish for him (Brian) to make a trip up there purposely to pay it. After the second month it had not been mentioned; but Ruth went right on paying. She also paid Rachel. Brian looked over the grocery and meat bills, and paid those as well as the gas and electric light. But often Ruth brought in a roast or a chicken, fruit, etc, so the bills were small. She was determined that Brian should not feel embarrassed because he had money in his pockets. Had she known that almost every cent outside of that expended on the home, his smoking and carfare, was spent with Mollie King, or in some way to be with her, she might not have been so generous in her impulses.

Brian had gone regularly twice a week for his lessons, Tuesday, and Friday. He came home punctually at about ten-thirty, and aside from asking how he was getting along, had not again questioned. But Mollie had one night remarked that it was a pity to go away up-town and then back again. Brian decided that it WAS a pity, and also unnecessary. He would stay down to dinner the nights he took his lessons, and then go home earlier.

He mentioned the subject to Ruth.

"I can get a snack, Ruth, then have my lesson early and get home at nine instead of ten."

Ruth had acquiesed, as she usually did, in anything Brian proposed that would make him more comfortable.

Somewhy she happened to mention the next Tuesday night that there was no need of hurrying away—Mandel had told her she needn't stay, although there was important work to do—because she was alone. He at once seized upon the fact and asked her to dine with him.

"If you will, I shall accept your offer to remain until seven. If not I can't allow you to do so," he had said so kindly that Ruth had agreed to take dinner with him after they had finished the work in hand.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

This foretold when the War would end. What does it say?

CAN you work this out? Do you want to know how it was decided long before peace came when the war would be over? The answer is contained within the 48 squares above. What is the answer? Solve it and valuable prizes await you.

HOW TO SOLVE IT

The above squares hold the answer. It is in one sentence of nine words, containing forty letters. Each letter is represented by a number, and that number is the position of the letters in the alphabet. For instance, A is represented by the figure 1, as it is first in the alphabet, and so on. Now, to help you get started, we will tell you that the first letter in the puzzle is "W," because W is the 23rd letter in the alphabet. Get to work and figure out the words in the sentence, and try to find the answer to the great question, "When will the war be over?" It is not easy, but it is worth while trying for.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DAN CUPID—MAGICIAN

A Ring That Told a Story

By HARRY HOUDINI.

In agony of apprehension Williams started to arrange his modest conjuring apparatus. A few hours earlier his debut as a parlor entertainer had been a matter of joyous and ambitious anticipation. Now the brocaded walls of Senator Morgan's music room fairly threatened to close in and choke him, while the fragrance of hothouse flowers oppressed him strangely. He wondered how he had ever dared to ask the vaudeville agent who supplied Mrs. Morgan and other fashionable hostesses with talent to let him substitute for Thorley, the eminent magician who had fallen a victim to la grippe.

"Can I help you in any way? I am Miss Morgan. The servants are all busy with supper, and I thought—perhaps"—

Young Williams had never thought of needing help, but as he faced the clear eyed, flower-like girl and the echo of her well modulated voice rang in his ears he felt that his one hope of succeeding lay in her presence. Men and women wiser in the social world than Frank Williams had fallen under the spell of Helen Morgan's rare sympathy and charm and wondered how this girl of high ideals and gentle manners could be the daughter of Senator Morgan, ponderous with the arrogance of newly acquired wealth, and Mrs. Morgan, who radiated commonplace attributes as her recently purchased diamonds scintillated light.

At Frank's faltering thanks Helen Morgan began quietly, but deftly, to carry out his instructions, placing a light gilt table here, a taboret there, and where it would be within reach of the conjurer's hand a candle or a gleaming revolver. And, though afterward Frank Williams could not tell how it had happened, before the settings for his act were prepared the girl had drawn out his tale of half tragic struggle, the prosaic, hard headed father storming over the visionary, inexplicable nature of his youngest son, the loyal mother secretly brooding over and abetting this odd chick of her little flock, his constant endeavor to learn the secrets of magic and then to secure a hearing, even the rented dress suit and the gold watch which had been pawned that very afternoon to buy bonbons and gilded trinkets to distribute among his youthful auditors. And as he finished it seemed to Helen Morgan that she stood in the presence of a struggling genius. She had read such stories of poets, musicians and inventors.

The performance was a great success. The children were duly mystified and more than delighted with the showers of trinkets and bonbons which apparently came from an inexhaustible source. Mrs. Morgan had condescended to express her appreciation, a footman had served a supper of such rare delicacies that Frank had longed to pack them all up with his paraphernalia and take them to his mother, and now as he walked down the broad avenue leading from the house he felt as if the house behind him was fairyland indeed and Helen Morgan its princess.

But he was roused from his dream by a grim faced butler, who came hurrying after him.

"You're to come back to the house," was the brusque order, and, re-entering his fairyland, Williams faced Senator Morgan, a glowering figure, in the foreground and Mrs. Morgan, a hysterical one, in the background. But in the eyes of the third he read pity, the same tender pity which he had seen in her eyes when Helen Morgan had stooped to pick up his trick rabbit as the frightened animal, escaping from his pocket and trembling at the shouts of the children, had run to the girl for protection.

"It's jail for you, young man, unless you produce my wife's rings. She left them behind the rock crystal vase in the music room, and we don't propose to have them 'disappeared' as you do handkerchiefs and rabbits."

The scene which followed was a horrible nightmare to the young magician—his own protestations of innocence drowned in Mrs. Morgan's hysterics, Senator Morgan's orders for an officer, Helen's pleading for time to search and finally the discovery of the rings by a maid in Mrs. Morgan's dressing room. And when it was all over Williams was thrust out in the night through a side entrance, feeling more like a thief than an acquitted man. Then suddenly a gentle hand fell upon his arm, and a gentler voice murmured in his ear:

"Just a minute, please. I want to tell you how sorry I am. I hoped this would be the greatest night of your life"—

For one long minute the young man who had his own way to make and the girl whose future had been assured so far as wealth could accomplish this feat looked into each other's eyes. And the soul of the man, suddenly born, went out to the divine tenderness of innate womanliness which is a greater power than mere physical beauty. He spoke quietly, but with new found confidence.

"It has been a wonderful, wonderful night to me, and some day I am coming back to tell you why."

* * * * * * * *

Under the chaperonage of a dowager duchess who knew how to turn her title to financial account Helen Morgan was "doing" the London season. In a Mayfair drawing room she sat, and beside her was a man with a monocle, an English accent above reproach and a patronizing air. Of course the Morgan millions would mean the remantling of his ancestral but crumbling castles. But then the utter indifference of this girl irritated him even while it commanded his admiration.

"I suppose you saw Erskine in Paris. He's been the go over there—made by the American set, I understand. They say it's his manners as much as his art that got the women all going. He never speaks during his performance and has the most inscrutable eyes. Never could understand why women went in so heavily for eyes. Conjurers bore me, as a rule, but I'm curious to see this man."

Helen Morgan hardly heard what the man with the monocle was saying.

"Erskine!"

In a secret drawer of her jewel case there lay a card, "Frank Erskine Williams," the card of the man who had never come back, never sent her a message in five years, the man who had forgotten! But, no; this could not be he, for the man who had promised had a ready tongue—yes, a ready tongue, as all men had—who promised.

A flutter of fans and a murmur of subdued interest announced that the lion of the evening had arrived. A quick inclination of the head, a snapping of long, slender fingers, and the performance was under way. With lightning rapidity and wonderful deftness the conjurer worked, and the breathless audience watched, not so much the tricks as the unsmiling lips, the inscrutable eyes.

Only one person in the fashionable audience saw something more, and that a quivering, blue eyed girl who for one brief second had met and held the magician's glance and seen burning in those inscrutable eyes a fire which had burned there on a night five years before, a fire lit centuries agone in the eyes of the world's first man—Adam.

The assistant called for a ring with which his master would work a new trick. Mechanically Helen Morgan handed him a magnificent hoop of pearls. Erskine took the ring gravely, raised a silver hammer and apparently smashed the trinket into a thousand pieces on an anvil of curiously wrought silver. Then he produced a sealed casket of water, in which swam a goldfish, and in the mouth of the fish he found the hoop of pearls. But the ring was not returned to its owner by the assistant. Instead, as the room rang with applause, the magician himself walked quietly down the aisle, formed by the parting of many silken skirts, and placed the ring on the girl's trembling white hand. Not even the man with the monocle noticed that the conjurer for an instant held the slim fingers in his with a pressure that threatened to crush them, nor did he dream that within the girl's palm lay another ring at which she dared not look.

Somewhat awkwardly she slipped on her long white glove. She was so deeply engaged in this operation that she did not even see the conjurer as he left the improvised stage. In the privacy of the boudoir hours later she met the conjurer's ring under the light of a blazing electrolier.

"Such an odd—I was almost going to say ugly—ring," she murmured as she slipped it on her finger and turned it this way and that. A diamond, an emerald, an amethyst, a ruby, another emerald, a sapphire and a topaz formed the brilliant half hoop. Then suddenly her cheeks burned crimson. She had read the story of the many colored gems. Their first letters spelled "dearest," the message of the man who had not forgotten his promises.

With her chocolate the next morning came an oddly shaped French gray envelope, bare of crest or monogram.

"Forgive my temerity of last night," ran the message within, "but for years I have been carrying that ring in my pocket, waiting for our meeting. They were the first gems I bought when success came my way, and I gathered them one by one, each perfect in its way and worthy the one woman in all the world. Yet last night I heard you were to marry the Earl of Warburton. If this is true, do what you will with the ring. If it is but an idle rumor, drop me a single word to the Hotel Cecil, 'Come.'"

Erskine laid aside the morning papers, heralding him as the fashionable world's new found idol, to answer a summons to the phone. The voice at the other end of the wire faltered, then grew firm and strong: "Come. I could not wait to write."

Make Your Hens Lay More Eggs

Whether eggs bring 30c. or $1.00 per dozen, the profit from hens is in the number of eggs they lay. Make your hens lay more eggs by giving them proper feed. Ordinary grain feed and mill-mixtures will keep poultry alive and supply the elements that develop yolks, but, for complete eggs, you must give hens egg-making feed which produces whites in equal proportion to yolks. Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder are the result of scientific research and many years of practical experience in developing a feed that is a perfectly balanced egg-producing combination. To users of Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder, we give a guarantee of MORE EGGS or YOUR MONEY BACK. Canker Sores.

Canker sores in the mouth result from a badly balanced diet. The stomach digestion may be satisfactory and yet cankers may develop. To cure cankers burn them with some aromatic sulphuric acid applied to the ulcers with a wooden toothpick. To prevent them eat regularly, properly and slowly. The diet should be a proper balance between vegetables, fruits, meat and bread. Constipation must be prevented. Cankers have a purpose. They warn. If the warning is not heeded more serious trouble follows.

Lakefield Men Returning Home

Christmas Treat for the Children—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 2. — Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, has received notice that the following Lakefield soldiers have landed in Halifax and are on their way home: Sig. P. W. Johnson, C.E., Pte. E. Tighe, Pte. J. Montgomery.

The first named soldier has been overseas more than two years with the Canadian Engineers, and the two latter are men of the 93rd Battalion. Pte. Montgomery will visit his sister, Mrs. McIlmoyle on Queen street, before proceeding to his home in Hall's Bridge. Pte. Montgomery enjoys the distinction of being the first repatriated prisoner to return to Lakefield.

Christmas Treat.

Owing the destruction of the dishes belonging to St. John's church, in the recent fire at the Town Hall, the annual Christmas treat for the children of the Sunday school could not be held on the usual day. Instead a sleigh drive was given the children, followed by games in the Sunday school. The prizes for the year's work were distributed, after which the children dispersed. The following were the prize winners:

Class I—Mrs. Mahood's— 1st prize, Grace Watson; 2nd prize, Madeline Junkin and Etta Webdale equal.

Class II—Miss Ogilvie— 1st prize, Helen Everett; 2nd prize, Gussie Fairbairn.

Class III—Miss G. Hampton— 1st prize, Fern Wannamaker; 2nd prize, Hazel Crawford.

Class IV—Mrs. Marling—1st prize, May Mahood; 2nd prize, Helen Watson.

Class V—Miss Hilliard—1st prize, Eric Morin; 2nd prize, Enith Wannamaker.

Class VI—Mrs. T. Waldon — 1st prize, Spencer Hope; 2nd prize, Roy Everett.

lass VII—Miss Graham—1st prize, Gwendolyn Simpson; 2nd prize, Ruth Crawford.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. Waldon

GERMANS NOT YET FEELING REAL PINCH

Food Situation, Though Bad, Is Not Dangerous at Present.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION.—The general situation in Germany as regards supplies of all kinds is bad, but it is not immediately serious, reports of American intelligence officers show.

After a two weeks' investigation throughout the entire area occupied by the American forces, these officers reported that the food situation is not dangerous at the present time. They believe that within a short time, working people in the towns will begin to feel a real pinch.

Stocks now on hand, it is asserted, are sufficient to last until February 1 or 15, in the towns, while the farmers have been sufficiently foresighted to store their stocks until they have enough to last through the winter. Inasmuch as a greater part of the region is agricultural, conditions as a whole are fairly good. Many persons in the Moselle Valley —winegrowers— will be forced to buy foodstuffs

TALES OF THE V.C.

Sergt. Percy Clyde Stratton, Military Medal, Australians.

By LIEUT. J. P. LLOYD.

On the afternoon on the 12th of August, 1918, the 37th and 40th Battalions of the Australian Imperial Force attacked in the neighbourhood of Proyart, south of the Somme. The enterprise was of more than local importance because the long ridge east of the village of Proyart commanded the ground beyond the Somme. Any advance in the bend of the river at Etinehem must be preceded by the capture of the Proyart Ridge.

Our soldiers as they came out of Proyart towards the railway which skirts the ridge were swept by a terrible machine gun fire. Yet by 6 o'clock the 40th, on the right, were beyond the railway, and the 37th had reached it.

There was still stern fighting before them. Nests of snipers and machine guns lurked hidden here and theree in the shell torn ground in front. The right company of the 37th Battalion were faced by no less than five of these strongholds, one 50 yards and four a hundred yards away. There was one post, too, upon the Chuignes road, and two more on the bare slopes of the Proyart Ridge.

One by one these strongholds were taken. The honour of taking the first of them fell to the 37th. Six or eight men of this battalion, leaping suddenly out of their trenches, ran shouting towards the nearest post. Some of them fell by the way, but the others reached the Germans, and killed them all with the bayonet. Yet they died in the moment of victory. As they turned to go back to their own lines, they were caught by a hail of bullets from the machine guns in the rear, and not a man of them escaped.

But vengeance was close at hand. Sergeant Stratton, of the left Company of the 40th, had seen what these brave men had done and how they had died. Pausing only to shout to some of his men to follow him, he climbed over the parapet. A corporal and two privates of his Company went after him into the storm of lead that drove in gusts across No Man's Land, but when they came to the nearest of the four remaining posts they saw its occupants, all dead, lying beside a silent gun and the Sergeant running towards the second post, firing his revolver as he ran.

The bree men followed their leader, but the bullets were coming thicker than ever now. Before they reached their goal, the Corporal fell wounded and one of his companions was killed.

The Germans in the second post shared the fate of their fellows in the first. One of them charged down upon Sergeant Stratton with the bayonet, but the Australian was ready for him. Swerving to one side, he wrenched the rifle from his hands, and drove the bayonet home into the body of its late owner.

Meanwhile the tenants of the two remaining posts, thinking discretion the better part of valour, had abandoned their machine guns and fled. Our Lewis gunners did not miss this opportunity, and death overtook the fugitives before they had run far.

The two Australians took the change to regain their own lines. They raced for the shelter of the embankment with German bullets singing about their ears. The men of their company had seen what they had done, and as the pair of them leapt down into safety, the sound of a great cheer went up along the Australian trenches.

Later in the evening Sergt. Stratton with two volunteers went out to the scene of his triumph and brought in all the wounded under heavy fire.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat which Clogs Kidneys, then Back Hurts and Bladder Bothers You.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Vienna People Are in Sad State

Insufficient Food had made even the Children Wizened.

VIENNA, December 30. — The Department of Health has just issued a sensational report regarding the suffering of the Viennese since the beining of the war. Though people require from 2,500 to 5,500 food calories daily, the Vienna war rations (still in force and not always obtainable at that) yielded only 746 calories a day.

The result has been that a large number of persons have lost upwards of 38 pounds in the last four years. Even the wealthy lost an average of 28 pounds. Deaths rose appallingly, the city of Vienna alone registering 46,131 last year against 33,268 in 1914.

Every fourth death within the city boundaries is now due to tuberculosis which has assumed proportions that cause the doctors the gravest alarm. Although it is impossible to tell the number of the deaths due to starvation the report states that from 7 to 11 per cent. of the deaths this year have been due to underfeeding, but official reports of post-mortem examinaitions say that the percentage is much higher, ranging between 24 and 30 per cent.

The health of the children is causing great anxiety, for out of 56,800 examined during the year by the medical authorities, only 4,637 were found in a healthy condition. Their loss in weight is considerable, especially in children between 10 and 17 years of age whose average weight is only 77 pounds, whereas the normal average should be 95 pounds.

Moreover these children have not grown at all since the outbreak of the war with the result that the generation of future mothers and fathers consists largely of stunted adolescents, with prematurely old faces, pallid and hollow-eyed.

Wizened Children.

Vienna's industrial districts are filled with undersized, odd looking youngsters who never were young. Their wizened appearance is probably also due to all-night vigils outside the meat markets and other food stores, where they waited in the worst weather on empty stomachs, with insufficient clothing and with holes in their boots.

Another medical survey shows that out of every 1,000 children, 491 suffer from general debility, 137 from anaemia, 90 from catarrh of the lungs, 76 from bronchitis, 23 from heart disease, and 182 from malnutrition.

The State sick fund for the city of Vienna reports that the number of patients last year was 74,600 compared with 54,200 in 1914. The majority of these cases were caused by stomach and intestinal disorders, owing to insufficient food.

In the city's asylum for the aged poor, the staple diet is and has for a long time been cabbage and turnips, the latter of the quality formerly given to cattle, but promoted during the war to be food for human beings.

THE EXCEPTION.

(By Minna Irving.)

Everybody's doing it—the big and little kings,
The princelets and the dukelets and embryo kaiserlings;
E'en Enver Pacha's grabbed some gold and shot the chutes that run
From European palaces into oblivion.
The fad has crossed the water, and our own great McAdoo
Has caught the trend of fashion and has abdicated, too;
And Ryan, also, growing tired of aerial affairs,
Will soon return to issuing his gilt-edged copper shares.

I would not be a bit surprised to see the sun resign
His lighting contract, and the moon and stars refuse to shine,
For Dr. Harry Garfield, in a manner most polite,
Has signified his wish to leave his throne of anthracite;
And we can eat until our belts once more our middles fit,
For Herbert Hoover—so they say—has also up and quit.
George Creel and Bruce Bielaski their notice, too, are giving,
Lo! everybody abdicates but old Hi Costa Living!

HANDLED 75,000 TONS OF BEETS AT CHATHAM

CHATHAM, January 3. — The Dominion Sugar Company plant here has shut down after a good run with sugar beets. Some 75,000 tons of beets were sliced. Owing to the wet weather a large quantity of beets which would have come here will now be sent to the plant in Wallaceburg. The local plant will start operations next week with raw cane sugar. The officials of the company express themselves as well pleased with the conditions this year.

Rescuers Fight With Raging Seas in Rescue Work Off Fire Island

Two Hundred Helpless Wounded American Soldiers Still Aboard Wrecked Transport, Together With Crew of 466.

"ALL'S WELL

(Special to The Examiner.)

FIRE ISLAND, Jan. 4.—Hidden from sight of those on shore by a blinding blizzard, which came whooping out of the northeast on the wings of a gale, the transport "Northern Pacific" was severely hammered by a rising sea this morning. Two hundred helpless wounded American soldiers and the crew of 466 were still aboard.

During occasional lapses in the winds' intensity, sounds on the stricken troopship could be faintly heard above the breakers' roar. The cry of "alls well" from the watch, the note of the ship's bell coming as if from a great distance, told the watchers ashore that the vessel was still holding out.

Those rescued yesterday included every woman aboard the Northern Pacific and the larger part of the men who were either unwounded or who had sufficiently recovered to be classified as "walking cases." Many were brought ashore through the surf by means either of the breeches buoy or of a lifeboat rigged so as to be operated as a "boat trolley" by cables stretched between the ship and the storm beaten shore. Before the trolley device was placed in operation, however, several boatloads were rowed ashore by the guards in their lifeboats, though at the most imminent peril to passengers and crew.

Hurled Into Breakers.

Twice the trolley device, through the heavy seas, caused the whip cables to foul the gunwale of the craft, overturning it and cast its ten or twelve passengers into the pounding breakers. Rescuers rushed into the surf from the shore and all were saved, though first aid and artificial respiration had to be resorted to in the cases of some of those longest submerged.

The work of taking off the refugees was abandoned only at nightfall and will be resumed at daybreak. To attempt to land any of the stretcher cases by the methods employed was regarded as wholly impracticable.

Barrels of oil were broached and spread over the seas in the hope of calming the water and thus making to-day's task of transfer less dangerous.

Women Taken Off First.

When the work of rescue began, about ten o'clock yesterday morning, the guards at first employed only their lifeboat, rowing it out through the surf to the beached ship, which lay then not more than two hundred wards from the shore line of Fire Island. The first who were thus brought ashore were the seventeen women, all Red Cross nurses returning home from their overseas duties. Thus the life savers maintained the time honoured tradition of the sea. There were no children on board the transport, but the women those first assured of safety.

Eager to Help in Rescue.

While one of these midair passages through the spray was in progress about two o'clock the lee whip caught on the stern of the liftboat, overturning it and tipping its load into the sea at a point about a hundred yards from the beach, where scores of willing helpers were watching the venture.

A shout of alarm was raised as the forms were seen struggling in the surf and the strong undertow, which was rapidly sweeping its victims down the coast.

Two of those who had been thrown out rose to the surface under the overturned boat and their position was most precarious.

A third volunteer who lost no time in dashing into the breakers to drag out the foundering men when the boat overturned was Bert Collins, a United States seaman attached to the U-boat chasers base at New London, Conn. He saved one of the men, but, like Vanderveer, made light of his exploit. "Oh, I just jumped in to pull some guy out," said the latter when he was asked about his deed. "I don't know who he was." All the rescuers were tenderly cared for by the nurses and physicians, who were present in force to make themselves useful.

Cigarettes and Whiskey.

To practically every man, as he was brought ashore from the stranded transport, cigarettes and whiskey were tendered by willing hands. Most of the men accepted the courtesy gratefully. But there was one exception. Father J. R. O'Mahoney, whose residence is in New York, but who is the chaplain of the Twenty-sixth infantry, came across the vertex between ship and shore chilled and wet from the flying spray. He held up his hands in expostulation when cigarettes were tendered, but smilingly accepted a swallow of spirit when a flask was extended. "That is different," he said with a smile.

SUBMARINES LOCATED BY THE COMMISSION.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—One hundred and seventy submarines, all under construction, were found when the Inter-Allied Naval Commission visited Germany. These U-boats will be turned over to the Allies. Germany's newest battleship, Baden, will be surrendered at a British port within a few days. The Baden is a battleship of the very latest type. It has a displacement of 28,000 tons.

Wood Supply in Peterboro

Prices Paid for Wood Sold at Cost in Towns Like Guelph.

The cost of handling wood often exceeds the cost of cutting it into cordwood, and the original purchase price of the timber lot. Peterborough, together with many other centres, has had more than one opportunity to purchase cordwood at from five dollars a cord and upwards. Even at the low cost of five dollars a cord the city could not ship it in and handling for anythinug less than twelve or fourteen dollars a cord according to the location of the wood. It is this factor that has prevented the city from securing a larger wood supply.

Situation In Guelph.

The City of Guelph has had a similar experience. They were permitted by the Government to secure certain supplies of wood from Algonquin Park at cost.

The wood was handled at cost without profit to anybody and sold to the citizens of Guelph at the following schedule of prices:

4 ft. wood, per cord, delivered, $13.50.
4 ft. wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $7.15.
16 in. wood, per cord, delivered, $14.50.
16 in. wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $7.90.
12 in. wood, per cord, delivered, $14.75.
12 in wood, per ½ cord, delivered, $8.15.

The above prices apply only to wood which is ordered so that it can be delivered from the cars.

THE PEACE SETTLEMENT

British Ambassador Reading Will Probably Return to America With Wilson.

WILSON IN ITALY

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — British Ambassador Reading will probably return to America with President Wilson, according to information reaching the State Department to-day.

This fact is regarded as quite important, since it was reported when Lord Reading returned home several months ago he and the President differed vastly on the war aims or peace terms.

That he and the President should return at the same time is regarded as a very sure evidence of British American agreement at the present time. President Wilson's visit to London is deemed here to have swept aside any differences of viewpoint arising between the two nations, and to have made them a unit in peace terms at the forthcoming Versailles session.

It is felt that the French Premier's recent statement favouring the balance of power idea does not indicate in reality, an essential obstacle to the peace plans. It is believed that French politics prompted his statement at a time when his opponents were seeking to drive him into the open. France will be for the League of Nations at the proper time, it is said.

Italian Visit.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Jan. 4.— The visit of President Wilson to Pope Benedict at the Vatican to-day was regarded as one of the most important events of the President's Italian visit. It was believed that a clear understanding would be reached regarding the church's attitude toward the vital principles of the peace settlement.

Previous to his audience with the Pope, the President conferred with Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, regarding certain angles of political subjects that were later taken up with the Pontiff.

The President went to the Vatican direct from the American Embassy, where he had lunched with Ambassador Page. This was in deference to the peculiar relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal, which made it desirable that the President should proceed to the Vatican from America rather than Italian territory. The Embassy, of course, is regarded as being on American soil.

Conferences with Premier Orlando and other Italian statesmen were scheduled for the President after his return from the Vatican.

Presentation to Lakefield Man

Foresters Install Officers for the Year.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 4.—The following officers were installed at Court Lakefield No. 43, Canadian Order of Foresters, by Mr. Hesley Sherin, installing officer, on Thursday evening, January 2nd:

P.C.R.—Bro. J. E. Galvin.
C.R.—Bro. R. J. Jory.
V.C.R.—Bro. David Darling.
Chap.—Bro. James Campbell.
Fin.-Sec.—Bro. Charles Thompson.
Rec.-Sec.—Bro. W. M. Graham.
Treas.—Bro. G. B. Hilliard.
S.W.—Bro. John Northcott.
J.W.—Bro. Robert Garbutt.
S.B.—Bro. Percy Watson.
J.B.—Bro. John E. Richardson.
Court Physician—Bro. Dr. J. R. Fraser.

At the close of the installation, the retiring chief ranger called on Bro. Wesley Sherin to come forward and addressed him on behalf of the Court.

He was sad as well as pleased to be addressing Bro. Sherin, sad that they were losing a very faithful, efficient and painstaking financial secretary, one who had been untiring in his efforts to attend to the financial affairs of the court, from which they were sorry to accept his resignation. It was his pleasant duty to present him on behalf of the members of the Court with a silk umbrella and a Briar pipe in a case. He hoped the umbrella would protect him from the storms of life and that he would enjoy many an evening's comfort from the pipe.

Bro. Sherin was completely taken by surprise and thanked the members for their handsome gifts which he greatly appreciated. He had been recording-secretary for two years, and financial-secretary for twenty-eight years, making a continuation of office for thirty years, and thought it wise to retire from the office after such long service.

The Conditions Are Terrible

British Prisoners of War in Germany Dying Off Rapidly From Influenza.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The terrible conditions existing in the prisoners' camp at Pachim, Mecklenburg, are described by Sefton Delmer, the Daily Mail's special correspondent in Berlin, who visited the camp. He says: "The prisoners, hourly waiting to go to Stettin for the voyage home, are dying off rapidly from influenza. The German doctor leaves the camp at 6 o'clock every evening and locks his medicine cupboard before he goes. The prisoners had a terrible Christmas fighting influenza with their bare hands, so to say. On the day after Christmas the British were asked to furnish a burying party and found 17 dead men lying as they had been flung into the mortuary. All had been stripped, even of their shirts, and were unwashed, the sanitation servants having gone to Berlin for the holiday."

The Withdrawal of Japanese Troops in Siberia Is Bitterly Deplored.

LACK OF HARMONY

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The announcement that 24,000 Japanese troops will withdraw from Siberia is reported by a Tokio despatch to the Express, quoting an official statement issued by the Japanese War Office on Dec. 27. The statement, according to the despatch, says that Japan intends to maintain henceforth only the smallest possible forces in Siberia. "Public opinion here," says the despatch, "deplores the withdrawal. Allied observers, Americans as well as British, speak bitterly of the intervention as being, relatively failure, owing to disunity among the Allies and their mutual jealousies."

LABOUR MEN CURIOUS ABOUT ORIGIN OF THE MURRAY TECHNICALITY

Labour men are not alarmed by the statement in the Review last nigh that Mr. Murray is likely to be debarred by a technicality," and prevented from taking his seat in the Council to which he ratepayers have elected him. The technicality of paying 25 cents a year to the city for the rent of a strip of land on which his fence is erected is explained in a letter from Alderman-Elect Murray in another column. Workingmen allege that for years past some aldermen and mayor's have occupied the city's land for which they paid rent and there was never an effort to disqualify them. They are also somewhat curious to learn origin of this manoeuvre which if successful would either require a new election or automatically advance Mr. A. H. Stratton from the eleventh to the tenth position.

It is freely stated that some person having knowledge of what the Labour men declare to be an absurd technicality has lost no time in taking advantage of it. Mr. Murray's formal lease has been standing for several years. It has been stated that this flaw was known before the election, but was probably deemed unnecessary for use because the up-town electors did not concede the Labour men a "look-in" at the polls.

Mr. Murray can cancel he lease by removing the fence, and thus circumvent the difficulty.

A GREAT CROWD WILL SEE "THE BETTER 'OLE" TO-DAY

Ask Any One of the Great Number Who Have Seen It What They Think of It—A Great Picture.

The Grand Opera House had two big houses yesterday to see 'The Better 'Ole' bigger than the day before and they were large audiences. If ever there was a picture appreciated in Peterborough it is this one. It is aptly described as the "British Birth of a Nation" and is a great war picture without any of the horrors of war. Bill, Bert and Alf are a great trio, typical of the British soldier and artists of exceptional ability.

See the picture today at the Grand and you will be glad you did not miss it. Matinee and evening.

DENIES EXISTENCE OF ULTIMATUM

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Foreign Office denies that a British ultimatum has been sent to the German commander in the Baltic region, as has been reported. It also declares it has had no reports of the landing of large British forces in Baltic provinces.

Visit Concludes This Evening

Another Dinner Will Wind Up Wilson's Visit to Rome.

(United Press.)
(By Robt. J. Bender.)

ROME, January 4. — President Wilson's strategy in driving straight to the heart of the Balkan situation was discussed by the people and the politicians alike to-day. It has promoted a freedom of expression that is expected to go far toward clarifying the relations of Italy and the new Slavic states, which have been somewhat tense of late.

The President's statement in his speech before the Chamber of Deputies yesterday evening that the Balkan people must now be independent, was believed to be a broad hint that Italo-Slavic differences must be adjusted and that Italy must join the other associated powers in promoting the establishment of a strong Slavic nation.

It is understood that there has been something approaching a cabinet crisis in Italy in regard to this very matter, the conflict of Italian and Slavic aspirations. Some of the Italian newspapers had predicted that Wilson's visit and his resultant attitude towards the trans-Adriatic political tangle, would precipitate the crisis.

The President visited historical spots to-day and laid wreaths on the tombs of Emmanuel II., and King Humbert. He was shown about the Pantheon and the Roman Forum, and went to the Academy Liucei.

After his audience with Pope Benedict the President received a delegation of Protestant bodies.

During the afternoon he conferred with with Premier Orlando, Cabinet members, and other Italian leaders. The formal programme of his visit in Rome is to close to-night with a dinner at the Quirinal.

A JOB FOR HINDENBURG

Has Been Invited to Lead a Volunteer Force Against the Poles in Posen.

PROTEST LODGED

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 4.—Berlin advices state that Polish troops have complete control of Posen. The despatch stated that Prussian Minister Ernst had conferred with some Polish delegates, and that the latter had agreed that no attempt would be made to sever the province of Posen from Prussia before the matter could be taken up at the peace conference.

It is not known whether these delegates had sufficient authority to effect an understanding by which the Polish union would be called off. Ernst is said to have admitted, after the conference, that the eastern portion of Posen province is in the hands of the Poles.

Volunteer Force.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Berlin will request Hindenburg to lead a German volunteer force against the Poles in Posen and revolutionary elements in Silesia, according to diplomatic advices to-day.

Germany objects to the Silesian manoeuvres on the ground that they are directed by the Czecho-Slovaks and the Poles and to the proposed Polish elections in Posen as in violation to the armistice, it was held. Cables indicated that Berlin has lodged protests in both matters with the United States and has warned the Entente that she will be compelled to protect herself unless Paris, London and Washington intervenes.

Getting Alarmed.

Special to The Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 4.— The Berlin Vossische Zeitung, alarmed at Bolshevik "inhuman cruelties," hints that a union will be effected between the Germans and the British to oppose the advance of the Soviet army toward the Baltic.

Children Killed.

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Jan. 4.—Several children parading at Posen in honour of Ignace Jan Paderewski, were killed when the Germans fired upon them with machine guns, it was reported here to-day.

Five soft-nosed bullets entered the room where Paderewski sat, but he was uninjured. He arrived here to-day with Col. Wade of the British army.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3RD, 1919.

SUPPORT THE COUNCIL.

As might be expected, all citizens of Peterborough are not pleased with the new council that has just been elected, and as might also be expected much of the complaint that is heard comes from electors who failed to register their votes on Wednesday. But wherever the dissatisfaction has its source, it is a feeling that should not exist in ePterborough. There is neither commonsense nor British fair play in condemning the Aldermanic Board before they have taken office, and before they have had a chance to show what they can do. There should be with a council composed to a great extent of new blood, an enrichment in ideas and plans brought forward. Not all of these of course are likely to prove feasible, but at the least they will be a sign of progress.

Give the new board a chance. The present is not the time for criticism or complaint. If the new council fails to measure up to its responsibilities, there may be occasion for grumbling. But it is the present duty of every citizen to fall in behind the new council and see to it that they do not fail—at least that they do not fail because of lack of support from their fellow citizens. The men that have been elected were put there by the electors ;the responsibility of the latter towards their civic duties should not end with their marking of a ballot.

THE NEW RATES.

Neither returned soldiers or the general public are likely to appreciate the new order issued by the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association, at the request of the Dominion Railway War Board, and which cancells all special privileges and reduced fares. The object of the order is to conserve rolling stock so that as many cars as possible can be diverted to the task of bringing the returning soldiers from the seaboard. It is thought that the elimination of club rates, such as have been given in the case of parties of ten or more will reduce the amount of travelling, although hockey clubs and other such organizations will have to use the trains as much as ever ,and the new order will not prevent them from travelling but will only make the operation more expensive.

One part of the order that will cause regret is that referring to soldiers, who for the past two years have been given a single fare rate on the Canadian railways to visit their homes during leave of absence from duty. This privilege is now cancelled and all soldiers will have to pay full fare.

THE SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Peterboro which ha snot failed in any patriotic campaign is expected to maintain its reputation in the Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army this month. The cause is in every way a most worthy one and in spite of the cessation of hostilities, the need is great for there is a vast amount of work to be done by the Army among Canada's soldiers and every cent of the million dollars Canada is asked to provide will be required. No war work has met with such general approval as that carried on by the Salvation Army. Returned soldiers are a unit in endorsing the Army's activities and it is worthy of note that the Salvation Army, although among the first in the field is the last to appeal for funds. Peterboro's share of the amount asked for from Canada should be readily forthcoming, and the cause is commended to citizens generally for their support and assistance.

Welfare work among Canadian soldiers and sailors is not completed because the fighting is stopped. If this work should end the demobilization would become demoralization and the fact stands us in the face that now the best effort has yet to be put forth, not so much to keep up the morale as to preserve the morality. Our soldier boys have yet a long siege before them, and it must be remembered that it took more than two years to demobilize after the Franco Prussian war, 18 months to disband the armies in the Turko-Russian war and 15 months after the Russo-Japanese, and it may require longer than that to disband our great armies in this the ending of the greatest war of all times and the morale of our men must be kept while they are in comparative idleness. With a big heart and hands outstretched the Salvation Army stands ready to continue to do her share of helping Canada's sons during these trying days with the many gifts which will come out of the generosity of the people in the Dominion.

The Red Shield Drive Campaign will open January 19th, 1919, the objective for the Dominion will be one million dollars, and every cent will go towards the welfare of Canada's fighting force in the demobilization of the army in the two next years, in the care for soldiers' widows and orphans, in establishing huts and hostels, where the need still remains especially in Siberia and many other places.

AID FOR THE VETERAN.

In an interesting article on the official handling of the returned soldier repatriation problem, the Ottawa Citizen urges the elimination of red tape as much as possible—a plea that will be enthusiastically echoed by the men coming back from overseas. Says the Citizen:

Every man will naturally want to spend a few days looking round, enjoying the novelty of being in civilian clothes again, with feelings of relief on being restored to civil home life in Canada. The careful man will let very little time elapse, however, before setting out to find employment for himself. He will have been told about the department of civil re-establishment, a federal government department created especially to be of service to him during the time when he is getting back to steady employment in private enterprise or civil industry. A provincial government organization, called the Returned Soldiers' Commission, will also possibly have a representative in every city and town. It has been decided between the federal and provincial authorities that the returned men should first call for a talk over general plans, and to get in touch with the federal employment service and other helpful opportunities, through the Provincial Returned Soldiers' Commission.

The duties of the Provincial Commission's representative would seem to be merely to introduce the repatriated citizen—he should no longer be called a "returned soldier"—to the civil re-establishment office. Provided the provincial official does not humbug the applicant for information, with forms to be filled in, and too many official questions to be answered, but does with tact, and informally, the part of welcoming him on behalf of the province, the Returned Soldiers' Commission can be of real help. But there should be no fifth wheels to the coach. The representative of the Provincial Commission should be, whenever possible, in the same office building as the civil re-establishment representatives and the employment service bureau.

The returned man must be protected from too much officialdom, too much cross-questioning and form-filling. He should not have to go to a Provincial Commission office in one part of the city, merely to be passed on after being put through a list of questions, filling in applications and the like, to go through the same performance at a civil re-establishment and employment office in another part of the city. The returned man is liable to be feeling "fed up" with formalities, and far from being in the mood for more, even before he sets out to interview the provincial agents of the Returned Soldiers' Commission and the federal representatives of the civil re-establishment department in the local employment office.

The representative of the department of civil re-establishment in the employment office, or labour bureau, has an important function to perform. There will be employment offices probably in every city of 10,000 or more population, and in smaller towns if the need warrants it. The employment offices are to be state-controlled, organized by the province, but the federal government will exercise the administration of the employment offices by virtue of contributing half the cost of their establishment and upkeep from the federal treasury.

The employment offices are being organized to serve unemployed workpeople of every class in the community; but, as everyone will approve, first attention will be given to the applicant who has served during the war with the Canadian expeditionary force. It is for this special purpose that an office in every labour bureau will be maintained by the department of civil re-establishment. Wherever possible, the agent in charge of the civil re-establishment office will be himself a returned man

EDITORIAL NOTES.

With an army of militant Poles heading towards Berlin, the Germans will have difficulty in believing the war is over.

The Northland probe should be deep and exhaustive. Simple justice to our returning men demands that this shall be the case.

The Germans in Berlin tangoed the New Year in. The allies will teach them some new steps at the peace conference.

The Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army will soon be launched. It should receive hearty support.

Rescuers Fight With Raging Sea

Air Station at Bayshore, flew a seaplane over and around the transport, winging very close to the ship. After looking her over he sped back inland.

Canteens on Beach.

At dozens of points along the beach they established canteens, preparing hot coffee and sandwiches for the rescuers and the survivors as fast as they were landed.

For hours and hours the women kept up this work, pausing for no more substantial food than sandwiches and coffee, without ever seeming to grow tired, nor did they grow excited or scream when the two boats capsized, throwing soldiers and coastguards into the roaring waves. Some in oilskins, some in the uniforms of the various Red Cross auxiliaries to which they belonged, the women laboured indefatigably in the downpour, unmindful of the penetrating wind that chilled to the bone.

These women had made the not unperilous trip across the Great South Bay, despite the exhortations of boatmen to stay on the mainland, for that body of water was almost as rough as the ocean. Heavy seas staggered the small craft used on the bay and drenched most of the women even before they took up their long vigil on the island.

In the second lines, as it were, at Bay Shore, hundreds more made ready for whatever might happen. The streets of the town were filled with motor ambulances, some belonging to the Red Cross Motor Corps, under Dr. Dorothy Smyley, others to the Motor Corps of America, under Major Helen Bastedo. As fast as boatloads of survivors reached the Ocean avenue pier the men were taken to the Naval Aero Station for warm clothing, food and sleeping quarters. The station will accommodate 1,500 of them.

Army Corps men, a few Red Cross workers, the coast guards, the United Press correspondent, and one other newspaper man, were the only persons to remain here during the night, due to the danger of food supplies being cut off by the storm. Rescue vessels stood by, but they were not visible, and even the powerful Fire Island light could not be seen at a distance of a mile.

Modifies Ban On Hun Trade

Germany Will Supply Fuel and Get Raw Materials in Return.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(British Wireless Service). — German appeals against suspension by the Allies of intercourse between the part of German territory occupied by the Allied armies and the rest of Germany have been taken into consideration at the headquarters of Marshal Foch at Luxemburg. A German delegation has been received at the Marshal's headquarters and has been informed that as far as military exigencies permit the appeals have been granted.

According to an arrangement reached with the German Government, the Germans bind themselves to furnish to the occupied zone during the armistice as much fuel as was sent there in the third quarter of 1918 and also such machinery and spare parts as may be required by industries in the occupied region. In return the Allies will appoint a commissioner to arrange for certain quantities of raw materials to be sent across the Rhine into Germany. This will prevent unemployment which otherwise might have resulted—to take one example—in the iron smelting district of Essen and Dortmund, whose supply of iron ore from the Lorraine and Saar region had been suspended since the armistice. In addition the British military governor at Cologne announces that beginning on January 1 importations of foodstuffs, raw materials and expressly authorized manufactured articles from unoccupied Germany will be permitted into the territory occupied by the British troops.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

JUDICIAL SALE

In the Supreme Court of Ontario. In the matter of the estate of William Andrews Collins, deceased.

Judicial sale of island in Stoney Lake in the Township of Burleigh, County of Peterboro.

Pursuant to an order of the supreme Court of Ontario, made in the matter of the above mentioned estate there will be offered for sale by public auction, in one parcel, with the approbation of the Master-in-Ordinary, by Chas. M. Henderson, auctioneer, at 128 King Street, Toronto, at twelve o'clock noon on Wednesday, the 15th day of January, 1919.

All and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the Township of Burleigh, in the County of Peterboro, in the Porvince of Ontario, being composed of the west part of Island No. 22, in Stoney Lake, in the said township of Burleigh, as shown on plan of island in the river of Otonabee and its lakes, made by J. J. Haslett, P.L.S., and filed in the department of Indian Affairs, the said west part being divided from the east part of the said island by a narrow shannel, not shown on the said plan, such channel having been formed by rising water of the lake since survey was made.

The said island is known as "Pinehurst."

The said island is about one-half mile from the Juniper Island Post Office and about two and one-half miles from Burleigh Falls.

On the island is said to be erected a frame cottage.

The property will be offered for sale subject to a reserved bid fixed by the said Master. The purchaser shall pay ten per cent of his purchase money on the day of sale to the vendors or their solicitors and the remainder thereof within 30 days thereafter, into court, to the credit of this matter without interest.

The vendors shall not be required to furnish any abstract of title, and to produce only such deeds, copies thereof, or evidences of title as are in their possession. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of sale of the court.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had from Messrs. Davidson & Folinsbee, Solicitors, 703 Lumsden Building, Toronto, or from Guardian Trust Company, Limited, Administrator of the Estate of William Andrews Collins, deceased.

Dated at Toronto, this 23rd day of December, 1918,

Geo. O. Alcorn.
Master-in-Ordinary.

Why Do We Drink Milk?

Because it supplies building material for the bones, teeth and muscles; it keeps the heart beating regularly; it strengthens the nerves and every other part of the body. It has a growing force which makes weak bodies grow into strong ones.

WOULD OTHER FOOD DO AS WELL?

No other food could be used in its place.
No other one food contains as many of the various growing materials needed by children.
No other one food supplies enough building material for bones and teeth.

HOW MUCH MILK?

Every child ought to have at least one quart of milk a day because it is so easily built up into body tissue.
Milk is also an excellent food for adults. It might take the place of some meat.
At least a cup of milk per adult per day should be used in the food or taken as a beverage.
The food value of the milk is the same whether the milk is taken in cooked foods or as a beverage.
Coffee and tea have no food value.
They are harmful for growing children because they dull the appetite so that the children FEEL satisfied before all the necessary growing material has been supplied.
If milk and sugar are used in the tea and coffee, some food value would be received, but the coffee and tea are not good for growing muscles and nerves.
Milk is the most economical food we have, costing in proportion to food value, less than one-half the amount paid for meat, eggs, chicken, fish, etc.

WHAT IS SAFE MILK?

Ordinary market milk is responsible for more sickness and death than most people think.
There is only one method by which these dangers can be eliminated from our milk supply—that is, SCIENTIFIC PASTEURIZATION.
Insure the health of your baby and your family by ordering our Pasteurized Milk for 1919.

r. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Makes a Few Suggestions for Benefit of Labour

ir: It is so important that we uld proceed with all speed to re- struction after the war and to a rn to the works of peace that I pose no excuse is needed for tak- up your space and the attention the public regarding it. Indeed, view of the unrest and growing d of development in the relations Labour and Industry, it is pru- t to delay not an hour. This is rapidly becoming manifest rywhere. The U. S. and Great ain have jumped to the front in a that would startle the old fogey- of this young country. We must get tuned up to the proper key degree of knowledge of require- ts and then we may proceed with fidence and despatch. What then I wish to call your attention to? the creed adopted at the recent ference of practically all the nufacturers of the U. S. It was one thing done at the conference, details being left to the District ncils throughout the nation and the U. S. National Chamber of mmerce at Washington. From creed Labour will see what Capi- and the Employer proposes as the is of the coming solidarity, It s follows:

I believe that labour and capital partners, not enemies; that their rests are common interests, not osed, and that neither can attain fullest measure of prosperity at expense of the other, but only association with the other.

2. I believe that the community n essential party to industry and t it should have adequate repre- tation with the other parties.

I believe that the purpose of in- try is quite as much to advance al well-being as material well- g and that in the pursuit of that uit the interests of the commun- should be carefully considered, well-being of the employees as pects living and working condi- s should be fully guarded, man- ment should be adequately re- nized and capital should be justly mpensated, and that failure in any these particulars means loss to four.

4. I believe that every man is en- d to an opportunity to earn a liv- to fair wages, to reasonable rs of work and proper working ditions, to a decent home, to the ortunity to play, to learn, to wor- and to love, as well as to toil, that the responsibility rests as vily upon industry as upon gov- ment or society, to see that these ditions and opportunities pre-

5. I believe that industry, efficien- and initiative, wherever found, uld be encouraged and adequately arded, and that indolence and re- ction of production should be dis- tenanced.

6. I believe that the provision of quate means of uncovering griev- es and promptly adjusting them is fundamental importance to the cessful conduct of industry.

7. I believe that the most potent sure in bringing about industrial mony and prosperity is adequate representation of the parties in interest; that existing forms of representation should be carefully studied and availed of in so far as they may be found to have merit and are adaptable to the peculiar conditions in the various industries.

"8. I believe that the most effective structure of representation is that which is built from the bottom up, which includes all employees, and starting with the election of representatives in each industrial plant, the formation of joint works' committees, of joint district councils, and annual joint conferences of all the parties in interest in a single industrial corporatio, can be extended to include all plants in the same industry, all industries in a community, in a nation, and in the various nations.

"9. I believe that the application of right principles never fails to effect right relations; that the letter killeth and the spirit maketh alive; that forms are wholly secondary while attitude and spirit are all imporant, and that only as the parties in industry are animated by the spirit of fair play, justice to all and brotherhood, will any plans which they may mutually work out succeed.

"10. I believe that that man renders the greatest social service who so co-operates in the organization of industry as to afford to the largest number of men the greatest opportunity for self development and the enjoyment by every man of those benefits which his own work adds to the worth of civilization.

Now Labour may rely upon it that this creed will be at the back of Mr. Carvel's head in his talk next Wednesday night. If Labour knows this and has absorbed it, it can ask Mr. Carvel what the government proposes to do about it, and thus possibly we may do our bit towards getting on into a settled stride for the future.

If I were Labour in Peterboro I would interview Mr. Carvel when he comes here and have a chat with him about the best ways and means of providing for the future. It would give me great pelasure to facilitate the matter if the city will allow us to cut into the proposed programme so far. Presenting views to two ministers prior to the session ought to produce some effect ,and at a most important juncture.

November Power Bill in Peterboro Was the Highest in History

Milling Industries in City Will Consume More Power.

Due to the rush of the munition factories to complete the contracts now on hand the power bill for November was the highest in the history of the city. In that month 4,276 horse-power was used, while the highest previous record was for January, 1917, when 3,967 was used. With the closing of the munition plants the rate dropped 1,000 horse-power per month, but this is already being taken up by the flour industry which will use at least 600 horse-power a month. Mr. H. O. Fiske, manager of the Utilities Commission, expects conditions to come back to normal by summer.

FIRE ISLAND BEACH HAS LONG BEEN NEMESIS OF SEA CAPTAINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Nemesis of the sea-captain since the days of the four-masted frigate, Fire Island beach and the entire south shore of Long Island has been the graveyard of many steamships as they hugged close to her shores, picking their way through a dense fog into New York Harbour by the tinkle of her submarine bells.

Before submarine bells made their appearance on the Atlantic seaboard messages of danger were conveyed to all seamen by fires built on the Long Island beach early on the morning of April 6, 1911. There were 1,724 passengers aboard the vessel, but all were rescued by other steamships which went to her assistance.

Fire Island beach more recently was the scene of the sinking of the United States destroyer San Diego on July 19 last, with the loss of six lives. A United States court of inquiry since has decreed the destroyer was sunk by a mine, banishing a previous contention she had been sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine.

Of the numerous steamships and sailing vessels which have run aground on the south Long Island shore during the last decade more than seventy-five per cent. of them were again floated. Among those which suffered total destruction was notably the Baroness, a whaleback barge, which sank off Fire Island on the night of November 10, 1910, with the loss of six lives.

The Baroness was making her way from Newport News, Va., to Providence, L.I., when she was caught in a severe storm. Nestling in close to shore, it is believed, she hit a rock, which stove a hole in her side. She sank with her crew of six men before help could reach her.

Again on May 2, 1908, the four-masted steamship Peter Rickmers went aground and sank off Fire Island. Her crew, however, fared better than that of the Baroness, because they were able to get away in small boats and landed on Long Island near Point o' Woods.

ORANGES TO COME DOWN.

Ottawa Investigates High Prices and Finds No Ground For Action.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The cost of living branch recently made an investigation into the orange market and reports that the chief cause for high prices having been removed, prices during the succeeding months should be decidedly lower. While there are instances of large profits per case handled, there are also instances of loss. Average profits were not so great for the abnormal conditions as to warrant any action against the firms showing apparently large profits.

Now, however, that normal market conditions are restored with the main California crop upon the market, competition should not longer be resrtricted, and the dealers' margins have declined from the former amounts. Nevertheless, we deem it advisable to assure ourselves that profits throughout the winter are reasonable, and for this purpose shall continue our investigations.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS OVERCOME BY SAFE METHOD

Worry, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia.

Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First the blood circulation must be improved:

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes the irritation, because it removes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into overworked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To keep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched, a boon to the sleepless—sold in 50c boxes, six for $2.50 at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Blame Ourselves, Not the Almighty, For Epidemics

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., Punctures an Ancient Belief as to Disease Causes—Pay Wife as Much as Her Husband.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—"I regret to say that the ancient belief that epidemics of disease were visitations from the Almighty has been handed down from generation to generation until to-day many still believe it. To my mind nothing could be more libelous on God than that belief. Let us rather place the blame where it belongs—on ourselves," said Dr. Charles Hastings, city Medical Health Officer, in an address to the members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the King Edward Hotel yesterday.

Continuing on the epidemics and their causes, the doctor regretted the fact that to-day in the Christian burial service the lines "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away" were still used.

"Many times have I thought where the deceased had died from some epidemic that proper care on the part of the authorities might have prevented that it should have read, 'The Lord gave and the municipality hath taken away.'"

Pure Milk, Pure Water.

Speaking of the necessity of a pure water and milk supply for any city, the doctor declared that any case of typhoid fever that had occurred in Toronto during the last five years at least was not traceable to the water supply, which was very pure. The city water was tested six times every twenty-four hours by an expert right out of the taps.

Human hands were the most frequent carriers of disease, and there was great truth in the ancient proverb, "To eat food with unwashed hands, defileth the man."

The doctor then dwelt on the regulations regarding the milk supply, and told how it was possible now to test the milk for barnyard contamination without actually visiting the farms. Barnyard cleanliness plus pasteurizing would guarantee a pure milk supply, and not a quart of milk was to-day sold in Toronto that was not subjected to these requirements and tests.

Give Child a Chance.

Referring to the protection that ought to be given every mother in poor circumstanecs, with her husband incapacitated, he thought it deplorable that she could not obtain work at the same wages and remuneration that her husband or any man would receive, though she might be the breadwinner of the home. Money played altogether too much part in the Governments of to-day, even in the democracies of Britain and the United States.

"I don't know of any system of Socialism existing to-day that does not contain enough anarchy to make it unsafe. But perhaps when all are thrown into the melting pot we will eventually have a true democracy where every child will at least have an opportunity to develop as it should."

In conclusion the doctor stated that it was highly creditable to the manufacturers of Toronto that they had always co-operated fully with the Board of Health in making conditions healthier for their employees.

British Warships In Russian Port

Will Remain Until the Gulf of Riga Freezes Up.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WARSAW, Jan. 4.—The Russian Baltic port of Libau, according to reports received here, is protected by one British cruiser, three destroyers and one gunboat. The British warships, however have landed no forces. The Admiral commanding the squadron visited the Lithuanian commissar at Vilna and promised to remain at Libau until the Gulf of Riga had begun to freeze.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The Bolshevik government of Russia intends to send Adolphe Joffe former Bolsheviki ambassador at Berlin, as its delegate to Paris to claim admission to the peace conference, according to the "Echo De Paris" to-day.

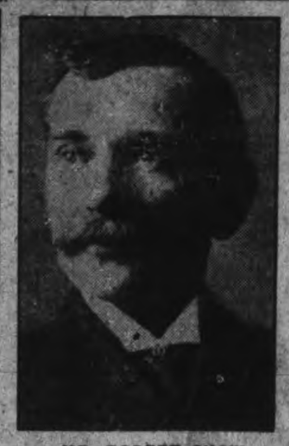
Robert Shaw is Once More Elected Reeve of Harvey

Contests in Some of the Townships on Monday—Reeve Walsh of Dourn Has Retired and Reeve Brown of Asphodel is Opposed.

ELECTIONS ON MONDAY

Some of the Reeves of Peterborough's townships have an election on their hands for Monday. In Dummer C. J. Darling is opposing Reeve Albert Webster, and in Asphodel Andrew Quinlan is a contestant against Maz Brown. Reeve Michael Walsh of Douro has resigned, and Martin Coughlin was elected by acclamation to succeed him. In Harvey township Mr. Ingram resigned, and Robert Shaw was elected by acclamation. Mr. Shaw has had long experience in municipal experience, and will be welcomed back into the County Council fold. Mr. Ingram made a capable representative of Harvey, and held a high place in the opinions of his colleagues of the County Council. W. E. Griffith has been re-elected Reeve of Belmont by acclamation, but Reeve Matheson of Havelock is opposed by W. T. Curtis.



MR. ROBERT SHAW
Is again elected Reeve of Harvey Township, succeeding Mr. Ingram, who has retired.

Close home, Harold B. Rye is running against Reeve John McIntosh in North Monaghan.

Stewards Served Christmas Pudding With Their Hands

Soldiers Testified That Food on the Transport "Northland" Was Much Worse Than in France—Scarcity of Drinking Water, and Stewards Were Dirty.

DISHES UNCLEAN TOO

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Lieut. Vantelet, of the Royal Canadian Field Artillery, for six months in France and wounded at Lens, was the first witness at the Northland inquiry this afternoon. He had been in charge of a Montreal party of returning men, he said, were supposed to clean the vessel, his men being located on the decks below C.

He was in charge personally of D section, and it was his duty to look after mess parades, etc. The men, he said, weer supposed to clean quarters, supply fatigues to bring food, and to wash dishes.

"The stewards were supposed to do what they could and to be assisted by the men on fatigue. The men were responsible for cleaning up dishes and the stewards were expected to help to the best of their ability."

The orderly officer was supposed to inspect quarters every day.

Complaints Made.

Witness had recieved complaints from time to time as to the extent of the rations. "I found that when they got their full rations they were about the same as for troops in training, but the stewards at times served the first men too freely, and had to go back to the galley for more. When they got back in many cases the men had left. The galley was amidships, and it took time to bring it down for the second table. The men got tired waiting. In the nature of the arrangements this could not very well be avoided. This difficulty occurred four or five times, mostly at dinner."

The quality of the food was generally good, though the eggs were not too fresh.

With regard to the steward service he said that at first men were detailed to assist but that later volunteers were called for and this proved more satisfactory.

The men in the galley, he said, always claimed that the quantity of food sent down at first was the full ration for that number of men.

There were complaints about ventilation but these complaints were largely due to the fact that owing to stormy weather portholes had to be closed.

As to Selling Food.

He had heard that stewards were selling food. An order was thereafter read to the troops on parade requesting them not to purchase food from the stewards.

Everybody had been disappointed when they found they could not land on Christmas Day. This disappointment found vent in grumbling. The Christmas dinner given to the men was not a tip top Christmas dinner. There was a good dinner for them had they got on the deck, but they couldn't.

"What kind of a dinner did the officers get?" "Very good."

"Was there any complaints about the ship being verminous?"

"Only this, that the medical officers made an inspection and several of the men were found to be verminous."

Witness stated that at first the officers and sergeants were given a preference as to the side of the ship on which they should promenade according to weather conditions. Later the whole starboard deck was allotted to the men, and there was no more changing about.

Two days out complaints had reached him that the water in the taps was salt. He had tasted it and found it so. He had called the attention of the O. C. of the troops. Major Westmore, to the fact, and the latter declared that it was condemned water. This condition lasted throughout the voyage. The water in the state rooms was fresh, however. He had heard no complaints about the bathing facilities.

Bought Meat at Canteen.

Pte. Lewis Bevis, C.A.M.C., 19 years of age, enlisted in January, 1916, in the 166th Battalion, and had failed to reach France because he was under age. He testified that after the third day out there was not sufficient meat food. He had managed to get enough by buying at the canteen though he had not bought from the stewards.

He had complained and was told that if he would wait till the second sitting he would get more.

"I suppose it is natural to grouch about food all the time," said Mr. Orde. "That is one of our privileges," said witness.

"In fact grouching is common in England?" "But not to the extent it was on this occasion."

Used Word Rotten.

"You are reported as having been interivewed as to conditions and as having declared, 'Absolutely rotten.' Did you say that?"

"Not to that reporter and I did not use the word 'absolutely' either."

"Did you use the word rotten?" asked his lordship. "Yes."

"What did you want to convey?" "That everything in general was not up to the mark. Of course, it was the handiest word to use at the time."

"Did you apply it to the food?" "Not particularly. To general conditions."

"What did you mean by saying that you did not tell it to 'that reporter?'" asked Mr. Orde.

"I saw the words in the Telegram and the Telegram hadn't any man there."

"And I Said 'Rotten.'"

"But a reporter did ask you a question."

"Yes, he asked how things were on the Northland, and I said 'Rotten'."

"If you hadn't been asked for your complaint would you have volunteered it?" "Probably not, I hadn't time. But there were complaints."

"Had you been able to get ashore on Christmas Day would you have complained?"

"We would probably have forgotten all about it."

"You were disappointed at not getting ashore for Christmas?"

"We all were."

On one occasion a steward had come to the door of the quarters and offered to sell food. He had been told that they didn't want any of his stuff.

Corporal Floyd Higgins, of Stratford, the next witness, had not got to France, but had been an orderly officer at several camps in England. He was N.C.O. in charge of a section on board the Northland. His duty was to see that the men got their rations and got on parade. The berthing accommodation, he declared, was narrow and limited. There was on room to dress or undress.

Sapper T. Aylett, walking with a cane, was the next witness. He had enlisted in the 84th Battalion in August, 1915, having seen eleven months' service with the Engineers, and having been wounded at Passchendaele.

"Have you any complaint to make about the quality of the food?" "No I have not."

Counsel for the company suggested that sea travel at all times was uncomortable. In times of heavy weather there, was no doubt that complaints would be made. He instructed that the witnesses should stick to specific complaints.

Say Stewards "Very Dirty."

Questioned further he declared the stewards and their assistants were "very dirty." On Christmas Day the men had to march up to the galley to get their pudding. "The stewards," he said, "gave it out to us in their hands instead of on plates."

The ship was then in Halifax harbour, and the place was piled with odor" that it was not nice for a man to sit on them and eat his Christmas dinner. Had they been leaving the ship that afternoon he wouldn't have kicked so much. The mattresses should have been left on the bunks till after dinner.

"Who gave the orders for their removal?" "Our own officers."

"What kind of a Christmas dinner did you have?" "One pork chop with about two inches of fat which we couldn't eat and Christmas pudding served by hand. It was otherwise passable."

The chief steward said the witness had no control over his men.

Bunks Were Crowded.

Questioned by David Loughnan witness stated that in spite of a wounded shoulder he had been placed in an upper berth into which he had some difficulty climbing.

His Lordship observed that as there were twenty-four men in the room surely one of them would have been pleased in his condition to exchange with him.

He had been berthed on C deck of the Northland. The bunks were very crowded, there being twenty-four men packed together in one bunk room. The passage between was only two feet wide and the men slept with their feet to the passage. A seaweed mattress was supplied to some, a stray mattress to others.

"Have you any complaint to make of the bedding?" "Generally speaking, no."

Served on Dirty Dishes.

"Have you any complaint to make of the food." "There wasn't enough of it. I asked for more, but was refused. On one occasion we had mulligan stew and I complained to the steward that there was no more meat in it than the size of a walnut. They said there wasn't enough to go round and we had better wait till others were served. We waited but we didn't get any more. This was the fifth day out. At the noon-day meal there was only seating accommodation at one table for about two-thirds of the men in the section. Those who didn't come first had to take dirty dishes of those who sat down first."

Witness stated that men were detained to help the stewards get the rations, etc. He declared that the conditions described in regard to the table seating was of common occurrence.

Witness said he hadn't complained to anyone.

Steward Had No Control.

His Lordship suggested that as the witness hadn't complained there did not appear to be any use in raising the inquiry. To this Mr. Loughnan declared that the G.W.V.A. was not there to press complaints.

"When food was short," asked his lordship, "was it because the men on fatigue duty didn't bring enough?" Witness said he was complaining of what the stewards brought. Complaints to the chief steward didn't have any effect. He came down one day and his hired men told him to go to ——. He went upstairs instead, and that is the last I saw of him." The tables for the second relay of feeders were never cleaned.

Shortage of Men.

It was the duty of the stewards' assistants to take away the plates and clean them, but the stewards' assistants stayed mostly in the pantry. There were not sufficient stewards in the first place. With two more stewards in his dining room the work could have been done splendidly.

Private Joseph Hawkes, who enlisted in the Machaine Gun force in January, 1916, was the next witness. He had been eleven months in action around Lens and was badly gassed in March. He had also been on C deck. The sleeping quarters on the Northland were "very cramped" and the ventilation was poor because the deck was a cargo deck. In rough weather —for five or six days — the waves broke over the bows and the hatches and vents had to be closed.

Henry J. Learmonth, master of the steamer Northland, a dark, clean-shaven, well set up man, was called to show what promenade space was accorded the men.

Not Sufficient Food.

Private Hawkes re-called, declared that after the second day the men had been allowed to use the promenade deck on the weather side.

With regard to food he declared there was not a sufficiency. During the first few days there was enough to go around because many of the men were sick. After that it was scarce. The dinner was very poor and the meat —boiled beef mostly — was not of good quality. Mostly gristle and fat. He had made no complaints as there were lots of others to do that.

Worse Than in France.

"You served in France," said His Lordship. "How did the rations on the Northland compare with those in France." "Very poorly, sir, except ing when the Commissariat broke down in France."

"What do you say was wrong with the food on the Northland?" "The food was badly cooked and unappetizing. Three-quarters of the meat would be left on the men's plates. Fat, gristle and bone—there was not enough eatable food."

Private Fred Leigh, of the 206th Battalion, Irish, a Toronto man, enlisted in May, 1916, had not reached France. His battalion was broken up and they had "Let the old crocks go." His hair was white.) He went to the 8th Reserve at Sandling ,afterwards being attached to the C.A.M.C.

No Fresh Water.

Asked regarding the berthing, he declared that "If a fat man undertook to say his prayers he would never get up again. There was no drinking water. At Buxton he had filled his own water bottle, and it was a good job he did or he would not have had a shave. About three days before reaching Halifax there was no fresh water to be had.

Had to Buy Coffee.

There was lots of fresh water, however, during the first seven days of the voyage.

"How did you get along during the other days?" "I had to buy coffee."

"Did you shave with that?" asked his Lordship. "I was going to one time."

"Where did you get the coffee, from a steward?" I don't know. He looked too dirty for a steward. I offered him a shilling for all he had, but he gave me a drink for six pence. I was glad to get it. At other times the men drank soda water from the canteen. I would have given anything for a water bottle full of water."

He had tried to shave with salt water, but it was "like sand paper." Some were lucky and got hot water out of the galleys. It was always all gone when he went there.

Says Water Was Wasted.

"Did you read one of your interviews given to a reporter and put in a Toronto paper?" "I did, and I thought he was crazy to put it in."

"Did you say the food was fierce?" "No, I didn't. I am ready to back up what I say but not what I didn't say. I wanted to go down and have the interview pulled out of the paper."

"Have you no other complaints?" "No."

Witness admitted that there would have been lots of water if it hadn't been wasted.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitus and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

The Peterborough Poultry Association Should Be Supported

Annual Exhibition in the Armouries January 7th, 8th and 9th.

The Peterboro Poultry Association deserves the support and encouragement of the citizens of this city and district and unless it gets this support it is just possible the Association may be an organization of the past. The officers of the Association have prepared an excellent show for next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with specially attractive feautres, which will make it worth while to attend. One way you can help the Association is by attending the exhibition this year.

Old Folks' Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis Quickly Cured

This Tells of a Method That Cures Without Using Drugs

Eldrly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia.

Cough Syrups seldom much good because they upset digestion. Any doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold wit hthe first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months, small size, 50c; trial size, 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

New York Cast and Production Coming Here With "Turn to the Right"

Winchell Smith, master stage-craftsman, must have borne in mind the old dramatic adage, "Send your audience home laughin'," when he put the finishing touch to "Turn to The Right," for by the simplest of tricks the final curtain of the most successful of comedies is invariably rewarded with a storm of laughter and applause. The scene of the last act is the peach orchard of the Bascom farm at night. Dear Old Mrs. Bascom has just waved good-bye to her son and his young bride who are to motor to their own little cottage that can be seen on the hill-top in the distance. The curtain is about to descend and there is no one in the audience whose eyes are not dimmed with tears of joy and sympathy at the happy ending of all the Bascom troubles, when slowly ascending the distant hill, is seen the bridal car—its headlight piercing the gloom of the night. The car stops in from the tiny cottage. It is too distant to see the young couple descend, but as the car proceed on its way and the lights of the cottage flash up there is no one in the audience who is not positive he hsa actually seen the bride and groom enter their new home. Then the lights are lowered and a single light in an upper window flashed for a moment until a falling shade brings darkness again and the big curtain descends amid storms of laughter and applause.

"Turn to the Right" will play here at The Grand Opera House, Tuesday evening next, January 7th, with exactly the same cast that appeared before H. R. H. The Duke of Devonshire and Vice-Regal Suite last Saturday in Ottawa, going back to Mis Majesty's, Montreal, from here for a return engagement inside of three months.

COAL OUTPUT BROKE ALL RECORDS LAST YEAR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.— With an estimated output of 587,500,000 tons all records for the production of bituminous coal in the United States were broken during 1918, said a statement issued to-day by the National Coal Association. This total was approximately 36,000,000 tons in excess of the former record output in 1917.

"The nation's war-time demand for coal, the heaviest in the country's history, has been met in full," said the statement.

"A year ago the country faced an unprecedented coal shortage, to-day it faces the prospect of a sufficient bituminous coal supply to meet its requirements."

Market Building, George Street

Voice of The People

Jan., 3, 1919
491 Sherbrooke St.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Some time ago I erected a wire fence on the north and east sides of my property at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets. While I was busy with the fence I received a letter from the City Engineer asking me to stop building and to remove the fence at once as I had encroached on the City line by several feet on Park street. As this statement appeared a little vague to me I went to the Engineer to see what he meant by several feet and to find out the exact position of the street line. This he did not know but he knew I was five or six feet over. He promised to come up the following day and mark off the street line for me. This he failed to do. I then reported the matter to Mayor Duncan, who advised me to take it up with the Board of Works. On doing so it was agreed that I let the fence remain where I had built it. And pay the city twenty-five cents per year in order that they may retain their claim on the ground I had fenced in.

It has been brought to my knowledge that under the above circumstances I cannot qualify for a seat in the City Council, and some of the election day soreheads is getting a bit jubilant over the situation and no doubt sees prospects of having a say in the city affairs for 1919.

I am also informed that one of my neighbours is playing an important part in the game, not one of the love thy neighbour as thyself but one of a kind that brought the following words from the pen of R. Burns. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

To save any further disappointment to those who cannot take a defeat, let me give them a hint by further quoting a verse from R. Burns' address to the Wee Mouse,

But, mousie, thou are no a'lane
In proving foresight may be vain:
The best laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft a-gley
And le's us no but grief and pain
For promised joy.

Alex. Murray.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—Now that Peterboro has almost a complete change of Aldermen for the city council I would like to make a suggestion; the advisability of which may be left open for discussion, and the decision of the Mayor. The labour aldermen do not claim infallability. The aldermen in the past were not infallible, or they would not have left such a legacy of trouble for the new council. Therefore in order to make a new start I would suggest that the Mayor, elect for himself a Mayor's Chaplain (Hon. position) usually the minister of the church the mayor attends, and that the council form a civic procession to the church, on Sunday morning previous to the opening of the new council for the years business. It would be the duty of the chaplain, during his sermon to tell them why they are there, in case they do not know. The procession might include the mayor, aldermen, board of education and any other local governing body, also civic officials, city clerk, chief of police with any men at his disposal. The chief including some of his men, invite any public organizations like the G.W.V. who would I am sure if asked, supply a band to head the procession. Everything to be as dignified as possible, the mayor wearing his chain of office etc., police and firemen in full uniform. This civic procession could take place also anytime called for by the mayor or thanksgiving services called by Proclamation.

This course is adopted by municipalities of the greatest of nations, and some people ascribe, her power to such appeals for divine guidance in all affairs of state or municipality; I personally believe that righteousness can be realized in the complex conditions of modern life, only through the application to all human affairs of the principles of the Kingdom of Heaven. We have a lot of religion in Canada let us try a little applied christianity.

I now leave this matter to those better qualified to deal with it.

Thanking you Mr. Edior for space.

Yours truly,
Labour Man.

Will Use Vessels For Foreign Trade

Canadian Government Ships, to be Employed Wherever They Are Needed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The Dominion Government's new steamers are to be put into commission for the development of foreign trade of Canada. Three vessels of 8,100 tons capacity will be ready this month and will be used wherever there is demand for space.

It is the intention ultimately to establish regular steamship lines on the Atlantic, Pacific and South American trade, but for the present the vessels will be used more as tramp steamers to run wherever there are cargoes to develop Canada's foreign trade.

The first vessels will likely sail for the West Indies and possibly touch at South American ports with manufactured goods for that trade. It is expected that Canada will get a large share of the West Indian and South American trade.

The steamers are to be run in conjunction with the Canadian Northern and will form a department of that system, just as the C.P.S. steamship lines are operated by that line. The announcement of the appointment of a manager is expected shortly. The board of directors are selecting one of the best men in the business.

BANTFORD PAYS UP FIRST WATER BONDS ISSUED 30 YEARS.

BRANTFORD, January 3. — The original debentures issued thirty years ago for the purchase of the Brantford waterworks system, at $185,000, from a private company, have been paid by City Treasurer Bunnell. The bonds were sold at 96 and bore four per cent interest, and were sold in Montreal and delivered by the council members of that day. The city investment in waterworks since then has grown to $1,000,000.

ONLY WEIGHED 97 POUNDS BUT HE NOW WEIGHS 137

Lawless Says He Was Nearly Down and Out When He Began Taking Tanlac.

"When I first began taking Tanlac I only weighed ninety-seven pounds, and was just about down and out," said O. D. Lawless, the well-known Omaha produce merchant, residing at 604 South 28th Street, recently, "but I now weigh one hundred and thirty-seven, and so far as my health is concerned, I couldn't ask to feel much better.

"I have not gotten all my lost weight back yet," he continued, "for I had dropped down sixty-one pounds. But I am still taking Tanlac and expect soon to tip the beam at one hundred and fifty-eight, my weight before my troubles began. I began suffering from stomach trouble and getting into a run-down condition five years ago, when my appetite went back on me. I lost all desire to give up my coffee and many other things I like best, as I could not retain them, and the only thing that half way agreed with me was fruits. There were terrible pains in my right side, which would almost cramp men double two or three times a week. I became uneasy, fearing appendicitis, and no one seemed to understand my case or do me any good. I just kept suffering and losing weight until it looked like I would shrink up to nothing.

"My condition had become noticeable to all who knew me, and while talking over my case with a friend one day he asked me why I didn't try Tanlac. Well, this put me to thinking there might be something in Tanlac for me, and there certainly was, for I have already picked up forty pounds and my old time strength and energy have come back to me. I hadn't finished my first bottle until the pains, which I feared were caused by appendicitis, had disappeared. I can drink my coffee now and eat just anything I want and never have the least trouble with my stomach. So you can see why I'm so strong for Tanlac. It has made life worth living for me, and I feel like I ought to pass the good word along."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

15 Believed Dead in Lebanon, N.J., as Gas Tank Bursts

LEBANON, N. J., Jan. 3.—Fifteen persons are believed to have been killed here when the explosion in the basement of the Oddfellows' Building desroyed the entire structure and made itself felt through the surrounding country for a radius of twenty miles.

A preliminary investigation indicated that the explosion was caused by a tank which supplied gas for the lighting of the building.

The only persons who were in the building and who it is thought escaped death in the blast are George N. Manning, a farmer, and George Schomp, a resident of the village. Both men are in Somerset Hospital, eighteen miles from this village. It is feared they will not recover. Neither is able to tell what caused the tank to explode.

Stories From Some of the Workers On Election Day

If the idea prevails that the success of Labour in the municipal elections was due to thorough organization it is considerably wide of the truth. There was an organization to be sure and it worked indefatigably, but it was only the nucleus of the srength that could have been marshalled. But the spirit of devotion to the cause fired those who had volunteered to help, and some of their experiences are rather interesting.

Mr. Malcolm Campbell of the Trades and Labour Council was passing along a street early on New Year's morning when he was stopped by a woman who pointed to a house and told him that her neighbour was the enquiry of an elderly worksick, and no one to help her. Mr. Campbell immediately went in with his informant and found the wife of a soldier, who is overseas too ill to attend to her household duties, and to give the needed attention to her baby. He went for a doctor and made other arrangements for the care of the soldier's wife, and casually mentioned the elections to the doctor, who replied that he hadn't paid much attention to the municipal campaign. Mr. Campbell suggested that he ought to vote for the four Labour men. The doctor asked for their names, said that he would vote for the whole four, and then remarked that he ought to vote for several others. Mr. Campbell recommended Ald. A. A. McIntyre and Ald. Jones, and the doctor added their names to the list.

First Vote in 15 Years.

"Can you tell me where I vote?' was the enquiry of an elderly workingman as he swung his dinner pail up on to a show case in Gainey's barber shop about 6 o'clock on the last day of the old year.

A search through the voter's list failed to produce the information desired but the old toiler was directed to the poll nearest to his home, and to other guidance should that source fail.

"I haven't voted in about 15 years or more," he said, "and that was the last time there was a Labour candidate for the council. You may be sure I wouldn't miss this chance."

Quick Action This.

It was just three minutes to five, when a street car passing Lillico's shop caught the attention of a Labour worker who caught sight of a worker he had been looking for all day.

"There's my man," he shouted to the driver of an automobile, in the same voice ordering him to follow the street car. They quickly caught up with it, attracted the forgetful elector's attention, who signalled for a stop, and got out at the next corner. The automobile picked him up, turned about and set him down at the polling booth with scarcely a minute to spare.

The Cards Helped.

An old woman entered one of the north end polling booths and informed the official that she could neither read nor write. She opened her hand bag and fumbled for the little card bearing the name of the Labour candidates, which the organition committee had prepared.

"I want to vote for these four Labour men," she said, and her difficulty was soon smoothed out. It was another vote for the ticket, and was only one of the instances related of how the cards helped in the election.

The Vote was Solid.

The election figures proved conclusively that the Labour candidates were solidly supported by the workingmen who made sure of the election of the Labour Council's representatives by "plumping" for them. There were evidences of slight exceptions, but they are not worth mentioning.

Glance at the vote at Freeburn's store, polling sub-division No. 1, in the south end. The returns were Gainey 89, Garside 88, Morrison 107, Murray 88. It is obvious that there were 88 voters who did not lift their eyes from the names of the four Labour men. Take No. 2 next, R. C. Braund's store, and the figures were Gainey 75, Garside 77, Morrison 90, Murray 82.

Turn to the North Ward, Kennedy's store for example, and this is the count: Gainey 62, Garside 56, Morrison 60, Murray 61. Not much variance there. Barringer's store, also in the north: Gainey 32, Garside 38, Morrison 46, Murray 40.

Also Matthews-Blackwell's store, in the West ward: Gainey 87, Garside 88, Morrison 133, Murray 87. The workingmen played their ticket right across the whole four, and Mr. Morrison gained other votes probably as a personal tribute and because business men and others evidently picked him from the Labour four to join their more or less indiscriminate selection from the rest of the fifteen candidates.

Finally the East Ward's figures left no ground for complaint by the Labour men. Kylie's store give them the following vote: Gainey 100, Garside 76, Morrison 90, Murray 92.

Hill's, at No. 21, showed Gainey 60, Garside, 51, Morrison 71, and Murray 53.

The total vote was small and unquestionably among those who stayed at home to avoid the rain and the slippery walking was a large percentage of workingmen. But had there been a compelte organization the Labour vote would have been greatly increased, and as one opinion expressed it, they could have been elected in the first four places.

Mr. Garside's Story.

Up in the North End, Mr. Garside was supervising a section that was not as familiar as his own South Ward. One ratepayer who was called upon told the worker that his property was in his wife's name, and his own name was not on the voters' list. He had been in the West. When it was suggested that the wife should go out to vote the husband refused to permit her, and like a little lord and master stood firm. He wasn't strongly in favour of the Labour men anyway, and certainly he wouldn't allow her to go out to vote. He intimated that he was afraid she might vote for the Murray-Morrison group.

There is no doubt of the attitude of the head of that house toward equal suffrage.

Other stories equally interesting might be related of how Labour secured its "place in the sun," but the above reflect the spirit of the little groups of workers for whom a Labour medal should be struck to commemorate the New Year's victory.

German Offered to Remove Time Fuses From Bruges Mines

City Saved by Mysterious Officer Who Volunteered for Perilous Work.

BRUGES, Dec. 28.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press). — Citizens of Bruges were greatly puzzled, after the signing of the armistice, by the presence of a German officer in full regalia in and about the city. This officer was at times accompanied by two Belgian officers of the second section of the Belgian general staff, but more often he was in command of ten or twelve German prisoners of war. He appeared to do pretty nearly what he pleased, no control apparently being exercised over his activities. For several days his work centered in Bruges, the post office, city hall, and railroad station in turn being visited by him and his soldiers.

Some unfavourable comment was heard because this German was allowed to dine at one of the leading hotels and murmurs became so loud that after a few days a makeshift uniform was provided for him. It looked like a combination of Russian, French and British uniforms, but speculation as to the identity and business of the German persisted.

It is now known that this man saved Bruges from destruction. He was the officer who during hostilities was in charge of the work of mining the town and the Zeebrugge docks, bridges, etc. After the signing of the armistice he volunteered to remove the caps from the mines. It was dangerous work and several prisoners were called in to help. Some of the mines were timed to explode ten or twelve days after the departure of the troops.

Huns Will Pay Only Rent For French Trenches

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Captain Andre Tardieu, head of the General Commission for Franco-American War Matters, speaking to the Associated Press relative to certain extraordinary rumours which have been in circulation in Paris, denied officially that the American army had been required to pay rent for the trenches it occupied at the front or for territory occupied militarily behind the front.

"Numerous reports of French, as well as American and British origin," he said, "have revealed to us that German propaganda is not dead and the work of its organization is making itself felt. One indication, among many others, is found in the persistence of the absurd rumour. It is almost inconceivable, and I would not take the pains to deny it if I were not informed that it is still in circulation to-day. It has been said that when American troops took up a new sector on our front they had to pay rent for it to the French Government and that when American troops captured ground from the enemy in battle they had to pay rent for the reconquered territory. I deny it officially in the most categorical fashion.

"The rule followed since the American army arrived in France has been inspired by an exactly contrary spirit. When an American unit relieved French troops the unit leaving the sector passed over the material collected there, and the same rule was in effect when the French relieved the Americans. In cantonments, the requisition price paid for private buildings is the same for the French and allied armies. As for hospitals, schools and other public establishments, they have been placed at the disposition of the American army gratuitously.

"It is Germany who will pay the war indemnities when claims shall be established.

"In the rear zone all questions of indemnity to private parties are treated on the same basis by the French and Allied armies. The regulation of these questions is vested with the American Staff Bureau at Tours. All claims are considered under the provisions of the American law of April 18, 1918. The American staff is sole judge of all claims, and no recourse has been opened to claimants up to this time for appeals from its decision.

"Besides, we have organized an advisory service to protect American soldiers against exorbitant charges. In addition to the aid given in the supervision of prices on purchases by the army, every possible effort has been made to protect officers and soldiers in their individual purchases that could not be supervised by this service. Several decrees and ministerial circulars have prescribed public posting of prices. Soldiers on leave in Paris have been furnished guides with an invitation to file any complaint with the Central Bureau of Soldiers on Leave, which is in permanent contact with the Prefecture of Police."

TO REORGANIZE POLICE.

Dismissals Foreshadowed by Vancouver's Mayor.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 4.—A reorganization of the Vancouver Police Department "from top to bottom" which may include the dismissal of certain officials and the suspension of others, was forecasted here by Mayor R. H. Gale.

"The fact of so much liquor having been brought into the city illegally as has been brought out by the recent revelations without the knowledge of the city police, proves that there is something radically wrong," he said. "The police commission will leave no stone unturned to improve the department." The Mayor has called a meeting of the Police Commission to consider the matter. He refused to give the names of any members of the force who might be disciplined.

All Northern France Is In Ruins Reports Herbert Hoover

A TREMENDOUS PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—In an out-spoken cablegram received here Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator and Chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, tells of the wanton destruction wrought by German Armies in parts of northern France which they occupied, and states that the work of rehabilitation has been made so difficult by these outrages that it will be impossible for the commission, as it had hoped to turn over the task at this time to the French Government.

"The entire industrial life of the region has been destroyed by the Germans," Mr. Hoover states. "There is scarcely a single factory that can be operated without a very large portion of new equipment. The coal mines are totally destroyed and the network of railways in this region has been rendered almost hopeless of reconstruction for many months.

"The German method of destruction was to bend every single rail by exploding a hand grenade under it, rendering it useless for all time. The Grand Canal du Nord, which connects this section of France with the Belgium canal system and is the natural entrepot for goods for Antwerp or Rotterdam, was itself practically he fighing line for months antd is so badly destroyed that it will take fully a year for its complete reconsruction."

Destitution Widespread

Discussing general conditions, Mr. Hoover states that the relief is based upon the allowance of food to the value of about 35 cents a day to the destitute, those having any resources or employment being required to pay. The whole extent of destitution is not yet known, he asserts, but appears to include fully 60 per cent. of the people. His cable adds these details:

"The Commission for Relief in Belgium had hoped to surrender the task of relief of Northern France to the French Government immediately upon the German retreat. It has been found impossible, however, for the French Government to undertake the food supply of this area for some months to come, and upon the urgent request of that Government, the commission has decided to continue

"After the four-year paralysis of wholesale and retail business with the destruction of the principal towns and shops, these trades have disappeared, and the people are today dependent upon a ration issued directly to them, just as before the German evacuation. Until transport and trade can be rehabilitated the present system must go on, for the French distribution is done thr the trades. These arrangements necessitate some reorganization of the relief work and its entire separation from Belgium.

"Twenty members of the Commission for Relief in Belgium who joined the American Army as officers have been released by General Pershing to undertake this work.

Army Trucks Being Used.

"Transportation connections with the region are maintained through Dunkirk and through one Belgian canal still operating supplemented by motor trucks originally installed by the armies and now being gradually taken over by the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

"The population of this area at the moment of the retreat was about 1,500 000 there being also about 300,000 refugees in Belgium who are returning and some 500,000 refugees in France, all of whom are anxious to return to their native sail.

"The destruction of some twenty principal towns and literally hundreds of villages renders the return of these refugees a stupendous problem. Every effort is being made to restrain them from going back until some systematic provision for shelter can be completed, but they evade all official urgings and the roads are a continuous procession of these pitiable bodies. Thousands of them reach their villages to find every vestige of shelter destroyed, and finally wander into the villages further back from the actual battle area, which are themselves already overcrowded to a heart-breaking degree.

"In order to remedy this situation to some extent the Commission for Relief in Belgium has obtained the services of 150 volunteers from the American Navy and is taking over a large amount of second-hand barrack material from the navy and army. Those barracks are in course of erection adjacent to the destroyed villages under the superintendence of the navy volunteers.

Army Clothing Distributed

"A large amount of boots and shoes and warm clothing has been taken over from the Quartermaster's supplies, and these are being distributed to the people.

"The French Government is endeavouring to obtain some cattle from Switzerland and horses from the various armies, which, together with the meagre supply of agricultural implements, may enable the population to get in some portion of next year's crops in such of these areas as are not too badly destroyed by battle."

Since Jan. 1, 1915, the Commission for Relief in Belgium has transported food and clothing to the occupied territory of Northern France. These supplies were distributed through a French agency, the Comite Francais, made up of representatives from various towns and districts.

From canal termnals the supplies were handed over to local committees in the towns and villages, which were headed by the Mayors and selected from the representative citizens of the community. These committees attended to the actual distribution of the daily ration to the inhabitants. The goods were paid for by municipal issues of paper money, back of which stood only the responsibility of the particular villages of issuance

The French Government is supplying some food from France to the Relief Commission, and imports required from the United States amount to about 30,000,000 pounds a month. The total food shipments from America for Belgium and Northern France amount to more than $30,000,000 a month in value.

INTERESTING CASE IN DIVISION COURT

Plaintiff Seeks to Recover Damages From George Street Dressmaker.

A case of unusual interest involving the rights of a dressmaker was heard yesterday in division court by Judge Huycke. It appeared that Mrs. MacDonald, a niece of Mr. J. Guise-Bagley, desired to have a coat made and took the material to a George street dressmaker.

The evidence of the plaintiff, Mrs. MacDonald, showed that she, relying upon the advertised skill of the dressmaker to whom she took the coat, entrusted her with 6 3-4 yards of cheviot serge with the agreement the coat was to be of a length and style agreed upon and to be completed December 1st. After several fittings the final fitting was made in a dark room and eight dollars was paid by the plaintiff. On her return home Mrs. MacDonald found the coat to be too short and a patch an inch wide put around the hem, also two larger patches in front.

In correspondence from the plaintiff it was stated that she would not entrust the defendant to rectify the coat, as she thought if she could not make it right in the first instance she could not alter it properly.

Harry Deutsch and Benjamin Rogow, two tailors, testified to the defects of the coat.

The defendant stated that she was quite willing and able to rectify the defects.

Judge Huycke ordered the dressmaker to make the coat right if possible, and the case to stand over in the meantime.

Mr. Bagley stated that the plaintiff had been obliged to buy another coat in the meantime and thought the defendant should make it right.

The Judge decided to consider that question at a later date.

Mr. Bagley appeared for the plaintiff. Peck, Kerr & McElderry for the defence.

BIRTH.

HITCHINS.—On Jan. 3, 1919, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hitchins, 262 Wolfe street, a daughter.

DIED

LOTT—At the family residence, Oshawa, on Mnoday, December 30, Margaret Rambough, beloved wife of Albert Lott, in her 54th year.

The funeral took place on New Year's Day to Ebenezer Cemetery Oshawa.

The HOME CIRCLE

COLVIN

HOME.

The prince rides up to the palace gates
And his eyes with tears are dim,
For he thinks of the begger maiden sweet
Who may never wed with him.

For home is where the heart is,
In dwelling great or small,
And there's many a splendid palace
That's never a home at all.

The yeoman comes to his little cot
With a song when the day is done,
For his dearie is standing in the door
And his children to meet him run.

For home is where the heart is,
In dwelling great or small,
And there's many a stately mansion,
That's never a home at all.

Could I but live with my own sweet heart
In a hut with a sanded floor,
I'd be richer far than a loveless man
With fame and a golden store.

For home is where the heart is,
In a dwelling great or small,
And a cottage lighted by lovelight
Is the dearest home of all.

THE NEWSPAPERS.

The newspaper is to-day the most potent element in civilization. Its audience is practically unlimited. It reaches every class of people. It penetrates to every hut and hovel on the farthest confines of human society. The schools have an influence and gather the children of the high and low. But after schools are outgrown, teachers forgotten, and books mouldy and dusty, the newspaper is still a constant companion.

No public speaker, be he preacher or political orator, can draw an audience of one-tenth that which greets the overage newspaper of today, and thus the tone of the press becomes a matter of vital importance to the welfare of the community. The influence is widespread and is also lasting. Therefore we say, study well the contents of the paper you are taking and if it contains that which tends to lower the scale of morality and humanity and not to the elevation of that which is good and right, better off are you by far without it.

It is said that to spoil a cow, yell at her and pound her with the milking stool; and the way to spoil a wife is to frown and scowl at her and never give her a cent of money.

We have seen signs that indicate that gambling of various kinds is getting a foothold in the community. Notice the effect of this crime upon domestic happiness. It has sent its ruthless plowshare through hundreds of families, until the wife sat in rags, and the daughters were disgraced, and the sons grew up to the same infamous practices or took a short cut to the destruction across the murderer's scaffold. Home has lost all charms for the gambler. How tame are the children's caresses and a wife's devotion to the gambler! How drearily the fire burns on the domestic hearth! There must be louder laughter, and something to win and something to lose, an excitement to drive the heart faster and fill the blood and fire the imagination. No home, however bright, can keep back the gamester. The sweet call of love bounds back from his iron soul, and all endearments are consumed in the flame of his passion.

Nowhere is a woman's character more clearly shown, or her talents given more scope for cultivation than in home making, and in no sphere is the true woman more content and happier than in housekeeping. Home is indeed the "dearest place" on earth when rightly made, and the memory of which remains with us until death, and will do more to protect and restrain its inmates than the grandest and most eloquent sermons from the most gifted ministers and orators. In short, home is the kindergarten of all Christian work and influence, the starting point of all beautiful thoughts and deeds.

There never was a greater humbug uttered than the old adage, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." True, it has a very soothing palation to a man's troubled brain, as he puts his cigar in his mouth, puts on his hat and goes out to spend the evening with a club of the same grade of social purity as himself, leaving his wife alone to the momentous task of teaching her young sons that they must avoid the gatherings of the wicked; that home is a same place for them; that cigarettes are a moral and bodily poison; in short, that they must respect their father but not follow his example.

When a man sings a woman's praise she does not ask that he carry a tune.

You can't hurt some men unless you hit them on the pocketbook.

As Charlie Says :—

What you need is an Arabela. Remember the name. It's the best cigar ever sold for ten cents.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

The Germans Are in Better Form

Huns Are Carrying Around Less Surplus Flesh.

LONDON, Jan. 4 (Reuters). — A long article written by a member of the Allied Naval Commission in German waters on the subject of food conditions in north Germany, is published by the Times. The writer is careful to point out that he deals only with what various members of the Commission saw with their own eyes in a very considerable area and that he ignores heresay evidence regarding other parts of Germany.

"But if food conditions in the rest of Germany," he goes on, "are not very much worse than in Oldenburg, Mecklenburg, and Schleswig-Holstein, there is certainly no need for haste on the part of the Allies in going to their relief. I am confident that none of the score or more members of the various sub-commissions who covered many hundred miles of country and saw tens of thousands of the people at close range, reported having noticed any evidence of palpable under-feeding among any of the inhabitants. Indeed, they are of the unanimous opinion that the whole population, both urban and rural, in these regions have been and are being fed near enough to normav requirements to keep them at full physical vigor. As a member of the intelligence staff, who had spent many years in the country before the war, said:

"'You don't see so many people with rolls of fat on them as you did five years ago, but you do see a healthier, hardier and generally more fit looking people.'"

Armenia Would Be Independent From Mediterranean to Black Sea

Claims of the Armenian People Presented to the British Government.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—General Torcum, head of the Armenian Military Commission, which also has been engaged in political activities since its arrival in London, has presented to the British Government a note outlining the claims of the Armenian people.

These claims include the immediate recognition of the independence of Armenia, the re-union of all Armenian troops serving with the allies in one corps under allied officers o serve as a new Armenian army, the formation of an Armenian Government with Armenian ministers and allied counselliors, and the imposition of a general indemnity upon the enemy to be expended under the control of an interallied commission for the formation of a new Armenian army, the reconstruction of Armenian homes and the support of Armenian refugees in the Causasus, Persia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Egypt.

The new Armenia, it is claimed, should extent from the Mediterranean to the Black Sea, and from the Halis to the Kowia River. Armenia, it is added, should have an equal peace place at the peace conference with the other nations.

General Torcum plans to present a similar note to the French and Italian Governments.

Belgium Would Join Great Powers Such as Guide Their Own Destinies

Matter Will Come Up for Consideration at the Peace Congress.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The famous treaty which Germany designated as a scrap of paper will come up for early consideraion before the peace congress. This is the treaty made in 1830 when the great powers of Europe recognized Belgium as being separatte from Holland and guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium

It was the disregard of thsi neutralty and the invasion of Belgium by the German troopst which brough Great Britain into the war. The Belgian Parliament recently adopted unanimously a resolution asking for the establishment of the independent sovereignty of Belgium and the abandonment of the guarantee of neutrality. The resolution adopted by the Parliament, was in response to the speech from the throne made by King Alber when he re-entered Brussels.

After expressing gratitude to the nations aiding in the deliverance of Belgium the resoluion says: "The tragic and glorious hours which Belgium has experienced give it the right to free itself from the ties which in the past limited its sovereignty and enervated is international action. Belgium will hus pass o the rank of the great powers which are mistresses of their destinies."

Incidentally, Germany's designation of the treaty as a "scrap of paper" involves the general question of establishing some means of guaranteeing the inviolability of treaties.

BRITAIN'S AERIAL FEAT

Rapid Growth of Air Force After War Started.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—The declaration of war by Great Britain at midnight, August 5, 1914, found the Royal Flying Corps with only four squadrons in being—representing well under 100 airplanes. Three of these squadrons went instantly to France. A new squadron followed these pioneers in about ten days' time, while a fifth squadron mobilized and sent out in 24 hours, reached the fighting zone about the middle of September.

In those early days of the war, machines were used simply for strategical reconnaissance. It was not until after the battle of the Aisne, when settled line warfare was established, that artillery fire control from the air, and the cruder forms of co-operation with the infantry were practised and developed.

As late as June, 1915, ordinary rifles with shortened barrels were carried by British pilots, and hand grenades were flung at enemy aviators in the air.

The development of formation fighting and the evolution of aerial gunnery dates from about this time, when the machine gun became an essential part of the equipment of fighting pilots and observers.

THIS WOMAN ONLY WEIGHED 90 POUNDS

Takes Tanlac and She Now Weighs 135 Pounds—Condition Was Alarming.

"When my wife began taking Tanlac she only weighed ninety pounds and she now weighs one hundred and thirty-five, giving her an actual gain of forty-five pounds," said Clarence E. Malin, the well-known contractor, living at 815 West Fifty-first street, Seattle, Wash., recently.

Mr. Malin's statement, while indeed remarkable, is by no means exceptional, as thousands of well-known people all over America have testified that they have used the Master Medicine with the same astonishing and gratifying results.

Mrs. Malin commenced to fail in strength and go down hill two years, just after the birth of our last baby, continued Mr. Malin. "Her appetite was very poor and she would get so weak and dizzy at times that she would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. The least little thing would bring on one of these dizzy spells. She always suffered this way just after getting up in the morning and was hardly ever free from headaches. I have known her to go five or six nights in succession without getting any sound sleep and I don't see how on earth she ever managed to lay down every little while during the day. As I said before, she only weighed ninety pounds and her condition was getting to be alarming.

"She never seemed to be able to get anything to help her, so I got her to take Tanlac and now she is just like a new person and I have never seen her looking better. Her appetite is just fine, she thoroughly enjoys her food and has not had a sign of dizziness since she began taking Tanlac. She sleeps like a child now, is cheerful and happy all the time and her work is not the least trouble to her.

"Well, I had been suffering a great deal with rehumatism in my arms and shoulders. I could scarcely raise my hands to my head and my right arm especially was so stiff that it took every bit of nerve and will power I had to do any work. So I decided to try Tanlac myself, as it was doing my wife so much good and now I never feel a sign of rheumatism. I can swing my arms and use them without feeling a pain of any kind and I also have picked up five or six pounds since I began taking the medicine. I certainly have every reason for praising Tanlac, for it has been a wonderful thing for both my wife and myself."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

THE WIFE

Ruth Dines With Her Employer While Brian Stays Out Late.

CHAPTER LXXIX.

Ruth could scarcely express the guilty feeling she had at accepting her employer's invitation. It came over her that she was doing exactly what she hated so to have Brian do—then excused herself on the ground of business.

Had Brian been coming home as usual, she would not have gone. But Mr. Mandel had been so insistent that she dine with him, if she worked overtime, that it had been easier to consent than to refuse.

"I will be careful not to tell him when Brian is out," she said to herself, as she smoothed her hair, preparatory to going to dinner. She had worked with Mr. Mandel until a little past seven, and was both tired and hungry.

She was thankful for the waiting taxi. It would rest her a bit.

"You are very tired," Mr. Mandel said as she leaned back with an unconscious sigh.

"Not so very," Ruth had answered, flushing to think she had allowed herself to let her employer know she was weary. He was so uniformly kind and thoughtful that she felt chagrined.

"You must eat a good dinner. Then I'll send you home in a cab. I was going to propose a theatre; but you are too tired."

"Oh, I couldn't have gone!" Ruth exclaimed, knowing she would have enjoyed a good play.

"Why not?"

"It wouldn't be right for me to do something so selfish when Brian, my husband, is working," she had not told her employer that her husband was going to school. Simply that he had to be out on business.

"I wonder— if" Mandel stopped, then after a moment added: "If all wives are as considerate."

"Why, of course they are. I feel almost wicked to go to dinner with you, knowing he is probably taking a snack in some horrid place near his office."

"You have a very tender conscience."

As he said it, Arthur Mandel wondered how long it was wise to hide what he knew from Ruth. Wise for him; his hopes of winning her. She evidently knew nothing. Had he realized that already Ruth was terribly jealous of Mollie King, that she knew of some of Brian's visits; he would have hesitated no longer. But he supposed her entirely in the dark except perhaps that day when she saw them when they visited Washington Square on business.

They had a delightful dinner. Mandel insisted that Ruth drink a tiny glass of champagne.

"It will do you good," he had said when she objected, and so once more she did as he asked rather than discuss the matter further.

When they finished he put Ruth into a taxi, bade her good night, adding:

"Don't hurry down in the morning. You need the rest."

"Was ever employer so kind?" Ruth wondered as she leaned back in the corner of the cab. All through dinner he had chatted brightly, told her interesting stories and anecdotes of people, without taxing her in the least to do her part to entertain him. She had been grateful. She did not feel like talking and it had been a relief to know it was not required of her. And someway she knew that Arthur Mandel knew she did not want to talk; and so had saved her the necessity.

Ruth was just the type of a woman who appreciated such delicacy of attention. She thought much of Mandel as a consequence. She regarded him as the kindest, most thoughtful man she ever had known. Occasionally she wondered idly why he never had married, and was rather pleased that he had not, although she could have given no reason for the feeling.

She went directly to bed when she arrived home, and fell asleep almost immediately. She had not intended to; she meant to wait for Brian and tell him of her nice dinner, and hear how he had got along with his typewriter. But she really had been very fatigued, and so had slumbered, regardless of her intent to remain awake.

She woke with a start! she must have fallen asleep. But Brian was not yet in, so she could not have been sleeping long. He had said he would be home a little after nine if he had his lessons early; and it had been just nine when she lay down.

She looked at the tiny clock on her dressing table. It was after eleven. She had dozed nearly two hours. Where in the world was Brian?

She went to the window to watch for him.

Just as the clock struck twelve she saw him. Some impulse, for which she could not account, sent her scurrying back to bed; and made her pretend to be asleep when Brian switched on the lights.

To-morrow—Brian Remains Out Just As Late As Before.

Pimples Broke Out All Over Face, Arms and Neck

Pimples are sure sign that the blood is not in its proper shape.

While the skin is the seat of the irritating, unsightly pimples, the real disease is in the blood.

Medicated lotions and powders may allay the itching and the irritation, but never cure, no matter how long and faithfully continued, and the condition is often aggravated, and the skin permanently injured by their use. The disease is more than skin deep; the entire circulation is poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually cures blood and skin troubles because it goes direct to the root of the disease and stimulates and restores normal, healthy action to the different organs, cleanses and enriches the blood, and thus relieves the system of all poisonous secretions.

B. B. B. cures permanently because it leaves none of the original poison to ferment in the blood and cause a fresh attack.

Miss E. M. Davidson Daysland, Alta., writes: "Last summer I was greatly troubled with pimples breaking out all over my face, arms and neck. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters and after taking two bottles the pimples had almost all disappeared. I shall always recommend this remedy to anyone afflicted with skin troubles."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NEW YEAR COVENANT SERVICE SERMONS ON "PERSONAL PROBLEMS"

Special importance is being attached to the services in George street Methodist church on Sunday next. The New Year Covenant Service will be held at 11 a.m. The attendance of every member, young and older, of the church, is desired on this occasion. The pastor will give a five minute talk to the children, and a short sermon, after which the beautiful and impressive ritual of the covenant service will be used. No one who can avoid it should miss this gathering.

In the evening there will be the usual service of song and splendid programme of music by the choir. The pastor will begin a series of three sermons on "Personal Problems." The subjects of the series will be:

"What habits should I cultivate?"
"Whom should I marry?"
"What amusements should I choose?"

The first of these will be discussed on Sunday evening.

A hearty welcome awaits everyone at all the services.

The Intelligence Branch of The Canadian Army

Looking over the souvenirs he had obtained from a dead German on one of the first raids the Canadians pulled off in 1915, a sergeant of the 16th Battalion came across half a dozen picture postcards of Coblentz, all addressed to the slain Hun and evidently from friends in that district. The Canadian Sergeant did not understand German but they were handy trophies to send home by post to Vancouver and he was struggling with his conscience whether to obey orders and hand them in to the Intelligence officer or to smuggle them in letters to Canada. His company officer, too, coming along, caught him looking at them and decided the point. They seemed ordinary personal correspondence but the officer sent them on to headquarters. There were messages of love from the dead Hun's family and instructions to "kill the English and hurry up home." One postcard alone made the smart Intelligence officer at Corps headquarters sit up and take notice. It was from a feminine admirer named Ella. It asked the now slain man to apply for a job in the unit Rudolphe Hesse was in. Hesse, it said, had been home for three weeks' leave and before that he had been taking six weeks' instruction, out of the line, with "flammenwerfer." He wasn't going back to the muddy Flanders front but was leaving for Verdun "to burn up the French." Rudolphe also got more pay.

That postcard was practically the first intimation the Allies got of the German intention to use liquid fire and when the attack came at Verdun the French were ready for it. How the postcard escaped the eagle eyes of the German censorship was a miracle. It was one of the first "beats" the alert Intelligence officers of the Canadians scored.

When the First Division took over its section of trenches, the important Intelligence Branch was not entrusted to them. Imperial officers, who knew German and who had taken special courses on the formations of the Hun army, were in charge. The Canadian officers attached applied themselves to learning the "tricks of the trade" the enemy used which were not emblazoned over text books. By the time the Second Division arrived in France their system of intelligence though not according to British manual, was as effective as any along the front. From then on the Canadian Intelligence section made its mark. Colonel Charlie Mitchell, an engineer from Winnipeg, was one of the pioneers in the branch. He had often visited Germany on matters of his peaceful profession and now applied his knowledge of the Hun to advantage. He upset all British traditions by gathering around him lawyers, newspapermen, stockbrokers, railway surveyors and even prospectors from the North. In a military way they might be classed as a motley crowd but their deductive aggregate was something over the hundred mark.

Colonel Mitchell went from the Corps to a British army and then, promoted again, to British General Headquarters. He was used as a sort of travelling military Sherlock Holmes working on various fronts in France, Italy and Palestine. He is now an Imperial Brigadier General of Intelligence.

Another success in Intelligence was Colonel J. Lamb, a mild mannered, easy spoken officer who might have been a schoolmaster, but with a brain that could think three different ways at the same time. Then came Colonel Roland Parsons, a lawyer from Winnipeg, who for a considerable time headed Corps Intelligence and worked his department through many famed battles. He had been a "pupil" of Mitchell's and if anything improved the service. Parsons went to England where he was in command of an Imperial Intelligence school for some months and later returned to the Corps where he is now First General Staff officer with a Division.

For the last year the man who has made his mark at the head of this branch at the Corps is Major MacAvitie, of New Brunswick. He served through from the Intelligence section of a battalion and became a General Staff Officer at the Corps. From the Battle of Passchendaele down to the capture of Valenciennes and Mons he has proved the equal of any that preceded him. With Major Vernon who has been on the Intelligence staff ever since the First Division went across, and a Captain from the West with a very Teutonic name, the Canadian Corps has a team that is hard to beat. The captain is almost a German, if such a description can be given to any man as a compliment. He speaks all Hun dialects and has such an intimate knowledge of German towns that many a prisoner under examination has been surprised and divulged important information. He also had an uncanny knowledge of German army organization which proved to be the undoing of more than one arrogant German officer prisoner he interrogated.

The Canadian Corps Intelligence has a proud record and in that secret dossier that was circulated among British Army Commands there were often long quotations from the reports these officers gathered together from Hun sources. They got to know the temperment of the German commanders like a book and they always gauged the character of the troops opposed to them. Of the few men at the front whom I heard predict that the German machine would fall to pieces these Canadian Intelligence Officers were one group

WHEN ELIZABETH SCORED

Or a Case of Too Many Lovers.

By AGNES G. BROGAN

In all his trying experiences as an editor Richard West had never faced so peculiar a situation. The two young men had burst in upon his privacy, accusing and gesticulating in an incoherent manner. After much questioning their cause of complaint was found to be the recent publication of the following astonishing communication:

Mr. Robert Wells and Mr. John Glegg of Woodborough announce their engagement to Miss Elizabeth Thornton of this city.

Twice the perplexed editor read the paragraph, then rubbed his eyes.

"This is out of my province," he remarked at last, "but I'll see the society editor about it."

"No use," snapped Robert Wells. "We went to her first, and she says the clipping was inadvertently copied from the Woodborough Suburban. Any joke goes in that home town paper, but how a thing like that could 'get by' in a responsible daily"—

"Such blamed carelessness might bring a pretty suit against your paper," hotly interrupted John Glegg; "made things hot enough for us in Woodborough, but it was rather too much to have it repeated when we came to the city."

In a spirit of relief the managing editor turned to answer his telephone. "Editor Daily News?" questioned an aggrieved feminine voice. "Well, this is Mrs. William Thornton. I called up to ask explanation of that vulgar notice regarding my daughter which appeared in last night's paper. Yes; unfortunate mistake no doubt, but I will call to see you personally this afternoon—at 4 o'clock."

Viciously Richard West banged the receiver into its hook. "So there is a Miss Thornton!" he exclaimed.

"There is indeed," Mr. Glegg remarked feelingly.

"And you have both, perhaps, been paying her attention."

"Well, rather," this from Mr. Wells.

"I can only express, then, my regret for the occurrence and suggest a public contradiction."

"Contradiction," groaned the blond one of the two. "Good heavens, it's been rubbed in enough now!"

"If anything of the kind happens again"— vaguely threatened his companion, and the door closed with an eloquent slam.

Suddenly the editor's annoyed expression changed to one of irrepressible amusement. The smile still lingered as he returned to his work. But as the hour of 4 drew near and his clerk announced a visitor he glanced apprehensively toward the door and arose stiffly. It was only a girl who confronted him, however, not the dreaded Mrs. Thornton, whose important name figured so largely in social circles—just a slip of a girl with appealing blue eyes and a sensitive mouth.

"Are you the editor?" she asked naively and, uninvited, settled herself in the editor's chair. "I came about that engagement notice. Had to get here before mother, who will probably make a fuss. I am Elizabeth Thornton."

Bowing, the editor waited. "It was I who wrote the announcement," she calmly stated.

"You?" He swung about in unbelief. The girl nodded.

"It was one of my jokes," she said ruefully. "They always turn out the wrong way." She leaned forward confidentially. "Do you know what it means to have reckless impulses, Mr. West—doing or saying a thing you are bound to be desperately sorry for next day? Well, that's me. Let me explain about that foolish announcement." Miss Thornton's suddenly embarrassed gaze sought the toe of her foot.

"You see, I have known those two boys, Bobbie and Jack, for some time, and we've gone around a lot together, more or less. One afternoon unexpectedly and 'right out of a clear sky'—Bobbie asked me when—we were—going to be—married. Why, I'd never even thought of such a thing. When I tried to tell him so he insisted quite stubbornly that the marriage question had always been understood between us; said when he talked about it I had never contradicted him." Miss Thornton raised aggrieved eyes to the editor. "Now, wasn't that unreasonable," she demanded, "to be expected to marry a man just because one had not gone round denying being engaged to him? And that very evening"—she paused impressively—"Jack Glegg comes walking over to ask me when I'm going to marry him; declared I knew all along that the house he was building was for me.

"I had encouraged Jack in the building," Miss Thornton admitted, "because he's naturally idle, and I like to see him busy. But it seems Jack had told me the roof would never go on his house until he had the promise of a wife to occupy it, and, of course, any one would have advised him to put on the roof. So," she sighed, "it ended by both boys accusing me of falsely leading them on while being engaged to the other, and when I emphatically denied this to each they settled back comfortably, believing me to be still their 'own betrothed.'" Miss Elizabeth Thornton laughed.

"It was all so perfectly ridiculous," she continued, "that I decided to give them enough of the subject and wrote that silly notice, hurrying it off to their home town paper to greet them when they arrived. Woodborough enjoys publishing amusing personalities, and I expected the affair to end in a laugh." She regarded the editor accusingly. "But, oh, when the awful thing came out in your paper!" Miss Thornton threw out her hands. "Now I'm afraid—for you," she said.

Richard West followed the girl to the door and then surprised himself by continuing to follow into the elevator and on down to the street, where he stood an unnecessary length of time assuring her of his regret and of his ability to soothe the ruffled feelings of her mother. Again, in his office he stooped to pick up a bunch of faded violets which had fallen from the girl's belt and to place them carefully in his desk. Then he leaned back in his chair, falling into a pleasant reverie. Each fragrant breath from the violets seemed to bring back in an indefinable way the piquant charm of the girl's presence—that one laughing gleam from her bluebell eyes. And so for days the winsome face haunted his memory.

Richard West formed a habit of gazing eagerly down at the passersby or of falling into brown studies before his desk. Then, one day, the girl's well remembered name caught his eye, seeming to stand out in glowing letters upon the social column of his own paper. When he had read the passage a second time he summoned the social editor.

"Let me know," he requested, "if this announcement has been duly authorized." The social editor peered through her glasses.

"The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Robert Wells," she quoted. "Oh, yes, that is correct! The notice was copied by request from a Beechwood paper. Miss Thornton has been a guest at the Balmoral, returning this week, as the notice says, to be married in the city. I will send you the original copy."

Swiftly the editor's practiced eye scanned the bold signature, "Authorized for publication by Robert Wells." Undecidedly his hand went out toward the telephone. Then, as if in answer to his thought, the office door was opened to admit a small figure.

"May I come in?" asked a diffident voice. Richard West's heretofore well behaved heart beat a rapid tattoo as the vision in blue advanced to his side.

"I did not think you would do it again," she reproached him. In silent exoneration he handed to her the original signed slip of the disturbing announcement, watching in vast relief as rebellious color flooded the girl's indignant face.

"It is just as I thought," she cried. "Robert Wells wrote the wretched thing for revenge.

"And the fact stated is not true?"

Miss Thornton scorned the eager question. "I was having such a lovely time," she said—"dancing, driving, tennis! Now he has spoiled it all. If I had leprosy I could not be more avoided. 'Returning to be married in the city,'" she mocked. "I'll never be married as long as I live. This time you are not to blame, and I came down to scold you."

"One might be driven to second offense," he told her, "for the pleasure of seeing you once more."

"You may see me again sooner than you expect," she laughed, and her prophecy came true.

It was a flushed and beautiful young woman of flashing eye who burst in upon him one gloriously memorable morning.

"I hope I'm in time," she began breathlessly and waving aloft a paper. Grandmother read it last night in the Farm Gazette."

With that glowing face so near his own, it was rather difficult at first to grasp the significance of this latest message, but presently Richard West realized that "Miss Elizabeth Thornton was again reported engaged, Mr. John Glegg this time figuring as the fortunate bridegroom elect."

"Isn't it contemptible?" Miss Thornton glanced distractingly through a floating strand of hair. "You see, they have agreed together to get—even. Oh, I wish"— The resonant voice broke tremulously as the girl turned to the window.

Richard West followed, shaken, between a desire for deep sympathy and a desire for helpless laughter, wondering at the mighty emotion which surged within him at the sight of two very genuine tears creeping down the girl's averted cheek. Tightly his hand closed over hers.

"It has all been so childishly foolish," she murmured.

"Perhaps it has," the man answered gently, "but I'm afraid that I cannot be sorry, Elizabeth"—he paused, and the name was allowed to pass.

"I can't be sorry because the 'foolishness' brought you to me, and I can't be quite sorry for your tears. Tears prove the existence of a heart, and if you have one—if—I—have—I want it—to keep forever, Elizabeth."

Silence in the office while the telephone bell rang unheard; then Richard West rushed over to his desk to pen a hasty line.

"There," he cried triumphantly; "that goes into the paper tonight, and I think, dear, you've scored the boys there."

Glancing over her lover's shoulder the girl read aloud: "The engagement is announced of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Richard West. Wedding to take place next month."

Tenderly her eyes sought those of the editor. "Authorized for publication by Elizabeth Thornton," she said.

HOW THIS NERVOUS WOMAN GOT WELL

Told by Herself. Her Sincerity Should Convince Others.

Christopher, Ill.—"For four years I suffered from irregularities, weakness, nervousness, and was in a run down condition. Two of our best doctors failed to do me any good. I heard so much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, I tried it and was cured. I am no longer nervous, am regular, and in excellent health. I believe the Compound will cure any female trouble."—Mrs. ALICE HELLER, Christopher, Ill.

Nervousness is often a symptom of weakness or some functional derangement, which may be overcome by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as thousands of women have found by experience.

If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions in regard to your ailment. The result of its long experience is at your service.

HAD WEAK and FAINTING SPELLS

Those feelings of faintness, those weak, "all gone" sinking sensations, which come over most people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They mean an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered nervous system.

When the system is in this condition there's no time for delay. One fainting spell may be recovered from—will the next? One dizzy spell may pass off, but the next may be more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, before their case becomes deep rooted and perhaps hopeless.

They will act directly on the disordered heart and weakened nervous system and restore them to full strength and vigor.

Miss Mary McCoy, Algoma Mills, Ont., writes:—"I was awfully troubled with fainting and weak spells, and I could never get any doctor's medicines to help me. One day a friend of mine was at the house when I took one of those spells, and she got me a box of Milburn's Heart and nerve Pills. That was six years ago, and from that day to this I have never had any of those spells. I would not be without your pills for any money and can highly recommend them to any one."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

Careful mothers o'er the land
Always keep Cascarets at hand.
Children think them dandy—
They are mild cathartic candy.
Cascarets sell for a dime;
They "work" every time.

When a child has a coated tongue, tainted breath or is bilious, constipated, feverish, or full of cold, give Cascarets. Children gladly take this harmless candy cathartic which thoroughly cleanses their little stomachs, livers and bowels without griping. Each 10 cent box of Cascarets contain directions for dose for children aged one year and upwards.

What Everywoman Knows

Every year, dress fabrics are becoming sheerer and sheerer—the colors more dainty. The ordeal of trusting the delicate garments to "soap and water", however, is done away with by the use of Lux.

You may feel quite free to buy the daintiest blouse or underwear your purse can afford—without a bit of worry about the washing of them. You keep them fresh and new the Lux way—simply dipping them up and down in the creamy, copious Lux suds with never a bit of rubbing to injure them.

Lux won't hurt anything that 'pure water itself may touch.

Ship Saved From Endless Wait in Bay By Navy's Courtesy

Authorities Let the United States Dock at Her Own Hoboken Pier Now in Government Use.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—But for the courtesy of the Naval authorities in offering docking facilities in Hoboken the steamship United States, of the Scandinavian-American Line, which reached port from Christiania, would have had the alternative of returning to her home port or remaining indefinitely at anchor in New York harbour.

The company's Hoboken dock, pier 17, is under the jurisdiction of the United States Navy. When the United States arrived her customary dock up the Hudson was barred from her by the American warships, and the Brooklyn piers were occupied. Captain V. L. Lassen, superintendent of the line, finally obtained permission from the navy to dock the ship at her old berth in Hoboken.

The United States brought twenty-one first-class passengers and eleven in the second cabin. Among the first class passengers were Thorvald Cappelen, of Christiania, who is on his way to Tampico, Mexico, to act as Vice-Consul for Norway.

Captain R. Goetchee, in describing the food situation in the Scandinavian and nearby countries, made the statement that the people of Finland and in the northern part of Sweden were dying of starvation. The population of those countries are anxiously looking to the United States to solve their food problems, he said.

Denmark is now exporting sixty per cent. of her food in order to obtain clothing and other necessaries, retaining but forty per cent. for her own people, Captain Goetchee asserted. In Denmark the people are killing their cattle because of lack of fodder.

Choice Recipes

Forcemeat.

Boil one onion; drain, and chop finely; mix with it one cupful of bread crumbs, half a teaspoonful of sage, pepper and salt, add the yolk of one egg, stir and use.

Mince Pie (Meatless).

Cook half a cupful of rice in water until soft; drain; add to the rice half a cupful of seeded raisins, half a cupful of currants, half a cupful of honey, two tablespoons of chopped orange, a little lemon peel, one tablespoonful of butter, and half a teaspoonful of mixed spce; mix well. Line a pie pan with pastry and fill with the mixture. Cover with a top paste and press the edges together. Brush over with white of eggs, then dust with sugar and bake.

Mock Pigeons.

Mince finely together half a pound of lean beef and the same amount of pork by putting through a meat chopper twice; flatten out with a rolling pin, divide into four equal portions and spread each portion with forcemeat; roll each up tightly and form into the shape of a pigeon; use pieces of potatoes to form the wings and legs. Lay in a baking pan, and add a cupful of stock; baste frequently. Serve with currant jelly.

OPPOSED TO BOLSHEVISM

Paderewski Comments upon the Alleged Slowness of the Allies to Help Stem the Tide.

A NEW CABINET

WARSAW, Jan. 6.—Commenting upon the alleged slowness of the Allies to help the Poles to stem the tide of Bolshevism, Ignace Jan Paderewski, who is suggested as the first president of the Republic of Poland, denounced the Bolshevist movement here early to-day. "The Bolshevist idea is to kill all users of the tooth brush," he said. "If this war is to help mankind, Bolshevism must be downed. Otherwise it was a war of hypocrisy. The inevitable result of Bolshevism will be a return to the barbaric era in Russia and Eastern Central Europe. If Poland is not helped to create a barrier against it, then liberty and justice do not exist. There is no doubt that we must have intervention to deal with Bolshevism. Poland's immediate situation is serious on every side."

Paderewski came to Poland as a representative of four million Poles, from whom he has received plenary powers, he says. He claims to have power to make loans to the Polish government and also to be the representative at Paris of the Polish committee.

General Piludiski is said to have flatly refused to form a new Cabinet and Paderwski has announced that he will be unable to work with Pilsudiski.

Rev. R. Pogue at St. Andrew's Church

"Endurance is One of the Greatest Qualities Known," Said the Speaker.

Last evening Rev. Robert A. Pogue of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, preached at St. Andrew's church in the absence of the Rev. W. L. H. Rowand. He took as his subject the quality of "endurance" from the book of Mark.

"Endurance is one of the greatest qualities known," said Mr. Pogue. "It is not only the quality to persevere but to keep in mind resolutions that have been made in the heat of excitement. An eloquent speaker is heard on the platform appealing for funds for the heathen of China. We say to ourselves there and then that the cause deserves at least a hundred dollars and yet when the minister comes around to collect your subscription you dig in your pocket for a five dollar bill, all the while hoping that it is a one dollar bill. Then we will say that we will read a certain amount of the Bible every day, yet we soon forget even that Christian duty. Then there are many others which I need not mention. There is the matter of church attendance which is often neglected through a lack of perseverance. Most or at least many of our New Year resolutions are forgotten soon after they are made. Why? Because we lack the quality of endurance. And why do we lack the quality of endurance? We must put our faith in God. The flesh is not strong enough for this great quality of endurance.

Some Plug Tobacco Is Cut in Weight

The Empire branch of the Imperial Tobacco Company have notified the retail trade of advanced prices, and the news of the increase is being gently broken to consumers. The Forest and Stream tins have been enlarged from 1/10 to 1/9th of a pound and the price is pushed up to twenty cents. The Black Watch, Bobs and Pay Roll plugs have been reduced from 1/9th to 1/10th of a pound, and Star from 1/8th to 1/9th of a pound. The changes went into effect at once, and are said to be due to the scarcity of tobacco leaf. Smokers may find some satisfaction in the belief that the higher prices will react to the advantage of Canadian growers.

Germany Will Slowly Recover

Associated Press:

BERNE, Jan. 6.—Germany will slowly recover from disasters wrought by war and will in time regain its place among the nations of the world, but in a democratical not monarchalic spirit, according to Count Max Von Montgelas, formerly in charge of American affairs in the Foreign Office at Berlin and now German Minister to Switzerland in place of Baron Von Romberg, retired.

"This recovery, he said today, "will be endlessly hard and will require every ounce of German discipline, but it can be accomplished in case the Entente nations give Germany a sporting chance. That is, to alleviate the blockade sufficiently to permit Germany to pursue her fisheries as formerly and not to impose suffocating industrial and economic conditions such as the occupation of territories west of the Rhine."

Serbia May Fight Again

Will Resist Italy's Claim to Territory on the Adriatic.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—"Should the treaty secretly signed by England, France, Russia and Italy in 1915, whereby Italy was to come into possession of the eastern coast of the Adriatic after the war, be confirmed by the coming Peace Conference, then Serbia would fight again, and fight to the finish. Serbia did not enter this war to become the vassal of any nation. She cannot agree to have Italy control the territory in question."

Such was the straightforward statement given to the Associated Press by Dr. M. R. Vesnitch, the Serbian Minister to France, in an interview yesterday. Dr. Vesnitch added, however, that he believed the presence of the United States, which had already declared against secret treaties and in favour of the rights of small nations, assured "fair play."

So far as the Jugo-Slavs were concerned, he said, they did not recognize the existence of compacts made among certain of the powers after the beginning of the war.

Taylor Brothers With Army in Germany

Mr. Ben Taylor who with his wife and little son, Roy are visiting friends in Peterboro for a few days has received word that two of his brothers, Alf and Oliver are with the Canadian Army of occupation in Germany, and Fred is in England with the Engineers expecting to be sent home shortly. Gunner Alf. Taylor enlisted in 1915 and came through the fighting with the 33rd battery without a scrach. He had trench fever for a time. Driver Oliver Taylor "joined up" in 1916, and Private Fred Taylor went over in 1917.

Death of Ex-President Roosevelt Closes Brilliant Chapter in American History

Col Roosevelt Was Sixty Years Old—A Clot of Blood on the Heart Caused Death—He Was a Pioneer in the Plea for Military Preparedness and Fought Hard for a Large Arms.

HAD A STRENUOUS PUBLIC LIFE

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., JAN. 6. — COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT DIED AT HIS HOME, SAGAMORE HILL, AT 4.15 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING. A CLOT OF BLOOD OF THE HEART CAUSED HIS DEATH, IT WAS STATED AT THE THE HOUSE.

The house at Sagamore Hill was closed, and nobody allowed to enter the grounds. It was stated that the physicians would issue an official announcement later in the day.

Colonel Roosevelt was 60 years old, and was born in New York, Oct. 27, 1858. He was the 26th President of the United States, having succeeded to the Presidency on the death of William McKinley, who was shot and killed at Buffalo, N. Y.

His health had not been very good for some time. In fact he had left the Roosevelt Hospital only a short time ago and had gone home. Shortly before that he had undergone an operation at the hospital and was practically deaf as a result of it.

A BRILLIANT CHAPTER.

The life of the former President is one of the most brilliant chapters in American history. Loved and admired in some quarters, he succeeded, however, in acquiring the enmity of many prominent men, and his later life was filled with strife on one hand, and preparations for even more strenuous public life on the other. It was popularly believed, in fact, that Roosevelt would make an effffort to become President again at the next national convention.

The most recent great public effort of Roosevelt came at the last Republican national convention, when, after the Republicans had refused to nominate him, he turned his strength to Seator Lodge. The latter, however, failed of nomination, and Charles E. Hughes was named to oppose Woodrow Wilson. Hughes then gained the full support of Colonel Roosevelt.

Roosevelt's war record was full of patriotic movements. His opposition to the Democratic administration in its conduct of the war also was marked.

FOR PREPAREDNESS.

At the outbreak of hostilities he offered to raise a regiment of soldiers, and head it in an exepdition to France. His offer was refused. He was a pioneer in the plea for military preparedness in the United States and he fought hard for a large army and a powe ful navy long before his country entered the war.

The Colonel went to bed last night feeling well. His end was peaceful. Several members of the family were at the bedside.

Roosevelt returned home on Christmas day from Roosevelt Hospital, where he had been ill for some time with sciatica.

Immediately after he died his son, Archie Roosevelt, who is in Boston, was notified. He started for home at once.

The end came when there was no one in the room but his valet. The following statement was made to the United Press by Dr. G. W. Faller, of Oyster Bay, the physician who last saw Colonel Roosevelt.

"Colonel Roosevelt retired at twelve o'clock last night feeling much better. At 4.15 o'clock this morning he simply ceased to breath. Death was caused by a pulmonary embolission." This pulmonary embolission, Dr. Faller explained, is a blood clot upon one of the arteries of the lungs.

The funeral will be held from Christ Episcopal church, Oyster Bay. Rev. Dr. George Talmadge will officiate, and interment will be in the Young memorial cemetery at Oyster Bay cove.

At the time of the death, the only persons in the house at Sagamore Hill were Colonel Roosevelt, his wife and the servants.

Colonel Roosevelt spent Sunday evening reading, conversing with Mrs. Roosevelt and chatting with Dr. Faller, who found him apparently much improved and in excellent spirits.

Roosevelt was born, of Dutch ancestry, in New York city, on Oct. 7, 1858. He was a physical weakling and not till he became a man did he develop normally. His manhood, however, was thoroughly typical of strenuous Americanism and he was one of the United States' most famous Presidents. As a statesman, author, soldier and sportsman, he was known throughout the world. He was elected to the New York Legisalture in 1882 and was Governor of New York State in 1899. In the meantime he became prominent as a soldier, leading a regiment of Rough Riders in the Spanish-American war. He was elected Vice-President of the U. S. in 1901, and became President when McKinley was assassinated four months later. He was elected President in 1901. In 1909 he made a famous hunting trip to Africa and in 1914 he explored parts of South America. Before the United States entered the war Roosevelt was outspoken in favour of the Allies. He visited Canada to boost the Victory Loan in 1917.

Poultry Show Opens To-morrow

The directors of the Poultry Association have laid plans for a bigger show than ever this year, and have endeavoured particularly to make it as interesting as possible for the general public. Practical addresses illustrated by lantern slides will be instructive in methods of incubation killing and dressing, preparing and dressing poultry and also backyard gardening and chicken raising. An exhibit of eggs and candling demonstration will be conducted by representatives of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The show opens to-morrow. Miss M. Yates of the Ontario department will give her first address on Tuesday evening.

A JOB FOR THE EX-KAISER'S SON

Will Work For the Benz Automobile Company.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 6. — Prince Auguste Wilhelm, fourth son of the former Kaiser, has obtained a job with the Benz Automobile Co., according to a Berlin despatch to-day.

Auguste Wilhelm was reported to have been wounded in Dec., 1914, when the French shelled his motor car near Rheims. That, as available records show, is his chief claim to fame. The despatch failed to mention what kind of a job he had taken.

Dividend of 200 Per Cent. Declared by Ford Company

Four Million Dollars to Go to Seven Stockholders of Motor Concern.

DETROIT, Jan. 4.—A 200 per cent. dividend was declared by the directors of the Ford Motor Company at their annual meeting December 31, it was announced here.

The dividend, which represents a disbursement of $4,000,000 among seven stockholders, is payable 100 per cent. January 1, and 100 per cent. Februray 1.

It was explained at the offices of the company that the dividends just announced are the first of monthly dividends contemplated throughout the coming year.

GUNNER PEARSON RETURNS HOME

Has Been Overseas Nearly Four Years.

Gunner Jas. R. Pearson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Pearson, 218 Dublin street, has returned home, after an absence of nearly four years in active service. Gunner Pearson left Kingston with the 26th Battery in March, 1915, and has appeared twice on the casualty lists, being wounded last on Sept. 27th. He was in the hospital in England until recently.

The many friends of Gunner Pearson will be pleased to hear of his safe return to Peterborough, looking hale and hearty after nearly four years of hardship.

The Peace Settlement

President Wilson Addresses Gathering in Milan.

By Robert J. Bender.
(United Press.)

MILAN, Jan. 6.— The peace settlement must be dictated by the people of the world not by the statesmen, President Wilson declared to-day, in acknowledging bestowal of citizenship of Milan upon him. The peace delegates must abide by the spirit of the working classes and obtain peace for the general interest, instead of special interests, the President said. The workers are the leaders in establishing international opinion which must be the guide of the peace conferences throughout their labours.

Will Cease Hostilities

This is the Result of a Joint Conference That Was Held.

Special to The Examiner:

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 6.— The Poles and Germans have agreed to cease hostilities, following a joint conference at Hohensalza, according to the Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag.

The newspaper said the meeting was held Thursday between representatives of the Poles and delegates from Hohensalza, Posen, Broeming and Gnesen.

Suffragists Clad in Slickers Keep Watch Fire in Rain

Militant Women Declare Washtub Blaze Will Not Be Extinguished Until Senate Acts Favourably Upon Amendment.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 4. — Several members of the National Women's Party, wearing seamen's slickers, stood in driving rain on the sidewalk before the White House on Thursday to keep burning in a metal washtub their "watch fire," which they say will be kept ignited until the Senate acts favourably on the woman suffrage amendment.

Relays of women had attended the fire since it was lighted in the tub on Wednesday night, after a crowd of citizens and men in uniform had extinguished one started in a decorated urn in Lafayette Square.

Half a dozen women arrested during the disturbance and released without bond did not appear in the police court.

WILL OPPOSE INVASION

Germany Will Make an Effort to Strengthen Her Eastern Frontier,

STATION OCCUPIED

(Canadian Press.

BERLIN, January 6. — Polish troops have occupied the railway station at Chros-Chnik, four miles from Bentschen, and have sent an utlimatum to the German commander in the latter place, demanding that he surrender. The capture of Bentschen by the Poles would be most serious for Berlin and all of northern Germany. Its loss to the Poles would cut communication between Berlin and Silesia and would endanger the provisioning of Frankfort on the Oder and all of northern Germany.

The Cabinet completed its consideration of the Polish situation to-day and directed the ministry of war to take the necessary technocal steps to strengthen the eastern frontiers; when preparations are completed, which will probably be next week, the Cabinet will probably appeal to the people to form a volunteer army to protest the German borders.

WILL NOT GIVE UP.

WARSAW, Jan. 6th. — Ignace Jan Paderewiski has found that General Joseph Pilsudski, the Polish military dictator, will not give up authority in Poland at the present time. Two Polish Leagues had an interview, which it is indicated was unsatisfactory.

"The Wanderer" at The Grand

Mistake in the Dates—A Gigantic Show—120 Sheep.

In Saturday's issue of the Examiner it was stated that "The Wanderer" would appear at the Grand Opera House on January 6th, 7th, and 8th. This should have read the 13h 14th and 15th of the following week. "The Wanderer" was shown at the Royal Alexander, Toronto, all last week and some of the features of this giganic show include a company of two hundred persons, a ballet of ninety and one hundred and twenty sheep. The flock of sheep come down a scenic runway thirty-five feet high. The magnificence of the Orient in the time of King Solomon is revealed in all its grandeur in this wonderful play. Don't forget the dates, January 13th, 14th and 15th of next week.

THE GERMAN BOLSHEVIST

Differs From the Russian Variety —Unemployment and Lack of Food.

NO VIOLENCE

By John Graudens,
(United Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 6. — Bolshevism in Germany is an intellectual movement, with practically no violence, as compared with the Russian variety. This form of radicalism is slowly gaining ground in Germany. The reasons for this can be summed up as follows:

First—Russian funds are being spent freely by agitators among the workmen and soldiers.

Second—There is a growing fear that Entente capitalism intends to exploit Germany.

Third— Unemployment and lack of food continue.

OUT OF WORK.

Men out of work and deserters from the army and navy, who are finding it increasingly difficult to get enough to eat, are easily influenced by the Bolsheviks.

Most of the followers of Karl Liebknecht, the recognized leader of the movement, are to be found in Berlin, Bremen and a few industrial districts in the Rhineland and Silesia.

It is impossible to obtain actual figures as to the number of Bolsheviks in Germany, but the nominations of Spartacusians (German Bolsheviks) as candidates for the national elections, indicate they are in a very small minority. At a recent meeting of Spartacusians only a hundred delegates were present from all parts of the country.

Primary School Was Entertained

The Primary department of St. John's Sunday school spent a pleasant time in the schoolroom last Friday at their annual Christmas gathering. Miss English, the Superintendent, assisted by other ladies of the congregation, arranged a series of games, several sets of humorous lantern slides were shown; an impromptu concert proved a great success, and a dainty repast was no the leas enjoyable part of a thoroughly happy gathering.

THE WEATHER

Sunday morning saw the lowest temperature of this winter up to the present time. Sixteen degrees below zero was the record, and the temperature was around the zero mark most of the day. Two above zero was the lowest last night.—W.P.

THE NEW GRATUITY.

Ex-service men who did not reach France and were discharged before November 11th, and consequently will not receive the benefit of the new war gratuity as the measure stands at present, continue to protest that the ruling that has been made is an injustice to them. They particularly resent the fact that a conscripted soldier who did not get any further than England and who has not yet been discharged, is entitled to share in the gratuity, while they, although they voluntarily enlisted for service and were turned down by the last medical boards in England do not come under the provisions of the new order-in-council. Even a man who may have been wounded in an air raid in England, and consequently was unfitted for further service, gets no part of the new allowance if he was discharged before November 11 before reaching France. There seems to be considerable reason in the protest of the returned soldiers that many of them are being discriminated against in favour of drafted men, and it may be expected that the Great War Veterans' Association and kindred societies of discharged soldiers will have a word or two to say on this matter to the government in an effort to have the order made retro-active, not only for the soldier who went to France, but for his comrade who got no further than England.

A PRICE INVESTIGATION

The incoming council should waste no time in investigating the possibilities offered by the order-in-council regarding food prices which enables municialities to appoint fair price committees to inquire into the sale of food stuffs. While the machinery tha has been provided by the Federal Government for this purpose is cumbersome yet it affords a chance for civic action and Peterboro's new council would be welladvised to go into the question as soon as possible. There are especially some of the restaurants price lists that seem abnormally high and an investigation should bring good results. If the prices that are being asked are not unfair in view of condition over which the merchant or restaurant proprietor has no control then it would be decidedly to his interest to have this fact established by civic inquiry, while on the other hand if the spread of profit is unduly great the consumer is entitled o redress. As the matter stands at present men are being condemned as profiteers because the people with no definite information to serve as a guide have formed their own conclusions. A Fair Prices commitee formed by the Council under the powers given them by the order-in-council should be welcomed by merchant and consumer alike. At all events there will be nothing lost by an early consideration of the whole matter.

QUARTERS FOR VETERANS.

One of the first matters that will likely come before the new Council is the question of civic aid towards providing permanent headquarters for Peterborough's returned soldiers. The War Veterans' Association will undoubtedly press their claims as soon as possible and the Council will have an early opportunity of considering this important question. In the meantime the Veterans would do well to carefully go into the whole matter for themselves and approach the city fathers with a definite plan of what they want. There is a good deal of misunderstanding among citizens as to the desire of the returned soldiers in this respect. Suggestions that they should be given the armouries, where there would be excellent accommodation for the housing of some hundreds of soldiers show that many people have not the slightest idea of what the Veterans would like to have. There is no desire on their part to live in a barracks; they have had enough of huts and banks, of gray blankets and "gray backs" in army life, and they want to become civilians just as speedily as possible.

But so far the general public has been given very little information in regard to the whole matter. There has been much talk of "better accommodation" for the Veterans—but it has not got down to something definite. Before approaching the Council, Peterborough's soldiers should thoroughly map out their plans so that when they go before the aldermanic board they will be able to state their case clearly and definitely. If they do this and present a claim that is reasonable and practicable there is no doubt that they will be received sympathetically and cordially, for the people of Peterborough are surely determined that the men who fought for us are entitled to every consideration. There is no use, however, in coming forward with any half-baked proposition, lacking in detail and definiteness.

CANADA'S DIVISIONS.

This northern land of sturdy people, hard wheat and rugged tasks may not have had the "melting pot" problem of its big neighbour to the south, but we have a problem that presents almost as great difficulties—and sooner or later we shall have to be a crucible for a mixture of strange races. What sort of molds are we preparing for the influx of adaptable metal.

What one has in mind are the great four divisions of geography and mental attiude in Canada. First are the Maritime Provinces, from which have come some of the finest intellectual types the nation has produced, a land of rugged occupations, yet quickly becoming, as it leaves the sea, a pastoral country of contentment, as much concerned with essential democracy as modern improvements and conducting affairs and politics somewhat on old-fashioned lines, with nothing of the crude strain of latter-day efficient idealism, but working on the homely virtue and sound basic principle idea.

Then is a solid, French Quebec, fenced off, misunderstood, as well as misunderstanding, filled with a volatile, electric spirit which rarely finds expression in terms of broad Canadianism, because it is seldom called to the paltform to speak with a mind upon broadened national issues. Quebec is picturesque, rather than practical, yet filled with latent spirit and potentialities that should ripen into a rich fruitage for the whole nation. With the deepening of the St. Lawrence its chief city may become the chief port of America.

Ontario, hard-headed in rural and urban parts, producing intensified and successful concerns, great in finance, great in production, great in egoism, great in loyalty, great in prejudice and insularity, Ontario is a rugged, central keystone province, which often finds it hard to believe that there is any more to Canada. Toronto is most often the voice of Ontario, a city of magic growth in industry, finance and education.

A veritable ocean of rock separates Ontario from the west. It might as well be thought of as a solid wall of rock that will forever remain as a barrier to a common effort. The west is eager and quick, chance-taking and courageous, full of those who dare much and live dangerously, but forge ahead in practical experiment, which may be a blunder if it lose, and a howling victory if it win. The west in a minute would tear up traditions Ontario would regard as sacred institutions. The west will test men quickly and harshly and "throw them down" without a moment's thought; Ontario will follow the man of he belongs to the right lodge or can create idol worship by means of mock heroics and constant appearance.

There are four distinct attitudes of mind in Canada. No man coming with the policies and practices of one division can give Canada a leadership that will bring about a common purpose and consciousness. It is the rare man with vision broad enough to fuse the whole into a work entity that Canada will always need. The man to bring this country into a close harmony of effort, in which the musicians will be playing "O Canada," must be no provincial product. He must know and see and feel the country's aspirations and merge them into a policy that will give to us such ens of pulling together force for a common purpose as animated the nation during a certain fifteen years.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ald.-Elect Murray's fence threatens to become famous.

At that the Labour candidate had to surmount far more formidable obstacles to get into Council.

This is one year when the old aldermen cannot claim all the chairmanships.

There are not enough of last year's board to lead all the committees.

"First to help—last to appeal," is the Salvation Army slogan for the big drive this month. It should be an effective one.

There was little of the Dickens' atmosphere in the Christmas dinner that was served on the Northland, according to the testimony of the returned soldiers at the inquiry.

The Scrap Metal Market Unchanged

Business in Supplies and Raw Materials.

The placing of contracts for equipment for a number of small French vessels is keeping a number of shops and warehouses fairly well supplied for the present. Marine activity is just now responsible for the largest part of the business moving in supplies and raw materials. The completion of the contracts will call for a fairly large quantity of plate, boiler tubes, marine forgings, etc. Nearly all contracts that are quoted on now for plate are on the 3c. base price. The chances seem to be that this price for plate will stand until July of 1919, after which there may be another alteration, depending on the response that the 3-cent price has brought. The preway base price was $1.40, so there is quite a margin there yet, but one that will not be entirely taken up unless all signs fail. Students of the situation look for a recession from the three-cent rate, claiming that the market will eventually find its level around $2.50, below which they do not look to see it go.

Defined Ideas.

Several manufacturing concerns have pretty well defined ideas regarding the plans they intend to follow for after-war work. They are not making many announcements yet for several reasons, the principal one of which is that they do not wish to invite competition in the lines which they are investigating at their own expense.

The scrap metal situation remains in the same position, one very close to stagnation. As has been stated for several weeks past, there is no scrap market now that will furnish an accurate idea of the trading values of the different lines. Unless some person wants to sell at a suicidal price dealers are not going to come into the market to buy. They are advising those with whom they do much business to hold their material until there is some improvement in the situation.

There has been no drop in the price of high speed steel supplies. During the war there was a great demand for this for munitions work, and standard lines cere neglected. Some dealers have large stocks of special shapes in stock which will be useless, as there is no other operation requiring such a fixture.—Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News.

DESERTER SURRENDERS TO TOWNSHIP CLERK

Subsisted Some Time Upon Rabbits and Birds—Resented Camp Treatment.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Jan. 2.—Thomas Hayes, who a couple of months ago led the Military Police a chase through the hills of Prince and Korah townships, when they sought to arrest him on a charge of being a deserter, and who was reported to have fired a rifle at them, and to have been living with other deserters in a cabin in the woods and stealing from farmers in order to live surrendered himself on New Year's Day to the Township Clerk, R. M. Moore, having lived for some time in hiding and existing on rabbits and birds.

Hayes claims he fired at the Military Police only because they were firing at him, and it was his only way to get a chance to get across the gully that would separate him from his pursuers. He says he did not want to kill them, as he could have picked them off without the slightest difficulty, for he was known as one of the crack shots of his regiment.

Farmers in the two townships are reported as willing to sign a petition in Hayes' favor, as they think he is not a bad fellow, and he says he deserted from the camp at Niagara because of the treatment he received from the officers, who wanted to treat him as a draftee, when he had really volunteered several times before being taken by draft.

He was taken before Magistrate J. T. MacKay this morning, when the case was adjourned until Saturday.

SAW GREEK PRIEST ROASTED IN FIRE

Where 14,938 Greeks Lived in Seres in 1917 Only 2,293 Are Now Living There.

A special cable message from Athens to The Liberal, an American-Hellenic newspaper, published weekly, says:

"The General Secretary of the Department of Justice has returned from Seres and communicates the following:

"'In September, 1917, the inhabitants of Seres were 23,693, of which 14,938 were Greeks, 7,925 Turks, and 730 Israelites. In September, 1918, after the Bulgarian occupation, the inhabitants were 5,793, of which half were Bulgarians transported from the interior of Bulgaria; there were only 2,293 Greeks, the half of which were under ten years of age. In Drama there were found twelve bodies of Greeks thrown in wells by Bulgarians.

"'A commission of the Red Cross, upon request of Mr. Venizelos, visited Eastern Macedonia and witnessed the destruction of towns and villages as well as other horrible crimes. English prisoners arriving from Bulgaria in Salonika relate the martyrdoms suffered during their captivity. An English officer tells how he saw a Greek priest hanged by the feet and roasted in a small fire. The representative of the American Tobacco Fund communicates that the Bulgarians, fleeing from Cavalla, carried with them 10,000 cattle.

"'The Archbishop of London, who arrived in Athens after a visit to Macedonia, communicates that the American Legation in Sofia is transformed into a hospital. The Bulgarians maltreated the Greek and Serbian prisoners. He was told much of the Bulgarian atrocities and the destruction of the property of the Greek population, and was a witness himself of inhuman acts. Sub-Lieutenant Manthrakis, a prisoner of war, relates that he was interned, together with English and French officers, in a cage, naked and without food. The Bulgarians stole from the English officers his gold artificial teeth.'"

KING'S VISIT UNLIKELY.

Prince of Wales, However, Will Visit United States in Colonies Tour.

LONDON, Jan. 2.— A visit to the United States by King George and Queen Mary, in response to President Wilson's invitation, is not likely, it was learned from a reliable source to-day.

That the Prince of Wales will visit the United States when he makes a tour of British Dominions, is considered certain, however. His visit probably will be made next spring.

Running a Town With a Club

The Story of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, as Told By James H. Collins in the Saturday Evening Post of January 1st, 1916—Membership Numbered in Thousands, Representing All Interests in the City, Businessmen to Chauffeurs All Working Together.

In Minneapolis they have an interesting way of running the town. Without changing the political scheme of the city government to any extent, as some other American cities do when they want better administration, they have backed up their little old last year's government, and also the common or garden variety of politician, with some of the business and technical ability that runs other things—factories, stores, railroads, exchanges, and so on.

Several other cities are on the same track, but Minneapolis seems to have been at it longer and to have gone farther in drawing lay helpers into city administration. About every other fellow you meet there is apt to be carrying round a chunk of the actual administration. He may be a corporation president with a big chunk, or a chauffeur with a small one. The small chunks are often more important than the big ones, and in everything Minneapolis gets results with an intelligence and thoroughness and good nature very refreshing in these complex days, when running a town is such a superheated sort of business.

The way it all started was this:

About ten or twelves years ago, when every town in the United States was organizing an advertising club, a few men in Minneapolis who work at advertising for a living got together and formed a Publicity Club on the usual lines. Their idea was to meet from time to time as craftsmen and discuss technical matters for their own improvement.

From the very start, however, all Minneapolis seemed bound to misunderstand that organization. It thought that a Publicity Club must be something to boom the town. The real advertising men found, to their astonishment, that every other business man wanted to join. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers, brokers and salaried men poured in, full of enthusiasm for what they assumed was the Big Idea, to make the old town hum—which had not been the idea at all!

Before the advertising men realized what was happening, their mouest Publicity Club had appointed committees to secure new industries, to entertain conventions, to increase trade, and to advertise Minneapolis to the rest of the world. Noonday meetings of the club also became very popular, and members of this overgrown technical society would drop work for an hour and flock to hear any good speaker from the outside who had something to say.

Eventually the real advertising men had to organize another club for themselves, a little one of a hundred members, confined strictly to technical matters. And eventually, too, the old Publicity Club became so large that a better organization was needed, and it was transformed to the present Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association. This is known as the C. & C., for short, and it is a big business club, in which centre most of the progressive thought and voluntary service that make Minneapolis what it is.

Dues Are Voluntary.

The C. & C. is a Chamber of Commerce plus. Its membership includes not only business men but teachers, doctors, labour leaders, clerks, chauffeurs, and every other element of the community that is representative and upon which things can be built. It has a yearly revenue of a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to pay its own expenses, raised from members' dues. Each member pays dues according to the rough value of the organization to himself. A big wholesaler, constantly seling goods to hundreds of buyers who are brought to Minneapolis by the C. & C., can naturally pay more than the small retailer with a modest turnover, while the public-service corporation profits more directly than the proprietor of, say, two or three taxicabs. So each pays what seems right and the dues run from ten dollars a year up to as much as five thousand dollars. But big dues do not mean big influence, for the ten-dollar member has one vote and his say-so, and the five-thousand-dollar member has no more.

This organization is a clearing house for the ability and public spirit of the town. It brings able men together in community service, keeps them at work, and backs them up with expert assistance.

Government in American cities is not all it might be; yet the worst-managed city has among its business and professional men enough technical ability to run a community ten times the size if it could ever be hitched to the town. A few of these men could tackle the job single-handed, for they already handle affairs just as large and complicated. Hundreds of other men could deal with portions of the community's work, get tremendous fun out of it, and would serve for nothing and grow in the doing. The chief shortcoming of American city government seems to be that few of these men are enlisted; but in Minneapolis they have found out how to accomplish this.

Almost any American city can be roused to spurts of public enterprise—building an exposition, landing a convention, or putting a lot of high-class energy behind some spectacular project for a short time. It is not so easy to keep up the pace and attend to minor details.

Minneapolis started off with the usual Whoop-la! The Publicity Club went in for brass-band boosting stunts, and these were exceedingly useful in rousing interest and getting men to work for the town. But Minneapolis has always had a strong streak of New England in its make-up, and before the first enthusiasm had a chance to die down there were solid citizens on the committees, appraising values, separating the substance from the fireworks and laying out the future in a shrewd Yankee way.

For example, one of the first committees was that organized to secure conventions. (The article described in details how Minneapolis was made a convention centre).

Business Men Interested.

The C. & C. has all sorts of major and minor community improvements going on all the time, from making Minneapolis a seaport to reducing needless noise. Most of the work is done through committees; but committees differ widely in their enthusiasm and energy, and wise supervision plays the greatest possible part in making things move.

It is often said: "Oh, business men cannot be interested in anything outside their own business." In Minneapolis that has been found untrue—they can be put to work for the community; but there are definite ways of doing it.

Every business man has two great interests. One is his business and the other his home. The latter is always biggest, of course—his home and his family are the reasons for his business. Anything that will make home a better place to live in enlists his co-operation — better schools, better streets, better transit, better surroundings, better social life. The greater his interest in his business the keener his interest in the community, for good business nowadays means improving the homes of his employees as well as the particular neighbourhood where he himself happens to live.

These things being so, the men who conduct the work of the C. & C. understand that enlisting business men in community improvements is a matter of putting projects before them clearly, right side up, in a practical way, and showing them what they can do. The Minneapolis housing code is a fine example of how it works.

In the first place, a student in the University of Minnesota, which is in Minneapolis, wrote a thesis. His subject was housing, something about which few people in that locality had ever heard up to that time. For a year he worked on the tenements, tabulating the dark rooms, the bedrooms where shifts of lodgers slept, bathrooms used as kitchens, inadequate privies, contaminated water supplies—in a word, all the regular old slum stuff, so often used by the reformer and muckraker. When he had his facts he wrote his thesis, and the thesis attracted the attention of a few people who had never suspected their nice, clean city of possessing slums.

Correcting Slum Evils.

"Can such things be in Minneapolis?" they asked, astonished. A little investigation showed that they could be, and actually were; the nice, clean city had a number of vigorous young slum centres ready to grow up with the town.

So definite plans were laid through the C. & C. to present these facts right side up. A committee was appointed, with architects, builders and other experts serving, and after they had verified the facts and taken some pictures of housing evils a meeting was held to lay the information before the town. Some oposition was anticipated, for the audience included landlords and real-estate men; but as the unpleasant pictures were thrown on the screen, showing families living in dark basements, children with only ash piles for a playground, and whole tenements taking their drinking water from unsafe wells, hostility died away. People were profoundly touched with pity. They could not say socialism, because there were some of the soldest business men in town on the committee.

"What is the remedy?" they asked. "Show us the practical thing to do." Landlords and real-estate men were as anxious as anybody to bring about better conditions.

This led to a committee on housing and town planning. It demonstrated that slum evils came from lax housing laws and letting the town just grow, like Topsy, when it needed living quarters for a thousand new families every month. A lot of hard work naturally went into this code and many conflicting views and interests had to be harmonized.

Suddenly, while the committee was working on its code, the Socialist Party acted in a way that promised to block the project. A bill providing for the adoption of a rival code was introduced in the Board of Aldermen, which, though it was tabled, indicated that not everybody in Minneapolis had the facts straight.

Using a Socialist.

Members of the committee went after the Socialists to find out what they wanted or were trying to accomplish; and after considerable difficulty they succeeded in locating their leader. It seems that the Socialists, seeing landlords and real-estate men on the committee, had assumed that the new housing code would be planned for the benefit of capitalists; so they were "agin it" on general principles, and had introduced a code of their own. This code had been hurriedly copied from one made for another city. The man who had originally drawn that code was a member of the housing committee. From his technical knowledge of housing he was able to show the Socialists that it would be a mighty poor fit for Minneapolis; and presently, by straight man-to-man talks and good understanding, the Socialists were won over and one of their men joined the housing committee.

And this Socialist member was a dandy! A carpenter, working for day's wages, he came to committee meetings in his flannel shirt and gave hours upon hours of his time in the evenings, with architects, builders, real-estate men and landlords, discussing the provisions of the new code. He knew housing codes all over the world, because indignation over the evils permitted scamp builders in houses he worked on had led him to study housing codes to see what could be done to strengthen the laws. Business men on that committee soon learned to have the utmost respect for his knowledge, sense and ability.

Finally the code was all settled, drawn and ready for the legislature. Everybody expected that passing it would be a matter of routine; but unforeseen opposition arose. It was small opposition, afraid to come out into the open; but it should have been taken into account. The code failed to reach the legislature in time for passage on the last day, and it is believed there was political trickery.

All that work gone for nothing! The committee and the friends of better housing were naturally downcast; but here is where the trained men on the association staff came in to show victory in the apparent defeat.

"Why be downcast?" asked the general secretary. "It's true the code didn't pass; but the code is really an incident. Don't you see that your work has led several hundred public-spirited citizens to study housing and understand what is needed? That is the main thing, and in due time a proper housing code will grow out of it. Getting people aroused and informed is the real issue."

They regard the C. & C. as a man-making organization, not one for making codes and laws. If it can organize and develop men the men will make the laws. This philosophy is very sustaining in defeat.

Three years ago the aldermen of Minneapolis would hardly have listened to advice from architects and real-estate men on the revision of the building code. They would have deemed them self-interested. But through the C. & C. there has been built up a committee admittedly so fair and capable that to-day it is revising that code at the request of the aldermen.

A new bridge was to be built across the river. The aldermen had in mind an ordinary railroad trestle, ugly in every way. A C. & C. committee asked for a good-looking bridge and, when the request was ignored, offered to furnish the designs. Eventually thirty thousand dollars was spent for designs by a good firm, and now the concrete bridge is going up—a real beauty.

A Technical School.

This big business club looked into the schools of Minneapolis to find out why boys and girls were not better fitted for business-life. That is a familiar question everywhere, but few communities seem to get much below the surface in investigating it. The reason boys and girls were not ready to take up special work in business concerns after leaving the public schools of Minneapolis is about the reason everywhere — because not nearly enough money is spent on public schools to turn out a first-rate human product. People always think of school expenditures in millions of dollars and marvel at the totals; but the average spent on the individual child in Minneapolis is only forty-five dollars a year for everything, and only seven hundred dollars a child for a complete course, from kindergarten through high school.

Minneapolis has a new school to train people for work. It is called the Dunwoody Institute and began with an endowment of several million dollars, left by a wealthy citizen. At this writing the institute owns not a foot of land or a building, yet is giving business courses to fourteen hundred students. The first step in getting it started was to call a first-rate technical-education man from the East and tell him in general terms what was wanted—a better kind of worker for the industries of Minneapolis.

Fifty different courses have already been laid out to meet the needs of the man in overalls.

Minneapolis has strong civic spirit because, through organization and skillful direction, it has taken the plain, everyday human spirit found among people everywhere, and put it at work. The outcome is a community that instantly impresses the stranger in outstanding matters, and which, when examined closely for little details, is found to be all of a piece.

IN THE LIBERATED DISTRICTS

(By Captain J. A. F. Ozanne).

Very interesting information from an official source has come to hand concerning the conditions of life in Northern France during the German occupation. The evidence of the inhabitants has been taken by a joint committee, composed of French gendarmes and the British military police. Those who have seen these unfortunate people testify that a certain air of bewilderment is common among them and they seem hardly capable of realising the fact that they are once more free citizens in their own country. None who has read their evidence would wonder at it.

The Germans forced men, women, and children to salute them on all occasions that they passed them in the streets. This was a standing order which was most strictly enforced, and numerous instances are recorded where even small children have been brutally knocked about by German soldiers because they neglected to salute. The result of this brutal oppression can be seen in the nervous way in which those wretched people are constantly saluting their French and British interrogators every time that they are addressed.

The loyalty of those people to the land of their birth has been simply wonderful, as also has been their loyalty to one another during those terrible days of their captivity, or rather slavery.

Ample evidence is forthcoming from these people of the villainous treatment dealt out by the Germans to British prisoners of war. There is no doubt that British prisoners were treated far more harshly and severely than those of other nationalities. Every excuse, no matter how trivial, was seized upon by the Germans as a pretext for ill-treating them. There are many instances of British soldiers having been shot at and struck with whips for attempting to accept bread offered to them by the French civilians who pitied their starving condition, and a typical case of a British soldier being shot through the hand while reaching at an apple in a tree is narrated by nuns from the Hospice of Tilloloy.

The treatment of the French civilians seems to have varied according to the nature of the Kommandantur. As a rule the children were employed on work in the fields, and in general did not seem to have suffered much. But at the same time, there are cases on record where the whip was freely used for little or no reason, and the rough treatment of girls for trumpery or non-existent offences has apparently not been rare.

There are constant and numerous reports of wanton damage to property, and even a casual visit suffices to confirm these reports. Houses which have never suffered from shelling are found, upon inspection, to be but a heap of debris and rubbish in the interior.

All the inhabitants who have been questioned are unanimous in affirming that towards the end of September the German officers and interpreters regarded victory for Germany as hopelessly out of the question, and the possibility of defeat was beginning to dawn on them. There is little doubt that much of the pillage and destruction of private property was done out of mere spite. It was the final manifestation of that spirit which had already caused the wanton destruction of so much that can never be replaced.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Rev. Dr. McGillivary Tells of the Conditions in China

peaker Gave Address in St. Andrew's and St. Paul's Churches

REFORM IN CHINA

Sunday morning Rev. Donald McGillivray, of Dhang Hai, China, delivered an interesting address in St. Andrew's Church. In the evening at St. Paul's Church the speaker made a convincing appeal for the moral and practical support of the church. He referred to the vastness of the work, and the pitiable conditions under which the missionaries of China are compelled to work. The speaker said his sympathy was for the young women who had gone worth as medical missionaries. Many of them were compelled to work in places little better than a pigstye.

Living Sacrifices.

"If the Forward Movement cannot do any better than that I am through with the forward movement," said Rev. Mr. McGillivray. "The great story of God is revealed in these noble women who go out as living sacrifices to the cause which they so heroically and nobly represent. The quarters in which they do their work is a disgrace to civilzaition, and yet the church will sit quietly by and say we cannot afford anything better. Every time you give a dollar to the foreign missionary it means that some little Chinese girl's feet is unbound.

Reform in China.

"You have pictured reform sweeping over China. Reform may sweep over Canada or America but not in China. The atmosphere in China is so thick for any reform to sweep over the land. The darkness is too deep. There is only one thing that will make reform sweep over the land, and that is because there are living people behind it.

The Forward Movement began in the third chapter of Genesis. The first battle of the Marne was fought on the mount of temptation when Jesus refused to make terms with Satan. The second battle was fought on the Cross of Calvary. There have been a great many calls in the past four years, but the greatest call of them all is the call of God. The gospel opens up an appreciation of God's wondrous love and power. This is revealed in the mission fields of China and in the wonderful work being accomplished by the natives who have heard the call and responded to it.

Interesting Pictures.

The speaker illustrated his sermons, which were on China as a Mission field, by interesting photographs, examples of British war propaganda in China, and the flag of the new Republic. The burden of his address was that the psychological moment for a forward movement had come. China was open and ripe. Other less desirable agencies such as beer, cigarettes, patent medicines, etc., were pressing in, and it was up to the peopel of Canada to send China the moral and spiritual help which would alone help her to solve the many problems of a freshly awakened people.

Political panaceas could only have surface effects. Real reforms proceed only from love to God and man which no opposition or ridicule can cool. Canada is a book-living land, and Dr. MacGillivray's special work is publicity for everything true and good. Through the press, secular and missionary, he has exerted a powerful influence on the leaders of China.

Dr. MacGillivray proceeds from Peterborough to Ottawa on Tuesday to address a meeting there. This is his first visit to Peterborough since he became a missionary. During his stay he was the guest of the Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's church.

SIMPLEX SHOE POLISH
Brightest and Best

Pleaded Guilty to Being Drunk

Secured Alcohol Prescription for "Rubbing Purposes."

Edward Alcombeck and Percy Holland were "preparing" to drink a little alcohol at the rear of a George street pool room on the evening of Monday, December 28, when the police happened along, and escorted Messrs. Alcombeck and Holland to the police station. A remand for a week followed which landed them in the County Gaol for a week. Both speak ruefully of their experience in that institution of correction, but they stated with delight that oranges and turkey formed part of their New Year's fare. Both pleaded guilty in police court this morning to being drunk and paid fines amounting to $28.20. Holland endeavoured to obtain a brandy prescription from Dr. Greer but was refused. A "lady" friend took up Percy's cause and obtained the prescription. A prescription of alcohol was obtained from Dr. Young, and this they were "preparing" to drink when the police happened along.

"I guess I was feeling pretty good," replied Percy when asked by the Chief if he were drunk at the time.

Alcombeck for obvious reasons was subjected to a close examination by the Chief. He said that he obtained the prescription from Dr. Carmichael and obtained the alcohol from Kent's drug store.

"Didn't you ask for whiskey first," asked the Chief.

"No. The doctor asked me what I wanted it for and I told him that I wanted it for rubbing purposes."

"Did Dr. Carmichael make any examination of you?"

"No."

"How was it that you happened to go to Dr. Carmichael?"

"I went to the first doctor that I came to."

"But you went to Dr. Carmichael before for alcohol?"

"No I haven't," was the positive reply.

"Are you sure?"

"Yes."

"And," said the Chief looking squarely at the accuser, "did you know that the label on the bottle stated that it was for an itching skin?"

"Yes, I told the doctor that too. I have had a bad shoulder ever since I had the influenza."

"Did you ever get any prescriptions for whiskey from any doctor"

"Yes, I got an order from both Dr. Morgan and Dr. Edward Wood."

"Was Dr. Morgan treating you at the time?"

"Yes, for a cold."

"And how was it that you went to Dr. Wood?"

"He is the closest doctor to my home, and I went in there to get a prescription for a cold."

"But you didn't get anything else at the doctors did you?"

"Yes I did, I got a box of pills and a bottle of medicine for a cold."

"But you didn't want the pills or the medicine, did you?"

He admitted that he didn't.

"What did you do with the alcohol?" asked the Chief leaning on his left elbow for the fifth time.

"I took it home and hid it in the pantry."

"Everybody at the house said that they had not seen the alcohol," resumed Chief Thompson.

"I took a drink whenever I wanted one after I had diluted it in three parts of water."

"The alcohol was gone Monday, and you only got the pint on Saturday night, did you say?" asked the Chief.

"Yes, affirmed the accused."

"And you drank several quarts of this alcohol and you waren't drunk?"

No, I wasn't intoxicated."

"Goodness," exploded the Magistrate. "You didn't go to church on Sunday did you?"

"Did you ever get a prescription from Dr. King?" was the prosecution's final question.

"No."

"Fourteen ten," said the Magistrate.

"Court's adjourned," boomed the Chief as Alcombeck walked out of the box and down the stairs and out.

Scene From "Turn to the Right," at The Grand To-morrow (Tuesday) Night.

There are no shots or shocks, and not a single reference to the war in "Turn to the Right!" the much-enjoyed comedy classic which United Producing Company Limited, are sending to The Grand to-morrow (Tuesday) night.

As a story of the heart and home, told amid quaint, peaceful surroundings, it is held in grateful remembrance by the millions who surrendered to its charms during its fifty-four weeks at the Gaiety Theatre and the principal cities of the country last season.

Neither is theer a villain, a wronged heroine or a sex problem. In the brisk, humorous fashion that has distinguished all of Winchell Smith's plays, it depicts the happenings in a ground of plain home folks when a trio of nimble-witted and sophisticated youths from the city take charge of a run-down fruit farm and rescue it from the clutches of a village skinflint. How the youths gradually succumb to the Christian influence of golden-heart Mother Bascom is shown in a series of situations that have swayed millions from tears to laughter. The Bascom peach orchard at springtime and the "little house on the hill, illusion just before the final curtain, rank with the finest examples of American stagecraft.

SEAMEN WHO MANNED GREAT NAVAL GUNS IN FRANCE TELL HOW THEY ROUTED BIG "BERTHA"

Crew of 500 Returned Aboard the Utah—Havoc Wrought by Stee Monsters Extended for Sixteen Miles Behind German Lines.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman, in reciting to newspapermen on Thursday the glorious achievements of the American navy abroad, mentioned casually the "splendid battery of naval guns that co-operated with our army in France." But the details of the havoc wrought upon the German lines of communication by those fourteen-inch steel and fire spitting monsters did not become public until some of the very men who manned the giant rifles modestly related their accomplishments here.

Holes twenty feet across and fifteen feet deep where once were railroad tracks, two freight cars on the roof of a railroad station instead of their usual position on the rails, and forty dead Germans in what was once a moving picture shack, were a few of the good things that accomplished by their shells.

There were five guns in all, comprising what was known as the Naval Railway Battery. Five hundred men and officers manned them, about eighty to a gun, the balance comprising the staff train. They were specially picked men, chosen from the training stations and rifle ranges and sent abroad during last summer, on board the George Washington, the Von Steuben and other transports.

The first detachment of these men to return reached port with the foreign waters battle fleet, and are stationed aboard the dreadnought Utah.

Guns Refused at First.

From men of this detachment was learned how the army at first refused to use the guns unless mounted and declared the mounting to be impracticable; how the guns, when mounted, were sent out to "get" the big super gun that was shelling Paris, and how they succeeded in smashing the Metz-Sedan railway and other lines of German communication.

The big 14-inch guns threw a projectile more than twice the size of the supposedly "super gun" that retreated before they could get near it, the men related. Their targets were usually sixteen or seventeen miles away, although the guns have a range of twenty-one miles.

"At the beginning of the war the navy had on hand a number of these big fourteen-inch guns, idle," the spokesman of the party began in telling the story. "They were offered to the army for use ashore, but army officials refused to accept them, for they doubted if a moveable foundation sufficiently stable to withstand the shock of their recoil could be made.

"Rear Admiral Plunket, director of target practice—he was then a captain—felt sure that it could be done, however. He began last January plans for mounting the big guns on railway carriages. The Baldwin Locomotive Works agreed to build the mounts and in fifty days the first gun was on its way to the army proving grounds at Sandy Hook.

"Needless to say, the trials were successful. Full charges were fired at angles from ten to forty-five degrees with the same ease as if they were in a battleship turret.

Shot Sixteen Miles Behind Lines.

"The first contingent of men left the States May 25 on the U.S.S. Von Steuben. Men and materials were assembled at St. Nazaire, France. The battery contains about five hundred men and officers. By dint of hard work at night all summer, in the shops and yards of St. Nazaire, the first gun train was shoved off in August to 'get' the long range gun which was bombarding Paris. Train No. 2 followed in the same month, an Nos. 3, 4, 5 and the staff train soon afterward.

"The long range gun had retreated before we could get after it. Once on the front, however, we began out work of severing the main arteries of the enemy's railroad system, holding up his supplies and hindering his removal of guns and important military material in his 'strategic retreat.' Our firing was everywhere successful and continued until the end of the war. For some seconds after the official cessation of hostilities the detonation of the last shot reverberated from the hills of Verdun.

"Our objectives were usually sixteen or seventeen miles behind the lines, and our ranges twenty or twenty one miles. From the forest of Compiegne we fired on Ham; from Fontenoy and Soissons on Laon and its railway connections; from Jussy (eleven kilometres east of Ham) on Montiers (north of Laon); from Charny and other points north of Verdun we destroyed the Metz-Sedan railway line at Montmedy and other places, and finally guns Nos. 1 and 2 were preparing emplacements in forests near Nancy and Luneville when the armistice was declared.

"In all, about eight hundred rounds were fired. Had the war continued the guns would soon have had to be brought back for re-lining. A number of the holes made by our projectiles have since been visited and examined. One was twenty feet in diameter and fifteen feet deep; another thirty-three feet in diameter and twelve feet deep and so on, depending on the character of the ground. At Laon one shell dropped on a cinema in which were 100 Germans. Forty identification tags were later picked up, but what became of the other sixty no one knows. There also two freight cars were lifted bodily by the force of the explosion and remained resting on the top of the station building.

"In the entire battery only three men have been lost. Two succumbed to diseases and the other died of wounds from fragments of a German shell."

Board of Education

To the Electors:

I tender my hearty thanks to my nominators and supporters in the recent elections, and look forward with pleasure to the next contest, when I hope to be in the field again, with augmented forces.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the friendly rivalry that existed between my competitors and myself, and, in bowing to the decision of the public vote, plead for better treatment at their hands next time. I paly a quiet game, but I "play to win," and, in winning, "plan to work,' on this matter of the education and development of our children and young people. The coming generation must not look back upon us with reproach in this respect.

Having entered the field in the cause of Education, I do not feel that defeat at the polls releases me entirely, and any service I can render to the members of the Board, individually or collectively, or to any student who may desire to consult me, will be given gladly, within the measure of my leisure and capabilities.

In conclusion I would ask my fellow citizens to regard their franchise as a valuable heritage, handed down to us by hardy pioneers in the cause of human liberty, and exercise it accordingly, voluntarily, individually and independently, as a human unit carrying out a public duty. The dissected value to the public weal, of a high percentage collective vote, cannot be overestimated, and, compared with which, the success, or failure, of any candidate in the returns, is a passing detail.

Your very truly,

W. H. PRETTY.

Board of Agriculture Meetings Begin Jan. 23

The annual meetings of the Board of Agriculture in West Peterboro will be as follows:

At Bridgenorth— January 23rd.
At Buckhorn—January 24th.
At Ennismore—January 25th.

The speakers will be Mr. A. R. G. Smith of New Hamburg and Miss M. V. Powell of Whitby. The subjects that will be discussed cover a range of problems that are facing the farmers, and it is hoped that the meetings will prove more than usually profitable. A large attendance at each is urged in order that as many farmers as possible may obtain the benefit from the Board of Agriculture's series in this section.

It was decided to discontinue the meeting at Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, because of the lack of interest that has been shown in that district. For the same reason there will be no meeting at the 4th line of Smith.

Will Not Exceed Her Promises

German Foreign Minister Breaks Out With Statement.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 6. — "I will negotiate a just and right peace, but not a peace by force, which would mean the annihilation and slavery of Germany." German Foreign Minister Brockdorff Renzau declared in an official statement, the text of which was received here to-day.

"Our enemies are trying to throw suspicion upon the German revolution, hoping to avoid the fulfillment of President Wilson's programme. The assertion that the revolution is a sham is not true. It is also untrue that Germany will submit to the demands of brutal power. So long as I am in a position to make my word good Germany will conscientiously fulfill her promises, but not a shade more than Germany recognizes as her promises."

One Soldier Returning on the Northland Fished a Maggot Out of His Soup

Investigation Was Resumed This Morning—Ship May be Held Over Until Enquiry is Over—Witness Said the Stewards Mixed Hot Water Into the Jam to Make it Go Farther.

(Special to the Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 6th. — On the resumption of the Northland enquiry this morning Mr. Holden, the counsel for the White Star line, declared that the company having been communicated with had considered it unadvisable that the ship's officers should be allowed to give evidence with regard to complaints that had been submitted.

"Then," said Justice Hodgins, "the company thinks that the ship should be detained until the enquiry is finished?" It may come to a question as to who (the Admiralty or the company) is responsible for the holding of the ship and for the expense incurred.

Mr. Holden intimated that the ship would be held until the enquiry was over.

Pte. Alfred Blackman, Toronto, formerly in the Forestry Corps, was the first witness called. He declared that he had two specific complaints regarding food.

"The second day out," he declared, 'I wasn't eating soup myself, but the man next to me was, and he fished a maggot out of his."

"Did he complain?" asked His Lordship.

"No sir—he just vomited," replied the witness.

"Are you quite sure that was the cause?"

"I am."

"Wasn't it pretty rough weather?"

"Yes."

"And when men are seasick vomiting is not uncommon."

"Well some are seasick."

Piece of Bone.

Another time witness said that he had gone to dinner and all that he had on his plate was a little piece of bone. He had complained to the orderly officer. The chief steward was called, and he came and said "Blackman had his allowance." Then some one started to yell, and as it ended up I got nothing at all.

"You had no dinner at all?"

"I had two pieces of sliced potato. I went away disgusted."

"Why," asked His Lordship; "didn't some of you stay to see what happened following your complaints?"

"It seems a pity you didn't."

Witness further stated that he had trouble getting bread. On one occasion he had gone to the pantry and had been refused.

"What were you told?" asked His Lordship.

"Do you want the exact words, Sir?"

"Yes."

"Well, he said 'You won't G— d— well get any."

"Do you know the man?"

"Yes; his name was Roxburgh."

Complaint to Officers.

Witness had then complained to the orderly officer, Lieutenant Stacey, but he could not get to the pantry.

He had a further complaint to make regarding the jam.

"I didn't eat any of it myself," he said, "because on three different occasions I saw the steward mixing hot water into it."

He had not purchased any food but had seen it purchased from the stewards.

Witness further complained that on account of the sweating pipes in his bunk room his blankets were always wet. When he slept the water kept dripping on his back. Asked why somebody did not remedy the condition he declared "that which is everybody's business was nobody's business."

"You seemed to have been quite philosophical about it?"

"I didn't worry much."

Was all Fat.

Private M. Green of Toronto, was the next witness that was called. He had been in the Forestry and Railway Construction Corps.

He had complained on several occasions as to the shortage of food at dinner time. What he had received in the nature of meat portion on one occasion was all fat and he had simply left it on his plate. He had got no more though he had protested to the pantry steward who declared that that was all that he was going to give him.

"If you wanted to be sure of getting anything at the noon meal you had to line up an hour ahead. If you sat on your bunk at 11 o'clock, and waited, you had some chance of being fed at noon. If you didn't you had to wait for an hour afterwards.

Witness had come to Canada originally on the Caronia.

"How would you say the accommodation on the Northland for the troops compared with the accommodation on the Caronia in the steerage for imigrants?" asked Mr. Orde.

"You could not very well compare them," replied the witness. "Conditions were so much better on the Caronia." He didn't think the Northland" suited for carrying third class passengers.

Ventilation was Bad.

Lance Corporal Cook, of Toronto, twice wounded, was the next witness. He had fought in the 38th Battalion, and had 17 months service, having been wounded once at Lens and again at Arras.

On the Northland he said the ventilation was very bad and food was scarce. He had complained as to the food to the steward who had told him he had had his share, and that if he wanted more he had better line up again. Everybody seemed to be complaining that the attention of the officers was called to the situation but it did not do much good. Water was also scarce and for several days the men had to buy lemonade or ginger ale at the canteen.

He had crossed to England on the Empress of Britain and the conditions were much better on that vessel. There was a better system, he said: the men had always enough to eat.

Pte. H. Press of Stratford was the next witness. He had been six months in action, and had been wounded at St. Eloi.

Latrines Overflowed.

During the first five days there were times when there was an insufficiency of meat and vegetables. After that he was employed in the second class cabin and got lots to eat. During the first five days he declared that the stench and heat in the quarters was oppressive and the men didn't want to wait any longer than they had to for food. Yet they couldn't get an adequate supply unless they did wait; moreover they were compelled to line up.

The latrines had overflowed and a hundred gallons of filthy water had poured down the stairs into his section.

Officers Kept Away.

On Christmas night he had gone down to C deck to get an issue of cigarettes and tobacco. He had been almost overpowered by the heat and stench. When inspections had been made the men were out on promenade.

"If the inspection officers had gone down when 300 men were breathing the air they would have been impressed with the condition of the atmosphere. They did not go down at such times."

Sergt. Howard Wolfe, "original first" of the Little Black Devils of Winnipeg, who was a newspaper reporter before he enlisted in August, 1914, had been in action at the second battle of Ypres, where he was taken prisoner, was the next witness that was called. He had been 35 months in a German prison, and was repatriated from Holland in March last. He wore the green shoulder strops of the 8th Battalion ,the red and blue chevrons. He declared that the Northland was one of the older boats and that on these the third class accommodation was never so good as on the newer boats. Considering the boat he declared the accommodation accorded the sergeants was very good. Witness had been orderly sergeant for his section on two occasions and had been asked for complaints. He had received none whatever. On the first day when many men were sick he had asked them if they had any complaints. They said that they had had lots to eat. Again, later in the voyage, when the men were all well, he had been told the same thing.

A Professional.

On December 27th, Mr. Merkle, of the Canadian Press Association, had asked him his opinion about the newspaper reports, he had replied, that from his observation there was nothing in the complaints about the food at all.

Sergt.-Major W. H. Richardson, of Halifax, formerly of the Royal Garrison Artillery, England, and later attached to the forts at Halifax, was the next witness. A professional soldier. He had not come over on the Northland but had gone on board her after she had berthed. He had heard the men talking about not having enough to eat and some of the crew "jabbering about not having enough to eat on the awy over." There had been a raid threatened on the place where the Y.M.C.A. and other organizations had cigarettes, apples and chocolates for the soldiers. Thirty or forty of the stokers of the Northland had undertaken to break into the place. They had gone to stop raid and had heard many complaints about food.

Was Satisfied.

Private Percy Giles of Halifax was the next witness.

He had become a casualty in the line near Amiens, and suffered from ear trouble.

"Have you anything to say regarding condidtions on the Northland?"

"No Sir."

"Any complaints about the food?"

"No Sir."

You had plenty?"

"Yes sir. I was satisfied."

"Did you hear any complaints?"

"On the last day I did. They were mostly because the men could not get ashore."

"So you were satisfied?"

"I was glad to get home, sir."

"And willing to put up with any discomforts on board of the ship?"

"Yes sir."

Officer Recalled.

Lieut. Vandelet of Montreal, was this morning recalled in connection with a statement made by Pte. Laurence, a former witness, to the effect that Lieut. Vandelet had threatened that if the men were not cleared off the promenade deck the ship's crew in arms would be called up to clear it, as the deck was for the officers and civilians.

Witness remembered the incident. It was the third day out when he was orderly officer. He had received orders form Major Westmore, O. C. troops, to keep the men off the promenade deck. Some of the sentries said that it was impossible to do so, and did not seem to want to keep them off. The O. C. declared that if the sentries did not keep them off, the ship's crew if necessary would have to be brought out to do it. Shortly after that the men were permitted to use one whole side of the vessel.

"What is the meaning with arms?" asked His Lordship.

"I should say that it meant with rifles," said the witness.

"The sentries were not keeping the men off?"

"No; several were making no attempt to keep them out."

Witness questioned did not believe that the O.C. had any control over the ship's crew and did not think the order could have been carried out.

"Did you take the order as a serious matter or as a joke?"

"As a serious matter."

Court adjourned.

BRUSILOFF KILLED.

Was Former Commander in Chief of the Russian Armies.

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 6.—Lieut. Brusiloff, former commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, has been killed at Moscow, according to reports received here to-day.

A despatch from Bergen stated that Gen. Kuropatkin, who commanded the Russian armies in the Russo-Japanese war, has been murdered. The Bolsheviks, the despatch said, deny responsibility for his death.

DR. J. H. EASTWOOD'S CAR DEMOLISHED

Was Struck by G.T.R. Train on Argyle Street.

In a collision with the noon train to Lakefield on Saturday, Dr. J. H. Eastwood's automobile was totally destroyed, and the doctor himself narrowly escaped death. He had been attending a patient at Nicholls Hospital, and returning down Argyle street, stopped to pick up two little girls to give them a ride home.

On account of the weather the car was closed in, and with the noise of the automobile's engine, he did not hear the 12.05 Lakefield train approach and dashed into the baggage car. Fortunately the train at Argyle street was going slowly and stopped quickly to give any assistance needed.

It was found that outside of the destruction of the car and a few scratches to the doctor, no harm was done. The girls, who were in the back of the car, escaped unhurt.

Royal Theatre Admission Change

A Charge of 15c to All With War Tax of 1c, Afternoons and Evenings.

The holidays are over and everybody is settling down to regular business. I have been in the moving picture business for thirteen years, and have always endeavoured to give the public of Peterborough the best pictures in Canada for price of admission charged. I am now giving all my attention to the Royal Theatre, and my patrons will be sure of an excellent programme every time they attend my theatre. For first run of pictures, and a double programme, I am only going to charge from to-day 15c and 1c war tax, 16c in all, both afternoon and evening, to everybody, men, women and children. For the programmes I will give this is a very small charge, and I hope to have the pleasure of seeing all my old patrons again.—M. Pappas, Proprietor Royal Theatre.

PUBLIC SKATING RINKS READY FOR CHILDREN

Two of the public skating rinks are completed, at the old West Ward School and in Inverlea Park, and the third, in the lot north of the Colonial Weaving Company's factory, is nearing completion. The ground at this rink was plowed last summer, and the soil is a light porous blackmuck that has given Street Commissioner Evans considerable trouble. The city will keep these sheets flooded, and it is expected that they will be as popular as last year, especially with the children for whom they are principally intended.

AGAINST PROHIBITION

An Ingeniously Worked-up Case by Professor Stephen Leacock of McGill University, Who Writes in The Montreal Star.

In reprinting from the Montreal Star the following ingenious article by Professor Stephen Leacock, the Examiner is not to be regarded as subscribing to the views expressed. Prof. Leacock, satirist says:

There can be little doubt that all of North America—or all of it that lies between the Mexicans and the Esquimaux—is going dry. In the United States a few more legislative votes need but be passed and there will be effected an amendment to the Constitution making the whole republic bone dry. From this there is no return. The door of the beer cellar is locked and the key thrown away. In Canada eight provinces are at the actual moment dry, and the remaining one, Quebec, dries up unless help is brought to it, early in the spring. The legislation in Canada is, it is true, largely war legislation and requires a further vote to make it final. But there is no sign of organized opposition, outside of the interested trades, no protests from the public, no delegations to Ottawa, no memorials from our learned societies.

There is every prospect that we are about to go dry and stay dry. The moment is therefore fitting for one who thinks that we are making a sad error to voice a few words of regret.

To my mind the strange thing about the prohibition movement is the queer psychology at the back of it. Few people really want it. But nobody cares to say so. Politicians wait in vain for the sign that is not given. Judges on the bench hand out reluctant sentences, wondering what they will do when the stock of wine in their own cellars is exhausted. Lawyers, doctors, professors and merchants sit tamely by awaiting the extinction of their private comfort. The working man watches the vanishing of his glass of beer and wishes that he was a man of influence with power to protest. The man of influence wishes that he were but a plain working man and might utter a protest without fear of injury to his interests. Nor is there, so far as I am aware a single one of the clergy to stand up and preach a sermon on the wedding feast at Cana of Galilee.

Rational Use.

Drunkeness is, of course, a very terrible thing. It has blotted out many a bright young life. It has slowly broken many a vigorous brain down to drivelling senility. It is a fruitful source of crime. It has desolated many a home. It has done, in short, all the things that are graphically depicted upon the lantern slides of the "temperance" lecturer.

But drunkenness is not here the point. The drunkard, after all, important though he is, does not fill the whole sky. It is a pity to destroy the comfort of the home and amenity of social life for the sake of so small and so worthless a fraction of humanity; the more so as the drunkard, under prohibition, is apt merely to convert himself into criminal, drinking illicit poison in place of honest beer and raving himself to ruin all the quicker.

The point that few people seem to care to dwell upon is, in the present crisis, the comfort and pleasure to be found in the ordinary and rational use of beer and wine and spirits such as is made of them by ninety-nine out of every hundred people who use them. This cannot be measured in any scientific fashion, or submitted to the proof of a formula. It is a matter of experience. Those who have never had it are not qualified to speak. But there are countless thousands of people whose private opinion, if they would only speak it out, is that of all the minor comforts of life from the cradle to he grave, beer and tobacco are easily first.

Conspiracy of Silence.

There has grown up in this matter a sort of conspiracy of silence. Nobody seems willing to bear witness to how widely diffused is the habit of normal wholesome drinking, and of the great benefits to be derived from it. The university where I have worked for nearly twenty years contains in its faculties a great number of scholarly, industrious men whose life work cannot be derided or despised even by the salaried agitator of a prohibitionist society. Yet the great majority of them "drink". I use that awful word in the full gloomy sense given to it by the teetotaller. I mean that if you ask these men to dinner and offer them a glass of wine, they will take it. Some will take two. I have seen them take Scotch and soda. During these same years I have been privileged to know a great many of the leading lawyers of Montreal, whose brains and energy and service to the community I cannot too much admire. If there are any of them who do not "drink," I can only say I have not seen them. I can bear the same dreadful testimoney on behalf of my friends who are doctors; and the same, and even more emphatic on behalf of all the painters, artists and literary men with whom I have had the good fortune to be very closely associated. Of the clergy I cannot speak. But in days more cheerful than the present gloomy times, there were at least those of them who thought a glass of port no very dreadful sin.

Making Merry

An conversely, I can say with all conviction that I have never seen drunken professors lecturing to inebriated students, or tipsy judges listening to boozy lawyers, or artists in delirium tremens painting the portrait of intoxicated senators. Moreover, among the class of people of whom I speak, the conception of how to make merry at a christening or a wedding or a banquet or at the conclusion of peace, or of any such poor occasions of happiness that mark the milestones in the pilgrimage of life, was exactly the same—I say it in all reverence—as that shown by Jesus Christ at the wedding feast at Cana of Galilee.

But these people, one might object, are but a class and a small one at that. What about the ordinary working men? Surely he is not to be sacrificed for the sake of the leisure hours of the intellectual classes! But here, so it seems to me, if where the strongest argument against prohibition comes in. We live in a world of appalling inequality, which as yet neither philanthropy nor legislation has been able to remove. The lot of the working man who begins day labor at the age of sixteen and ends it at the age of seventy, who starts work every morning while the rest of us are still in bed, who has no sleep after his lunch and no vacation trip to Florida, is inconceivably hard. It is a sober fact that if those of us who are doctors, lawyers, professors and merchant were suddenly transferred by some evil magician to the rank of a working man, we should feel much as if we had been sent to the penitentiary. And it is equally a fact that we should realize just how much a glass of ale and a pipe of tobacco means to a sober industrious working man— not a picture-book drunkard—after his hours of work. It puts him for the brief moment of his relaxation on an equality with kings and plutocrats.

Life Needs Shortening.

It is no use to say that tobacco shortens his life. Let it. It needs shortening. It is no use to say that beer sogs his oesophagus and loosens his motor muscles. Let it do so. He is better off with loose motor muscles, and a soggy oesophagus and a mug of ale beside him, than in the cheerless discontent of an activity that knows only the work of life and nothing of its comforts.

The employers of labor have hitherto, through sheer shortsightedness, ben in favor of prohibition. They thought that drinkless men would work better. So they will in the short spurt of efficiency that accompanies the change. But let the employer wait a year or two and then se how social discontent will spread like a wave in the wake of prohibition The drinkless workman, robbed of the simple comforts of life, will angrily demand its luxuries. A new envy will enter into his heart. The glaring inequalities of society will stand revealed to him as never before. See to it that he does not turn into a Bolsheviki.

Loud were the plaudits of the prohibitionists when Russia emptied its vodka into the Neva and declared itself bone-dry. Yet look at Russia now.

No Use Arguing

But when all is said and done there is little use in arguing or protesting against the new regime. The thing is coming. We must obey our masters. Ho! then for the merry days that are coming; when the lemonade shall pop at the dry banquet and the sarsaparilla foam to the top of the glass; when two old friends shall sit down side by side with a bucket of ice water between them; when emergency cases shall be treated with a coffee bean and wedding guests shall trip to the merry music of the Victrola filled with unfermented grape juice.

But what's the use of writing about it? None, that I can see. I call anybody who has read this article to witness that its tone is as fatr-minded as open daylight and as kindly as a jug of red wine under a hawthorn tree. Yet I know by experience that it will bring nothing to the surface except unmeasured condemnation from the intolerant. The editor of this paper will receive perhaps threatening letters from Mother's Meetings and Children's Blue Ribbon Societies for daring to print it. And for myself, the lawyers and judges and doctors whom I have quoted will say that they never heard of me, and that they never took anything stronger in their lives than raspberry vinegar. Never mind. Perhaps I shall be able to get work in Hayti or in Dutch Borneo, or some sensible country.

Simplest Thing in the World to Do at the Small Cost of a Quarter.

You seldom see a woman who is pale, dull-eyed, thin-cheeked, and utterly worn out, who doesn't suffer more or less from headache and constipation. Her poor looks are more largely due to neglect than anything else.

Most women can have sparkling eyes and ruby cheeks if they will but use regularly a blood cleansing and laxative medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Just follow these simple directions. To-night take two Dr. Hamilton's Pills and note how much fresher you feel to-morrow morning. Your face will be clearer, your appetite better, your spirits brighter. Next night take one or perhaps two pills again. Gradually reduce the dose as mentioned in the company's directions.

Day by day you will note a steady gain. You'll quickly have back those happy girlish looks you once were proud to think about. No other medicine can do so much for you as Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold everywhere in 25c boxes.

Soldiers Home — The Salvation Army — Coming Campaign

War Work and After-War Work of the

SALVATION ARMY

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL."

If one institution in the Empire was prepared for war, it was the Salvation Army. For fifty-three years it has been relieving distress wherever and whenever the need arose.

The Salvation Army has always been organized on a military basis—inured to hardship, sacrifice and service. It is always in action, day and night.

When the War came, intensifying human suffering and the need for bodily and spiritual help in a thousand ways, the Salvation Army was ready.

The twelfth day of the war found the Salvation Army at work behind the lines in Belgium. It has maintained 197 huts, 96 hostels and 40 rest rooms; 1,200 uniformed workers and 45 ambulances have been in service at the front—in addition to taking care of the needs of soldiers' families here at home, assisting the widows and orphans, and relieving distress arising from the absence of the soldier head of the family.

Hostilities have ceased, leaving vast and complex problems, and these problems arise notwithstanding all the Repatriation work the Government has undertaken, in addition to the granting of pensions. Above and beyond what other agencies are accomplishing, there are thousands of cases of urgent human need among soldiers' families that the Salvation Army is trained and equipped to meet—provided the financial help is forthcoming. Hence—

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

JANUARY 19th to 25th

While it could do so, the Salvation Army has carried on without any general appeal. Now the crisis has arisen, because our three hundred thousand soldier boys are returning. The budget for essential work during the coming year has been prepared. A million dollars must be raised to continue the after-the-war activities, which include:

Hostels for Soldiers

Salvation Army hostels are vitally necessary for the protection and comfort of the soldier at the many stopping places between France and his home here in Canada. These hostels—or military hotels—provide good food, clean beds, wholesome entertainment at a price the soldier can afford to pay. In addition to hostels already in operation, many more are needed near stations and landing places, from Paris, through London, Halifax, St. John, right through Canada to Vancouver. If the boys do not have the hostels, WHERE would they go?

Care of the Wives, Widows, Dependents and Orphans of Soldiers

Scores, and hundreds, of cases could be cited where soldiers overseas have been comforted by the assurance that the Salvation Army had stepped in to relieve their families from dire need. For instance, a mother with six children is discovered—no fuel, weather freezing, food and funds exhausted by sickness and other troubles. They are taken to the Salvation Army Emergency Receiving Home for a few days until their home is made habitable once more. Widow of soldier sends for help; Salvation Army workers cope with immediate necessity—send mother to Maternity Home, three children to Emergency Home. Winter and 300,000 boys returning increase the demands on the Salvation Army, whose personal help alone is of avail.

Keeping the Family Unit Intact—Home Visitation

The women of the Salvation Army on their visiting rounds accomplish the apparently impossible. Is the discharged soldier out of a job? They find him one. Is the wife sick, the home-work piling up—are the children neglected? They nurse the wife, mother the children, wash and scrub. Is there need for food, fuel, clothes or medicine? They are supplied. Influence is brought to bear to guide the older children. Whatever can be done to keep the home intact, is joyfully done in the true spirit of the Master.

When the Soldier Needs a Friend

As long as a Canadian soldier needs the comforts the Salvation Army can offer, he will find them available. The Salvation Army Lassie will be there with the hot coffee, the pies, chocolate, magazines, writing materials, and always the spiritual comfort for which the boys feel the need over there. The Salvation Army Lassies have heard and carried out the last wishes of many a man who has made the supreme sacrifice. Until the last homeward-bound soldier is happily re-established in civil life, will you not help the Salvation Army to combat the discomforts and evils that beset his path?

The service of the Salvation Army, founded on sacrifice, demonstrates the true Christian spirit. It is directed to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ. For two generations the Salvation Army has stood out and out for God.

It approaches practical problems in a practical way and achieves results. It co-operates with all—overlaps none. It recognizes neither color, race, nor creed. No organization does greater work at less cost. To carry on its great work among the 300,000 returning soldiers and their families, it must have financial help. On its behalf members of the Dominion Government, business men, and returned soldiers endorse this appeal for funds.

"Let Your Gratitude Find Expression in Service."

"The Wanderer"

One of the greatest parables of the greatest of all teachers, "The Prodigal Son," which has formed the basis of many books and plays, will be seen anew on the stage of the Grand Opera House for three nights, commencing Monday evening, Jan. 13, with a matinee on Wednesday. William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest who are bringing this powerful drama and sumptuous spectacle to this city, first produced it at the Manhattan Opera House, New York City, where it ran through two seasons, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago have each had three months' engagements to boast of.

David Belasco is credited with having staged "The Wanderer." This accounts for its bewildering pageantry, artistic colouring and splendid acting. The scenic and costume investiture is said to be of a magnitude and opulence which will amaze play-goers. The incidental dances were arranged by Alexis Kosloff, the music is by Anselm Goetzl and the scene painting and costumes are by Stern of Paris.

Maurice V. Samuels wrote the play and he tells a story that will be ever new through centuries old, of the youth who must have his fling. The first act shows the home of a Jewish patriarch, which is situated at the foot of a great hill near Hebron in Palestine, about one thousand years before Christ. In the foreground is a flat roofed house of stone, with a fig tree drooping over it. On the right is a rocky hill with glimpses of a pastoral country beyond. Down this hillside comes a procession of sheep and donkeys, and dogs and shepherds. And then the unrest which is troubling the prodigal becomes manifest, and he insists that his mother persuade his father to give him his heritage that he may go forth into the world and perhaps grow famous just as King David did, who used to play with his father when they were boys together.

The second act is set in a scene of Oriental splendor and magnificence in the Jerusalem of King Solomon's time. The debasing influence of the Babylonians is shown, and the prodigal, enamoured of a pagan siren, so far forgets himself as to worship at the shrine of Ishtur and forswear the God of his fathers.

The third act is the same as the first and shows the ignominious return of the prodigal to his father's roof, where he is found gnawing on a bone that even the dogs have ignored.

The final reconciliation with his father, which is encompassed through the boundless love of his mother, brings the play an ending which is said to be tremendous in its intensity and impressiveness.

Certainly seldom, if ever before, has a cast of such excellence been brought to this city. Chief among the original interpreters of the leading roles will be found Frederick Lewis, Florence Auer, Richard Thornton, Olga Newton, Henry Duggan, Louise Orth, Mabel Montgomery and a hundred others. Francesca Karmenova of the Imperial Russian Ballet is the premier danseuse. Many sheep, goats and dogs are shown in the first act.

Seats will be placed on sale for all performances at the box office Friday, January 10th. Mail orders now.

Separate coats continue to be in greater favour than suits.

Siberian squirrel is enlisted in the making of beautiful capes.

Not Robust Enough For County Council

In an address declining his nomination for Reeve of Norwood, Mr. James Andrews said he was not in good health and "did not feel like going out and spending a week with those fellows at the County Council. They have a big time and an occasional trip to Ottawa. Referring to the good roads agitation he said he was not in accord with the provincial system."

Reeve Bert Squire who was elected by acclamation said he was proud to have occupied the position of Reeve of the Municipality during the past four years. In the matter of patriotic contributions Norwood stood second to none, and had paid in round figures through taxes and voluntary giving the splendid sum of $9,000, not including monies raised by the I.O.D.E., the Women's Institute the churches and other agencies.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:—It is to be hoped when our new Council brings down its estimates for the year they will set aside a sufficient amount to have the names of the different streets placed at the street intersections. This matter has been before the Council at different times, but the excuse has always been that there were no funds available. The need of such designations has been brought to the attention of the Council by the Trades Council on two occasions at least, but nothing was done. There are numerous streets in the city that cannot be named by people who have lived here for half a century. True the names of some of the streets are embossed in the pavement, but what use is that in the winter-time? It is said that the last occasion on which a general "naming" of the streets was done was over twenty-five years ago, and the few boards that still remain (and they are very few) are illegible through age.

The writer lives on a corner of a well-travelled street and another short street less well known. Scores of times he is called to the door—sometimes in the middle of the night—to say where such a street is. And in summer time, when strangers are here on their way to the different summer resorts, in their autos, it is humiliating that they should of necessity by required to ask, "Is this Hunter street, and the way to the Lift Lock?" or "My route book says, 'Turn west on McDonnel street to Reid street, and then north to Chemong Park.'"

Besides, there are the delivery rigs, post men, express drivers, doctors, ministers, and the general public to be considered.

Let a few hundred dollars of the money the ratepayers have to shell out be spent for the benefit of the ones that have to disgorge.

Yours very truly,
Street Names.

Aunt—It is strange, but a new-born baby always cries the first thing.

Bachelor—Probably it cries because it has discovered the mistake it made in being born.

At the George Street Alleys

The prize winners at the George street alleys last week were W. Henderson and A. C. Thompson in five and ten pins each winning A 3-B pipe with scores of 227-235-177 with total of 639. Thompson winning in five pins with a score of 581 in the B Class Don Sharpe was first, D. Fuller second and A. Frick, third. Good prizes will be given this week in five and ten pins. The ten pin league will be resumed this week.

George Street Hockey Team

The George street hockey team will hold its first practice of the season Tuesday night between 6 and 7 o'clock. Everyone who wants to try out for the team as well as those who wish to help the team along are asked to turn out for this practice.

CURLING

To-night's scheduled games are as follows:

Boucher vs. Bradburn.
Martin vs Sturgeon.
Brightman vs. Hicks.
Metheral vs. Ferguson.
Bowes vs. Connal.
Wightman vs. Fitzgerald.

The Tankard games will be played here on 21st, and there is considerable interest being shown already in the composition of the local rinks.

Ald. W. H. Taylor is back in the game and is playing "vice" for Alex. Kay.

Police Sergeant Arthur Blade is one of the new members and is leading for R. G. Sturgeon. He is making fast strides in the fine art of sweeping.

There is more than the usual infusion of new blood in the club this year, and the supply of promising material is admitted to be exceptionally promising. One of the veterans remarked the other night that at the end of the first year a new man generally feels that he has acquired all the fine points of the game, but the real test comes in the second year. It is then discovered whether the novices are to become permanent enthusiasts or not.

International curling, after a lapse of four years, will be revived this winter according to an announcement made by the Grand National Curling Union of the United States. No definite date has as yet been set for the competition between the Canadian and U. S. Clubs, but it will be held during the second and third week in February. Montreal will be the scene of the event, which will be conducted by the Canadian branch of the Royal Canadian Clubs. The last international match was held at Utica in 1915, and resulted in a win for the United States team.

U. S. Destroyer After British Sub

Narrow Escape from Destruction by Depth Charges —Was Well Treated

LODNON, Jan. 3.—One of the greatest perils to Allied submarines during the war was attacks by friendly destroyers. A submarine was assumed to be an enemy when sighted by the ships of any allied nation, and it was up to the submarine to show recognition signals if she was not German. But if it was a destroyer that sighted the submersible she was always making for the little craft by the time the recognition signals could be shown. A slight hitch in getting up a flag or firing a rocket would mean the submarine would be forced to seek safety beneath the surface.

Probably the last attack of this sort was made by American destroyers on a new British submarine of a large type. She was being tested when sighted by the destroyers, and they made for her full speed. Something happened to the signal system and the under-water vessel submerged as depth charges began to tear up the water. One charge shook her until the crew thought she was doomed.

The submarine was constructed to dive 320 feet, but that was forgotten as charge after charge exploded nearby. Finally she struck bottom at 300 feet, and it was found she was not badly damaged. She was kept on the bottom until her Commander was certain the destroyers had gone. Then she was cautiously brought to the surface.

"She don't need any more testing after that experience," the Commander reported to the officer in charge of the submarine base.

"Victory Dresses" Now in Demand

Pretty Frocks to Celebrate the Home-Coming of the Boys.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—When folks are happy they just naturally celebrate. And everybody is happy now that the boys are returning. All sorts of affairs are being planned, and as a result all sorts of new frocks are being designed. The ones that are receiving the most attention are those that will clad the happy "Peace Brides." Although the number of weddings that the war occasioned were very great, the ones that are the result of the signing of the armistice will be greater.

Couturieres are designing many new models for the tremendous demand that will be made for them. For the most part these gowns will be quite simple, for simplicity has proven its charms. A bride always loves satin and therefore satin dresses are in the greatest demand. This clingy material lends itself to the most complex designs, and the comfort and charm of its appearance is perhaps responsible for its popularity.

Empire Dresses.

What could be more beautiful, more fascinating, than the alluring Empress Josephine's costumes as a source of inspiration for the new dresses? This woman, by the grace of her simplicity, won the admiring glances and unlimited praise of the most esteemed men of the day. Surely her gowns must have been perfect or these discerning gentlemen would not have lavished on her their attentions. So why not adopt this mode of the Paris designers and give to our brides that look of complete assurance that characterized this famous woman.

One gown that was inspired by this period costume and shown by one of the leading houses is developed in white georgette with white satin as trimming. The white satin forms the upper part of the tiny puffed sleeve, and the front panel that starts at the rather low neckline continues down to about the knee and is caught in at the waistline with a heavy cord. The skirt is unusually long and a wee bit draped at the side. A loose panel of georgette flows down the back, which gives rather an elegant grace to the creation. Happy indeed the bride that may wear such as this on her wedding day.

Afternoon Dresses.

And then for informal occasions and afternoon affairs we have many new models a little more dressy and of a happier air than those that were designed during the war. Although the colours may be bright and still be in good taste, the majority of women cling to the duller, darker shades. During the period of the war the bright colours were not in evidence, and even though the ban is lifted they seem to be still ignored by all smart women.

"SACREMENT SUNDAY"

Unique Booklet by J. W. Harper, of Quebec—Some Old Scotch Church History.

A copy of a well printed and neatly bound brochure entitled "Sacrament Sunday and the Bells of Kartdale," by J. M. Harper, of Quebec, was recently received by a former secretary of the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society, now defunct. The booklet had been sent as a greeting to "St. Andrew's Society, Peterborough," from the St. Andrew's Society of Quebec, and appears to have been a compliment growing out of the last St. Andrew's Day Anniversary of that Society. A greeting card accompanied the booklet, with an inspiring poem by Mr. Harper, entitled "Good Will and St. Andrew's Memories."

In his prefatory notes to this souvenir booklet, Mr. Harper regales his readers with an interesting description of the "Stronger Lights That Used to Shine" in the old congregation of Kartdale, during his forefather's time.

The descriptions given of "Sacrament Sunday" in those days, and of the elders, the managers, the precentor, and others, furnishes both interesting and amusing reading to Presbyterian Church worshippers of today. A poem, "The Bells of Kartdale," and notes and personal biographies of various personages and places are given, as well as a half-tone photograph of Mr. Harper, and several vivid illustrations appear through the book.

A man's worst difficulties begin when he is able to do as he likes.

HOUSING PROBLEM ABROAD.

Government Building and Selling of Homes Suggested in England.

LONDON.— One of the unusual plans suggested for bringing the transition period while England is being changed from a war to a peace basis is a proposal that the Government should build houses and either sell them on long-time payments or furnish them outright, particularly to soldiers.

England is wrestling with many of the same housing schemes that were put forward in the United States when thousands of workmen were called to centres of war activities. In the opinion of Sir J. Tudor Walters, a Member of Parliament, who has given much thought to housing, England faces a shortage of 500,000 houses in addition to her normal requirements of 100,000 new ones annually.

Thousands in the building trades have gone into other work as all building operations ceased when the war started. Materials are at exorbitant figures or unobtainable. It is much more difficult for a prospective small house owner to finance construction than it was four and a half years ago.

One of the plans suggested is that the Government pay the householder the difference between what his house will cost to construct immediately after peace is declared and its estimated value five years hence.

Any plan that will result in large expenditure of public money will be met with considerable opposition among members of the Government. This was made very clear when a statement was made in the House of Commons that the Government should give all war workers a six-months holiday with full pay as one means of solving the tremendous problem of changing England from a war to a peace basis. At least one member of the Government, referring to that statement, said that the Government could not undertake any gigantic financial obligation in its effort to bridge the transition period as quickly and efficiently as possible.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

CHILDRENS RIGHTS.

In the home life never forget that the children have social rights, and the chief among these is the right to laugh when they are happy, to cry when they are unhappy, and to make a noise. A healthy child is always active. It must jump and scream, fall down, cry when it gets hurt, and jump up only to repeat the same thing. But to keep it still means unhappiness and nearly, if not quite, death. Let them be gay. This is their element. We always class children, birds and flowers together. And why. Because they should be equally beautiful, innocent and happy. We should never rob childhood of its ideal loveliness. Let them play and be happy, but teach tmem self-control. God's estimate of self control is this: He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty and he that ruleth his own spirit, than he who taketh a city." Condemn your children only when they are really wrong, and then as gently as possible, but be sure to commend when they do right. A little praise with a child goes a long way. A child may be very provoking but not wilfully bad. Attributing bad motives to a thoughtless child has ruined many a little life. Just blame less and praise more and we shall have better children. Especially as most of their faults are copied from their parents we should exercise the strictest charity for verily "Charity doth cover a multitude of sins."

When you want to get your grandest idea of a queen, you do not think of Catherine of Russia, or of Annie of England, or Marie Theresa, of Germany, but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table or walked with him arm in arm down life's pathway; sometimes to the Thanksgiving banquet, sometimes to the grave, but always together —soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle or at the spinning wheel and on cold nights wrapping you up snug and warm. "Mother! Mother!" Ah, she was a queen.

A new year is here. It is a time for invoice. Business men take an invoice of their stock. Wouldn't it be business for you to take one of yourself? Life, each life, is a business. Have you gained or lost last year? Have you used the talents that have been given you so as to gain other talents These are pertinent questions that press us all for an answer Let the result of the self invoice be a spur to us in living the coming year, or a cause for gerat congratulations as we review the past and go forth to build "more stately mansions" for the future.

LIEUT. P. W. SHILL AT THE S. A. TEMPLE

Lieut. P. W. Shill addressed a large meeting yesterday afternoon in the Salvation Army Temple. Lieut. Shill enlisted in the 3rd Battalion, and was wounded at Paschendaele.

JUDICIAL SALE

In the Supreme Court of Ontario
In the matter of the estate of William Andrews Collins, deceased.

Judicial sale of island in Stoney Lake in the Township of Burleigh, County of Peterboro.

Pursuant to an order of the supreme Court of Ontario, made in the matter of the above mentioned estate there will be offered for sale by public auction, in one parcel, with the approbation of the Master-in-Ordinary, by Chas. M. Henderson, auctioneer, at 128 King Street, Toronto, at twelve o'clock noon on Wednesday, the 15th day of January, 1919

All and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the Township of Burleigh, in the County of Peterboro, in the Porvince of Ontario, being composed of the west part of Island No. 22, in Stoney Lake, in the said township of Burleigh, as shown on plan of island in the river of Otonabee and its lakes, made by J. J. Haslett, P.L.S., and filed in the department of Indian Affairs, the said west part being divided from the east part of the said island by a narrow shannel, not shown on the said plan such channel having been formed by rising water of the lake since survey was made.

The said island is known as "Pinehurst."

The said island is about one-half mile from the Juniper Island Post Office and about two and one-half miles from Burleigh Falls.

On the island is said to be erected a frame cottage.

The property will be offered for sale subject to a reserved bid fixed by the said Master. The purchaser shall pay ten per cent of his purchase money on the day of sale to the vendors or their solicitors and the remainder thereof within 30 days thereafter, into court, to the credit of this matter without interest.

The vendors shall not be required to furnish any abstract of title, and to produce only such deeds, copies thereof, or evidences of title as are in their possession. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of sale of the court.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had from Messrs. Davidson & Folinsbee, Solicitors, 703 Lumsden Building, Toronto, or from Guardian Trust Company, Limited. Administrator of the Estate of William Andrews Collins, deceased.

Dated at Toronto, this 23rd day of December, 1918.

Geo. O. Alcorn
Master-in-Ordinary.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.

GRAIN MARKET

In the local cash grain market corn and oats are stronger. Barley has also firmed up a little; quoting 2c. higher. Buckwheat is weak, quoting 5c. or 6c. lower. In fodder feed, hay is easier, and $2 per ton lower. In the options corn again took a strong lead, January closing 2 1-8c. higher than Saturday's close, with the other months equally strong. Oats were in quite a strong market at Winnipeg.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William (not including 1 1-2c. tax), No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

London Ministers Want More Light on Heresy Conviction

Word "Perscution" is Being Used Regarding Case of Rev. R. W. Knowles—Effort to Suppress Reply of Minister is Alleged by Some.

VERDICT "A FARCE" SAYS ONE MINISTER

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Some of London's Methodist ministers declare the verdict of heresy against Rev. Dr. W. R. Knowles, of Petrolia, is unfair. They are calling for more light on the charge and trial. They declare that to make heresy a minor charge, so as to allow the cleric to retain his pulpit, is a farce. Rev. Dr. Knowles is preparing a statement. There are those who contend that pressure is being brought to bear on him to suppress it. If they are successful it will be only temporarily. It is certain that some of the London Methodist ministers will demand information on the matter at the next meeting of the London conference.

The London ministers declare that there are many facts that have come out at former trials that should have been made public, when the court's finding was prepared. Some of them go so far as to use the word "persecution" in connection with the business.

Verdict by Default?

The statement is made that the verdict of guilty was given at the last trial by default. Dr. Knowles' witnesses did not appear in the trial, and he, himself, refused to testify. Further, it is stated that while he admitted himself as guilty of indiscretion in speech on a certain occasion, at no time did he admit the heresy charges.

"The complainants were only able to get the verdict by minimizing the charges," said one minister. "In other words, they compromised. They asked to have hte charges made minor instead of major. Found guilty on a major charge, a man would be obliged to leave the church. On a minor charge he retains his pulpit and provision of the kind, such as was provided for in the verdict of guilty pronounced on Dr. Knowles. The thing is a farce, because if heresy is anything it is a major charge. Under the circumstances the verdict of guilty has been a farce."

In criticizing the finding against Dr. Knowles, attention is called to the fact that he was twice acquitted of the charges of which he was found guilty. The personnel of these former trial committees is pointed to. They were made up of men outstanding in the London Methodist Conference. It is perhaps coincident that the man who on Thursday last admonished Dr. Knowles on the order of the trial committee, was a member of the first committee that tried and acquitted Dr. Knowles. Rev. G. N. Hazen, for many years a leading Methodist cleric of London, Dr. F. L. Barber and Rev. W. L. Ashton, two leading London divines, were other members.

Wouldn't Wink at Heresy.

"Rev. Mr. Hazen, unswerving in his loyalty to the church and uncompromising in his attitude where truth and right are involved, wouldn't let anything like heresy go by, as everyone knows," declares one cleric.

Rev. W. E. Pescott, pastor of the Dundas Centre Methodist Church, brings considerable light to bear on the subject of the arbitration which, according to the report of the meeting at which the verdict was pronounced, "was attempted in the spring of 1918, which was contrary to the discipline of the Methodist Church."

Mr. Pescott says: "Arbitration was arranged on request of the complainants. I, for one, refused to act on the committee when we were approached to do so, for the reason that there was no provision in the discipline of the Methodist Church for thus deciding a case.

"To the objections raised, the complainants declared they were prepared to abide by the decision, whatever it was. Further, they signed a document to this effect. One of the last assurances they gave us just before decision was rendered was that they regarded us, the members of the arbitration committee, as gentlemen, and that they would accept our decision, whatever it was, and abide by it. They treated these pledges and the document as a scrap of paper.

"When the decision was given against them, and Dr. Knowles once more acquitted of heresy, they immediately repudiated the decision.

"They tried to spring the case on the conference again last June, and get a snap judgment.

"Failing this, they resorted to the general conference court of appeals to get an order for another trial, with the results announced. In my judgment, they couldn't possibly have obtained such a decision in a court of law."

The members of the arbitration committee, like those who formed an earlier committee, which acquitted Dr. Knowles, it is pointed out, are all widely known, some of them, indeed, for many years among the outstanding men of the conference. Rev. S. R. Muxworthy and Rev. Dr. Thomas Manning are both former presidents on conference in recent years. Associated with them were men who stand high educationally, Rev. Dr. Peever, Rev. W. E. Pescott, both of this city, Rev. Dr. Warner of St. Thomas, and Rev. J. C. Reid of Strathroy.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards —Receipts, 198 cars, with 3,093 cattle, 242 calves, 2,849 hogs, and 2,233 sheep and lambs.

Market was good and active for all grades of butcher cattle, at prices steady to 25c. higher than last week. A few loads of extra quality steers and heifers selling at top prices in the neighbourhood of $14 accounts for the slightly higher average over recent markets. It was a good average quality of cattle offering, and they were in good market.

Sheep and lambs were firm at 25c. higher.

Calves 25c. to 50c. higher for choice veal.

Hogs, market firm at $18.25, fed and watered, bid.

GEN. CURRIE GOING STRONG

To Arrange for Demobilization of Canadian Corps—Gen. Trenchard Pays Tribute to Airmen.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—It is understood that Gen. Currie will arrive in London very shortly on business connected with the final arrangements for the demobilization of the Canadian Corps.

Gen. Trenchard, in a report on the work of the Independent Air Force formed specially for bombing places in Germany, makes special reference to the work accomplished by several Canadians, in addition to the reference already cabled in connection with Commander Mulock of Winnipeg, whose squadron was ready for bombing Berlin when the armistice put an end to the expedition.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Remains Out Just as Late as Before

CHAPTER LXXX.

Brian top-toed into the room, and a very audible sigh of relief escaped him as he saw Ruth asleep — as he supposed. He had not meant to be so late; he had intended to come directly home when his lesson was finished, about half past eight. But some of the old crowd had dropped in to (Mollie's little studio, and they had sat smoking and talking until late.

Really, he felt terribly conscience stricken. If only he could get to bed without waking Ruth, perhaps he could say he didn't know the time he got in, if she asked him in the morning. He was ashamed to think he had had been so thoughtless.

"She's a dear girl!" he whispered to himself as he quietly placed one shoe on the floor, then the other, instead of kicking them off with the recket he usually made. "I ought to be ashamed. I am!" he added with rather a sheepish grin, as he crawled into bed, staying on the very edge so fearful was he of waking her.

There they both lay wide awake, each trying to convince the other they were asleep, and each guiltily awake.

Fortunately neither were aware of the ludicrous situation; and when finally they slept it was in blissful ignorance that either had lain awake.

"What time did you get in, Brian?" Ruth asked in the morning.

"I didn't look at the clock," he said, "you were fast asleep, so I crawled in without disturbing you."

"You must have been later than you expected to be. You recall you promised to be home by nine, or a little after, if you didn't some home to dinner. I didn't go to bed until after nine, and I"—

"Oh, don't nag a fellow just because he couldn't get home on the minute! I had to wait for a car," he interrupted.

Ruth had been about to say that she had been very tired, and had had a big dinner with her employer and it had made her sleepy. She had no faintest idea of nagging him, or of letting him know she was aware of the time he came in. But if he were going to take this tone with her, she would tell him nothing. Her lip quivered as she recalled how she had striven not to find fault even when she felt she had cause.

It had been twelve o'clock when he came in, yet he had resented her simple question in such a manner as to freeze the confidence on her lips. What had he been doing, where had he been, that he was so quick to blame her, so impatient?

She said nothing more, but dressed, and while at breakfast tried to appear as usual although her thoughts never left the question of his whereabouts until twelve o'clock the night before. She knew he never remained in his office after six, also that no school kept open until midnight. After his lesson he had gone somewhere; and it was a place about which he did not want her to question him.

Brian seemed to forget he had replied impatiently to Ruth, and in his usual egotistical way was telling of a new client he had secured, whom he thought was going to be a "good one," as he expressed it, because he was supposedly wealthy.

"That's fine!" Ruth replied, encouraging him as was her habit. But had Brian not been so wrapped up in himself as not to notice the shade in her tone, he would have seen that the encouragement was not so hearty, nor so spontaneous as usual.

"Yes, I hope through him to meet others like him," the reply was rather pompously given, and Ruth smiled in a sad sort of a way at what she had always considered his boyishness; but which she had occasionally feared he would not overcome —only occasionally, however.

"Don't mind about the money, dear, just at first. Try to do what they give you to do better than anyone else would do it. We can live easily with what we both earn" (as always, she put him on an equal plane as regarded earning capacity) "and it will give you all the time you need to do good work. Take pains with what he gives you to do. Don't hurry it," she knew that he was apt to rush a piece of work if he either needed, or thought he needed, the money.

"I guess I know how to manage my own business," Brian retorted, yet not unkindly. "I can work as fast as anyone, and do it well too. You see Ruth, you think because you earn a few dollars you know it all. After you have been working longer, you won't think yourself so wise."

Brian had meant no slur, he had even smiled as he spoke. But Ruth was hurt. "Earn a few dollars," he had said in his careless, patronizing way! She earned twice what he did, yet he took such a tone with her. Her business amour propre was offended. She never allowed herself to brag; even scarcely mentioned the fact, save casually, when she had accomplished a piece of work for which the firm gave her unstinted praise. She never had even hinted that she was "wise," that she "knew it all."

To-morrow—Mrs. Clayborne at last decides to Visit Ruth.

His Systematic Moving

By FANNY MAJORS

"Tom is going to move into another office," said the bride. "I've been simply dying to housecleen his bookcases and things and I told him I was coming down to help him—"

"Oh, my heavens!" interrupted the woman who has been married for some time. "Keep away! Don't go within a mile of the moving fracas! How lucky you are that I am here to save you!"

"Wh—wh——" stammered the surprised bride.

"Never shall I forget the time," proceeded the long-married lady, "when John thought that the eastern branch needed him permanently and he decided to store his office furniture here in the basement of a flat building he owned. Like most business men, John hates detail, and I was suspicious of his ability to move three large roomfuls and arrive with half the things. I offered to help him get books and pictures and his heaps of papers in order for the journey.

"But it developed differently. One night he arrived for dinner looking wild and distracted. He was so jumpy he couldn't sit still. If he had been a woman he would have had hysterics and kicked his heels.

"'I'm moving!' he said, defiantly. 'I've been moving all day! No, of course my papers and things weren't ready,' he admitted to my questioning. 'Why, I just sort of chucked them into drawers! Yes, of course, they had to take all the drawers out to move the tables and filing cabinets! No, of course I didn't see that they were covered tightly! Whadyuh think I'd cover 'em with? No, I couldn't get one of the big movers. I grabbed an expressman a man told me about. No, he hasn't a van! Oh, a sort of wagon with two dying horses and I think the three men he sent have creeping paralysis! They started to take things down at 2 o'clock and hadn't got them put on the wagon when I left! And it's raining—and the wagon hasn't a cover! Oh, gee, it's a mess.'

"I led John sternly to hot coffee and a steak and then I insisted on going with him to the building where the things were to be stored. I carried dustcloths and old newspapers in a wild hope of repairing some of the damage. We arrived to find a small motor delivery wagon disgorging some of his furniture on to the sloppy walk. It seemed that he had too much for the original wagon. The wagon was on the way. No, there was no telling when it would arrive. And, say, where was the basement light?

"There were no lights in that part of the basement. One of the movers produced some candle stubs. Falling all over themselves in the grim gloom, they got the dripping chairs and tables inside and I mopped them off.

"Then we settled down to wait. The basement was an immense cavern of cement and the three candle stubs turned it into a regular conspirator's den. I never saw such complete and whole-souled waiting as we did. John wandered restlessly back and forth, busting into verbal spasms whenever he remembered that his typewriter was in the missing wagon, uncovered, or that he couldn't recall where he had chucked the papers about the Haynes case. Outside on the motor sat a bulky, motionless figure. It was the owner of the express wagon. Inside it three husky movers smoked good cigars and rested violently.

"'Are you paying for this by the job or by the hour?' I asked John.

"'By the hour,' he said, meekly.

"I took a deep breath. 'Are you—er—paying for these hours while we are waiting to know whether those horses finally have died or whether the men merely have stopped for refreshments and are discussing the political situation?'

"'I am,' admitted John. 'Three-seventy-five per!'

"Two hours later the wagon creaked up through the rain and three more movers began adding to the confusion. I never saw such a swirl of desks, books, pictures and papers. I rescued wads of important papers in every direction whence the jolly movers hurled them. The tinkle of glass as they stepped through water-color drawings, the moan of solid mahogany as something scraped across its surface, the sputter of books as they crashed on the floor, the hoarse growls of the portly head expressman, the rampaging around in that dim cavern as six deep-breathing men all tried to lift one chair simultaneously was tragic.

"John paid a bill three times what it should have been and I saw my new fur coat vanish into the pocket of the fat expressman. We crept home exhausted at 11 o'clock that night and it took us a week to get all that stuff properly packed, arranged and stored, and by that time John and I weren't speaking and both of us meditated consulting divorce lawyers. No, don't try to help Tom!"

"Well, maybe it would be too much for my nerves," admitted the bride. "I had no idea they were so impetuous!"

Compressing Corn Shocks.

Time and labor is saved in compressing corn shocks by the use of a new tool, described in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, that consists of a rod and a crank handle. The rod is thrust into the shock, after which a rope with a hook at either end is passed about the bundle of stalks and hooked to the tool. By turning the latter the rope is wound tight about the stalks so that they can be tied easily.

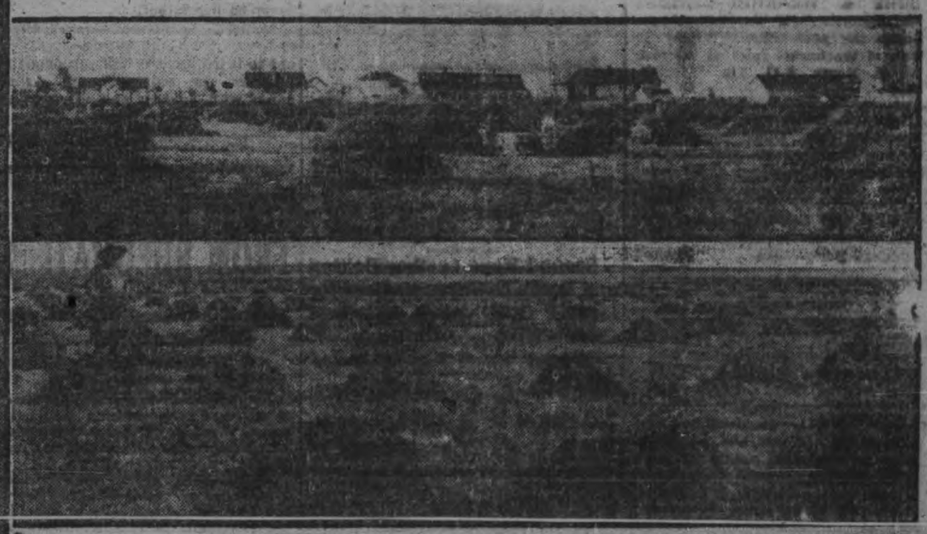
ALFALFA AND PROSPERITY



IF there is one crop more than another on which the prosperity of a country may be firmly established it is alfalfa—the king of fodder crops. This wonderful crop has been the foundation of successful irrigation agriculture in the United States, and history is now repeating itself in Canada. In Southern Alberta already an important alfalfa growing district—government reports show that there were 30,500 acres in this crop this year—farmers are using more and more of their irrigated lands every year for the growing of this valuable fodder, and it is only a question of time when the irrigable lands of Southern Alberta will rank among the largest alfalfa producing areas on the North American continent. The country is still young. Thousands of acres of irrigable land have not been touched by the plow Thousands more have been broken during the last two seasons and are not yet ready for this crop, as it does not do well until the sod has been thoroughly integrated — a process which is best accomplished by the growing of one or two other crops beforehand. Then, too, during the last two years the most urgent call has been for wheat.

For the growth of alfalfa Southern Alberta is extremely well favored. Alfalfa requires abundant sunshine and a warm summer temperature. Southern Alberta has both. During the summer months the days are much longer than they are farther south, and the sun shines almost continuously. Alfalfa does best on rich, deep, well-drained soil. These are special characteristics of the soil in Southern Alberta. Alfalfa thrives best under irrigation, in arid and semi-arid climates. The climate of Southern Alberta may be said to be semi-arid, and under irrigation alfalfa grows there to its highest perfection.

In the Lethbridge irrigation district, which is the oldest of the irrigated areas of Southern Alberta, alfalfa is beginning to be looked upon as the mainstay of the farmer. Yielding from three to four tons to the acre, and in some cases even more, in two cuttings, and selling at from $25 to $30 a ton, alfalfa has brought farmers returns of $100 an acre and upwards in one season. It is no wonder that a visitor driving through this country recently and seeing the beautiful green alfalfa fields on every hand should pronounce it one of the most prosperous districts in the whole of Western Canada.

But besides these very satisfactory returns from the sale of the hay, alfalfa is of inestimable value on account of the improved condition in which it leaves the soil in which it has been grown. Enormous yields of other crops have been obtained on land previously growing alfalfa. In 1913, which was by no means an extraordinary crop year, 757 bushels of potatoes to the acre were raised at Lethbridge on land which had been in alfalfa the previous year. Wheat on similar land yielded on successive years 58 and 59 bushels to the acre. Coming nearer to the present, two acres of land near Lethbridge that were planted to tomatoes this year after being in alfalfa for a few years, produced 35,000 pounds of ripe fruit in less than two months after being set out.

And this is not all that can be done with these irrigated lands. To obtain the fullest revenue would require that no roughage be sent from the farms as such, but only in the form of butter, cheese, beef, mutton and pork. The plant food contained in alfalfa hay is often worth more than the money actually received for the hay itself, high though this is. If only unmanufactured products were sent away this valuable plant food would be left on the farm, giving it every year increasing fertility. It is held that for every acre of irrigable land at least one head of cattle, or a proportionate number of hogs or sheep, can be supported all the year round. This fact is beginning to be appreciated, and it means that many times the number of livestock at present kept can be maintained on these irrigable lands. And as the number of live stock increases, the prosperity of the country will grow correspondingly. There are already signs that the time is not far distant when the irrigable areas of Southern Alberta will become the home of the most closely settled and most prosperous mixed farming and stock raising communities in the Canadian West, and, indeed, one of the most prosperous communities on the whole of the continent.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Secret Agent

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

Arline Driscoll was not peeved. That would have been too trivial and commonplace. She was piqued, however, and, too, Arline was puzzled.

Arline was piqued because her favorite attendant and friend, Randal Morse, had suddenly dropped away from his devotion and attentions. The day before a social function she had received a note from him, stating that important business prevented him from keeping his appointment.

The next day a girl friend imparted the information that Randal had left the employ of her father and Arline questioned the latter on the subject.

"Randal had left the plant," he told her, "and neither you nor I may see much of him for some time to come. Don't let that worry you, Arline, and don't discuss the matter with anyone."

All of which put Arline's mind in a new turmoil of speculation and mystery. They had been more than close friends, and she resented this abrupt and inexplicable abandonment. There were secret whispers among her girl friends as to the desertion, and, worse of all, Lionel Drury, a rejected suitor, came again upon the scene.

"Tell you, Miss Driscoll," he remarked one day, "there's a good deal of the inexplainable about Morse, and I happen to know that he is suspected of seditious tendencies."

"Oh, never," flashed forth Arline.

"You can't tell," rejoined Drury. "You see, he was abroad for several years acting as agent for a big harvesting machine house. That's how he comes to speak half a dozen different languages. Naturally he may have imbibed anarchistic principles. I happen to know that he has been seen in the close company of some suspected foreign spies."

Lockport was a busy manufacturing center, and with the advent of the war a large number of munitions contracts had been given out to local plants. Nearly all the employees were foreigners, and several persons accused of disloyal utterances had been arrested and punished. Their confreres had retaliated by deeds of vandalism. A mill had been fired, and a plot to blow up a factory furnishing cartridges to the government had been discovered and foiled just in time.

Arline came home from a visit to a girl friend one evening greatly perturbed. Just after quitting time one of the storage houses of the Driscoll works had been blown up. It was true that the building was old, held very little machinery, and was practically abandoned, but it was a serious warning to loyal manufacturers. Arline hurried to the library, where she noticed a light. She paused at the sound of voices, and recognized that of Lionel Drury. It was excited and highly pitched.

"Yes, sir, I am positive of what I say. I was passing the blown-up building when I noticed a flare at its rear. The next moment I saw Randal Morse dash from the spot, and the next the building went up."

"Have you spoken to anyone about this?" inquired Mr. Driscoll.

"No, sir; I hurried here, feeling it my duty to advise you first."

"You have given me valuable information," said the manufacturer, "but we must be guarded. Don't repeat a word of this until I have made plans to capture the miscreants who are working all this destruction. Arline will hear of it and be terrified. Will you kindly remain to dinner and keep her mind away from it?"

"Oh, sir, indeed, yes," voiced Drury.

Arline had retreated to another room. She was pale and trembling, but she well simulated a calmness that deceived her father.

"Arline," he spoke. "Lionel Drury is here. This last outrage sends me out to investigate. Will you entertain him for the evening?" and Arline, dumb with anxiety and mystery, assented.

Drury, in a fervor of delight at being honored with the confidence of the father and the company of the daughter, remained until ten o'clock. Arline sat at the open window of her room until midnight, consumed with distressing thoughts. Just as she was about to retire, she saw her father and a companion enter the garden and pace to and fro, engaged in earnest, low-toned conversation, and the companion was—Randal Morse! What did it mean?

It was two evenings later when her father summoned her to the library. As she entered the apartment Randal Morse arose and greeted her smilingly.

"I am going to leave it to Morse here—the man who blew up the old warehouse—to explain to you, Arline," spoke her father. "As he had my permission and the sanction of the government, you will understand why he did it."

Randal had done it because, pretending to be affiliated with an enemy group, he gained their confidence by just that act. His knowledge of different languages, his willingness to stand a test had completely won their favor. He had directed the officers of the law to their secret meeting place, where they found evidence of the criminality and intentions of the dangerous group.

So Arline did not lose her lover after all, and later gained a husband, but Lionel Drury did not come to the wedding.

Irksome.

"You must sometimes find it irksome to be lionized wherever you go, don't you?" said the sweet young widow.

"Yes," replied the poet, "especially where they limit themselves to lionizing me when I'm as hungry as a wolf."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Hot Baths.

The usual objection to hot baths is that the bather takes cold unless he goes straight to bed as soon as he has dried himself; otherwise, so they say, he goes on perspiring and takes a chill. Now, this is due not to having had a hot bath, but because the water was not hot enough when the bather got out of it. Hot water has the same effect as cold in bracing up the sweat pores and preventing them from continuing to pour out unnecessary perspiration.

Lukewarm water, on the other hand, leaves the skin lax and moist, and it is then that people are liable to chills. The best temperature at which to take a hot bath is 100 degrees F. or just below that. If more water is added afterward it should be hot, not cold, as this tends to maintain the temperature at the same level. With the aid of these precautions it will be found that drying is a simple process, and the skin is left in a delightful state without any undue perspiration to follow.

HATS.

Hats, hats, alluring and gay;
Hats, hats, in bewitching array;
Indian, turban, hussar, grenadier,
Brimless, coquettish, pretty and queer;
Brims a la Bonaparte; broad cavalier,
Plumaged, beribboned, chic chanticleer;
Straw braid, yedda straw, hemp weave and lace,
Basket braid, leghorn, outlines of grace!
Hats, hats, nations may rage
O'er tariff and navy and pensions for age,
Senates may pry off the lids of their scandals,
Insurgents may plot for Uncle Joe's sandals,
Physicians may warn of diseases in "rats"—
The mightiest theme in the world now is hats.

Colors harmonious, blended and blazing,
Impressionistic, toneful, amazing,
Biscuit blues, faded rose, dreamy,
Honey gold, cockscomb, feather foam creamy,
Aero green, golden rose, clay,
Nord blue, gold tissue, Eskimo gray,
Amethyst, silver sheen, dusk shades subdued,
Colors of poppyland, dream thought imbued,
Hats, hats, the south pole may lure,
Golden foundations may uplift and cure,
Teddy, triumphant, may sail down the Nile;
The comet may lash its gold tail by the mile,
All fandom may echo with bang of the bats—
The mightiest theme in the world now is hats.

He Woke 'Em Up.

A certain Scotch minister, a newcomer in the parish, finding it impossible to arrest the attention of his congregation, became desperate. No sooner did he appear in the pulpit than they promptly composed themselves to sleep.

One evening, after taking up his position, he rapped sharply on the ledge in front of him and addressed his somnolent flock in tones of severe remonstrance.

"Now, brethren," he said, "it's not fair to go to sleep, as ye always ha' done, directly I begin my sermon. Ye might wait a wee till I get along, and then if I'm not worth hearin' sleep awa' wi' ye, and I'll no care, but dinna go before I ha' commenced. Gie me this one chance."

Finding they were all fairly awake by that time, he went on:

"I shall take for my text the two words 'Know thyself,' but I will say before I begin the discourse that I would no advise this congregation to make many such profitless acquaintances."

There was not a snore or a nod in the kirk that evening.—Tit-Bits.

Bobbie's Absence Explained.

Bobbie's Sunday School Teacher—I've called, Mrs. Jector, to learn why little Bobbie doesn't come to his class any more.

Mrs. Jector—I'll tell you why, Miss Leaflette. The knowledge he received there was making Bobbie a wicked boy.

Bobbie's Sunday School Teacher—A wicked boy! Really, Mrs. Jector, I can't imagine what you have reference to.

Mrs. Jector—I'll explain, Miss Leaflette. The last time Bobbie attended Sunday school you taught him that people are made of dust. Well, he came home and nearly frightened me to death by trying to draw his little baby sister into the vacuum cleaner.—Chicago News.

Paper From Wattle Bark.

Considerable attention has been paid in recent years at the Imperial Institute to the discovery of substitutes for timber as a material for paper. One of the most promising of the materials investigated is the waste bark of the wattle tree, now extensively cultivated in South and East Africa and elsewhere, from which the tanning constituent has been removed either by use in the tan-pit or by the manufacture from the bark of a tanning extract. This waste material is now available in this country and in Natal, where the extract is being produced and exported to take the place of the extract which was formerly made in Germany, largely from bark shipped from South Africa. The problem of utilizing the waste bark has been investigated by the Imperial Institute and as the result of extensive trials it is now shown that it is capable of being converted into an excellent brown paper or mill-board.

The waste bark from tan-yards in this country may thus find remunerative employment, and an important industry is indicated for South Africa. Arrangements are being made in this country for the use of wattle bark by paper manufacturers, and the matter is also under consideration in South Africa, where virtually the whole of the paper and mill-board used is at present imported. Apart from the internal use of the bark in South Africa, about 40,000 tons of bark are now annually exported, chiefly to this country.—London Times.

For the Scandalmonger.

The Orleans museum has just been enriched with a curious relic of the past which some workmen in making excavations in the city came across. It is a stone representing a grinning figure, showing the teeth, the countenance being repellent enough. In this way the loquacious woman, the scandalmonger, was brought to her senses. The stone, suspended by a chain, was placed round her neck, and so accoutered she was compelled to walk round the town in which she lived. The stone is supposed to date about the sixteenth century.—London Globe.

Civil War Has Broken Out in Berlin and Public Buildings Have Been Seized

Women Supporters of Both Factions Are Participating in the Street Fighting—Rattle of Machine Guns Can Be Heard Throughout the City—Thousands of Workingmen Engaged in the Struggle.

"DOWN WITH THE GOVERNMENT"

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.—Independent Socialists have joined the Spartacusians in the civil war now raging in Berlin, according to despatches received here to-day. The Independent Socialists and Spartacusians are reported to have issued the following joint proclamation:

"To-day the final fight for the revolution will be fought."

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7. — Adolph Joffe and M. Radek, leaders of the Bolshevik mission to Germany, are in Berlin assisting Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg in fomenting the Bolshevik revolution, according to advices received here. They are believed to be at police headquarters, which is the stronghold of the Spartacans. The Independent Socialists, whose leaders were recently dismissed from the government, are reported to have gone over to the Spartacans.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Civil war has broken out in Berlin between the Spartacus and the Government forces, according to despatches received here to-day.

Complete anarchy reigns in Berlin, according to telephone messages received from the capital to-day.

Thousands of workers are fighting in the streets. The rattle of machine guns can be heard throughout the city. The Spartacusians have barricaded themselves in many of the public buildings, and are reported to hold all the banks.

Women supporters of both factions are participating in the street fighting in Berlin, according to a Berlin despatch, filed last night and received by the "Politiken" to-day.

Thousands of working men are engaged in the conflict, which has assumed the proportions of a civil war.

DOWN WITH GOVERNMENT.

The fighting was preceded by counter-demonstrations, in which a great proportion of the population joined. The rival elements bore placards with the legends, "Down with the Government" and "Down with the Spartacus."

The Spartacusians then massed in the Tiergarten and Zoological Gardens. Shots were fired and the fighting began. The Spartacusians seized all the telegraph offices. Shops are said to be closed and business at a standstill.

Later telephone messages said that the Government were planning to storm the Central Police Station.

Karl Liebknecht was reported to be personally leading the Spartacusians. Hundreds of persons are fleeing from the city.

Special to the Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.—The Central Offices of the Wolff Bureau, the semi-official news agency of Germany, last night sent the following message to the Copenhagen office, which was received to-day: "Central Berlin has been occupied. Send telegrams to Frankfort temporarily."

Previous despatches reported the Spartacusians has seized the Wolff Bureau and the principal Berlin newspapers, including the social organ "Vorwaerts."

Complete Anarchy.

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.—Berlin is in a state of complete anarchy, and civil war has begun there, according to the Munich correspondent of the "Politiken." His information, he says, is based on telephonic messages from the German capital. All banks are barricaded, and a great number of public buildings are in the hands of the Spartacan or Exereme Radical group. Thousands of armed workmen of the Spartacus faction, the correspondent reports, are crowding the streets, and at several points firing has begun. The sound of machine gun fire could be heard from all parts of Berlin. The message reported the intention of the Ebert Government to make an effort to storm the building of police guards later in the day and take possession of machine guns and cannon there. Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Spartacan leader, has been seen here and there about the city organizing his troops for a final fight, which the correspondent says is expected to begin very soon. Hundreds of persons are reported fleeing from the city.

Blood Letting.

This morning's cables seem to confirm the rumours of yesterday that the expected blood letting that generally follows a nation's defeat and revolution is well under way in Germany's capital. Reports from Berlin on Monday, realized through Amsterdam, indicated a disturbed condition of affairs in Berlin on Sunday, due to another attempt of the Spartacus group to obtain control of the city, and thereby of the central German Government. The Ultra Radical forces opposed to the Ebert Government sallied forth from the city's stronghold near the district which contained the principal newspaper offices and seized several of the newspaper plants, including those of the "Tageblatt," "Vossische Zeitung Lokal Anzeiger," "Vorwaerts" and "Morgen Post," together with the office of the Wolff Bureau, a semi-official news agency. Apparently the Government still retained control of the German wireless service for contemporaneously with these reports of revolutionary activities on the part of the Spartacus faction came an official wireless message declaring that Germany was about to take diplomatic and military measures against the Russian Bolshevik Government for her own protection. The Spartacus faction has maintained close relations with the Russian Bolshevik interest, and apparently it was the presence in Berlin of M. Radek, a Bolshevik emissary from Russia, who has been propagating Bolshevik ideas in co-operation with the Liebknecht group that precipitated the Ebert Government's declaration of a virtual state of war between Germany and Russia.

Gen. Ludendorf Said to Be Living Life of Recluse

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 7.—General Ludendorff, former chief of the German armies, is living the life of a recluse on a farm near Heslehoim, under the name of Ernst Linstroem, it was officially announced to-day. He refuses to see visitors and takes long tramps through the forests daily.

Ludendorff has been variously reported as hiding in Germany, where he was supposed to be writing his memoirs and as having arrived in Russia to lead the Bolshevik armies.

An Element of Danger

"Where in Hell Could We Send Him," Demanded Count Bernstorff, Referring to Former Kaiser.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—"Where in hell could we send him," demanded Count Von Bernstorff, in reply to an interrogation by the Berlin correspondent of the Express, relative to the ultimate disposition of the former Kaiser.

Bernstorff admitted there might possibly be an element of danger in Wilhelm's presence in Holland, so close to Germany. He declared, however, that a return to the monarchy is an "unthinkable proposition."

The former Ambassador to the United States, while labouring daily at preparation of the peace data for the use of the German delegation, apparently has no desire to attend the conference. In fact he intimated he was gratified that Chancellor Ebert had vetoed such a proposition.

Among those who have been mentioned as possible members of the German delegation are Brockdorff, Rantzau, Kantsky, Bernstein, Solff, Dernburg, Heiwecki, Rathenau, Walther, Rodern, Wermuth and Erzberger.

Hon. F. B. Carvell is Ill; Visit is Postponed

The citizens who had pleasurably anticiapted the visit of the Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, to Peterborough to-morrow, will regret to learn that owing to a sudden illness his trip has been indefinitely postponed. The disappointing telegram announcing his illness was received by Mr. J. H. Burnham this morning, who immediately cancelled the preparations for the reception of the Minister.

17TH YEAR AS CHAIRMAN

Mr. T. F. Matthews Again Appointed Head of the Utilities Commission at First Meeting of New Year.

WATER METERS FOR APARTMENTS

Mr. T. F. Matthews was re-appointed, for the seventeenth consecutive year, chairman of the Utilities Commission at last night's meeting, the first of the new year. Mr. Matthews was elected chairman in 1902, and has retained that position without a break. His record is a remarkable tribute to his efficient service and personality, not only by the citizens who have re-elected him during these years, but also by his associates on the Commission who have recognized his ability and devotion to the public utilities under the Commission's control by retaining him as chairman.

Water Meters For Apartments.

It was decided last night to install water meters in all apartment houses in the city. This action is intended to overcome the accounting difficulties that arise out of recurring vacancies in apartments and the readjustment of payments resulting from the lapses in tenancy.

Mr. H. O. Fiske was authorized to rebuild the light line on the west side of George street from Hunter to Simcoe street.

RETURNED FROM ITALY

Joint Conferences May Commence Next Week—Wilson Back in Paris.

THE PRELIMENARIES

(United Press.)
(By Robert J. Bender.)

PARIS, Jan. 7. — Back in Paris, President Wilson was expected today to plunge immediately into the final preliminaries that will precede the formal peace deliberations of the associated powers.

The President returned from Italy with the obvious support of the common people of that country.

The joint conferences of the American, British, Italian and French delegations, it is believed in many quarters, will constitute the real peace congress, which it was expected will get under way not later than the first of next week.

HAS RETURNED.

Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 7. — President Wilson returned to Paris from his Italian trip at 9.58 this morning.

As a result of citizenships bestowed upon him by al lthe cities and towns in the Turin district, President Wilson can vote or hold office in 1,800 different Italian municipalities.

Annual Poultry Show Opens In Peterboro This Evening

One of the Largest Exhibits on Record—A Few of the Exhibitors—Extra Features.

The annual poultry show, which opens this evening in the armouries has one of the largest exhibits ever shown in the city. Over 1,000 birds, representing practically every class of poultry, is on exhibition. Some of the larger exhibitors are Messrs. Curtis, of Warkworth; Cox, of Colborne; Caldwell, Frank Brown and Robert Fox, of Port Hope; R. J. Munro, Grafton; Mrs. Walsh, Kingston; Daniels, Letts, L. Morrow and Morton, of Lindsay; W. W. Lord, of Campbellcroft; Dr. Hadyn, and Lesson, Cobourg; Northey, of Oshawa, and Bottrell of Bowmanville.

While ever class is well filled, some have broken all previous records. Mr. W. W. Lord, of Campbellcroft, has the largest exhibit of water fowl ever shown. In this collection 31 breeds of ducks and geese are included. Mr. T. Brown of Port Hope, has also broken the past records with his Blue Andalusians, in which one collection there are 34 different kinds.

The Golden Wyandottes, Buff Leghron, White Legorn, Pitt Game and ornamental fowl exhibits are also the best ever shown.

The Judges.

The judges, Mr. Jarvis of Grimsby, who has had 40 years' experience in judging fowl, and Mr. Reid, of Kingston, have arrived, and will commence work this evening. Mr. George Paxman, the President, told the Examiner that he is quite satisfied with the class of poultry the judges will have to deal with, as exhibitors have found that it is useless to any fowl but the best for exhibition in Peterborough.

Several which are shown were prize-winners at Guelph.

A New Feature.

A new feature of the show is the Dominion Department of Agriculture live stock branch, poultry division egg exhibit. This alone is well worth the poultry fancier's while to visit the show. The exhibit includes a large chart, with instructions and comparisons in egg production, also a dark room for candling eggs. In connection with this Mr. Fee, of Ottawa, will lecture each of the three evening of the show.

A NEW DEPARTURE

Recognizing that there are hundreds of owners of Phonographs and Gramophones in Peterboro that own records that they are tired of and would like to exchange for new records, C. R. Banks will open a record exchange department in his store, 212 to 216 Charlotte street.

He will exchange records for 25c each or $2.00 a dozen, any make or style, for disc and cylinder machines. This will enable Phonograph and Gramophone owners to obtain an entirely new repertoire at a nominal cost, and should prove a boon to owners of machines, who have expressed a desire for such a service. 1d

TRINITY CHURCH CHOIR.

Owing to the "Week of Prayer" service being held in Trinity church on Thursday evening, the choir will meet for practice Wednesday evening, Jan. 8th, at the usual hour and place.

Every member is urgently requested to be present and on time, as work of special importance is on hand.

Northland Enquiry Was Resumed This Morning

One Witness Got a Bone for Christmas Which Was Supposed to Have Had Meat on at One Time.

LACK OF DISCIPLINE

(Special to Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 7. — The "Northland" enquiry was resumed this morning in the House of Commons Chamber, His Lordship occupying the Clerk's chair at the head of the table and the witnesses sitting where the mace is. Counsel Holden occupied's Sir Wilfred Laurier's chair and other representatives were scattered in various opposition seats.

Pte. James Abbott, of Ottawa, who has had a long and varied service in both the army and navy, and is a man of considerable assurance, confirmed a newspaper interview, in which he said that the "Northland" as a troopship "was the worst that he had ever seen," and that the treatment of the men was very bad. They were he said, herded together, forced to wash and shave with hard salt water, were given half rations, and had no opportunity to exercise. The food, he said, could have been improved, both as to quality and quantity. Some of it was not fit to eat.

"For instance ——?" asked His Lordship.

The potatoes, said the witness, were rotten; the eggs were stale and the porridge was full of uncooked lumps of meat.

How were the men fed on Christmas day?

I know how I was fed. I got a bone. It was supposed to have had meat on it at one time.

Did you tell the reporters that salmon supposed to be on the rations, was saved and sold as salmon?

No; but salmon sandwiches were sold. I myself purchased them from a steward and paid either two shillings or two half crowns—I forget which.

You knew it was against the regulations to buy food?

Yes, sir; I knew that it was wrong, but I was hungry.

Discipline was Bad.

The discipline on the vessel was very bad. If the stewards wanted to do a thing they did it. If they didn't, they didn't. I have seen a steward pick up a pile of ten or twelve plates, start to wrestle with another man, and then drop and break them all but one or two. When I asked him if the breakage would be charged to us, he said "To h—— with the dishes; there will be so many less to wash. We are charged two shillings for breakages and we might as well get our money's worth."

For three small biscuits witness said he had paid as high as a shilling and got no change back though he did not expect it. The witness thought that men forced to do fatigue duty on board ship should be paid for it.

Didn't these men volunteer for the work? asked His Lordship.

Witness did not know, but in his experience men doing cook room fatigue were paid for it.

He declared that Noble of the P. P. C.L.I., had worked in the gallery all the way over and got nothing for it.

Ventilation was very bad, he said. They said it was stormy, but they could have had the ventilators open oftener than they were. I didn't think that it was very rough in any case.

Door Closed.

Witness declared that on one occasion he had showed his plate to an artillery officer. The latter had said to him, "The only thing you can do is to eat what you have and get in again at the tail of the queue." He had done this and when after some time he was approaching the wicket of the pantry it closed down and he got nothing.

The sanitary conditions were bad. He had seen a steward go around and mop up the deck, the stairs and the quarters with one bucket of water and a mop. He was simply scrubbing filth into the decks that was all. When men would vomit they would throw a little sand on it, scrub, and then rub it with the dirty mop. The labatories overflowed every time that that the ship rolled and filthy water flooded around the men's boots.

Lieut. Adiel Steacy of Brockville, who enlisted with the 73rd Battery in June of 1918, but did not get to was the next witness. He had been in charge of the men of District No. 3 on the voyage of the Northland.

Lauder is "No Excited"

Arrived in Montreal This Morning Clad in a kilt.

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Harry Lauder arrived from Halifax at 8.50 this morning, owing to his train being twelve hours late there was no organized demonstration such as the irate French-Canadians had promised him. The comedian motored to the Windsor hotel, where he registered his presence in the rotunda, clad as he was, in a kilt, and no rotten eggs were thrown. He was accompanied by John Findlay, a prominent Scot, and Mr. Morris, Harry's New York manager, his light raincoat attracting much attention. Met on the arrival by a Toronto reporter, he was asked, "Will you sign the statement?"

"What statement?"

"The one your friends have prepared to satisfy the French-Canadians."

"I'll sign nothing. I've seen no statement, don't get excited, I'm no excited myself. They're only putting up a bluff on you."

Five Hundred Messages Received By Mrs. Roosevelt

Canadian Press:

OYSTER BAY, Jan. 7. — Five hundred cables and telegrams and thousands of letters have poured into Oyster Bay for Mrs. Roosevelt in sympathy with the loss of her distinguished husband. All the Kings and Presidents of Allied and neutral Europe and from Asia and Africa have sent their condolences. President Wilson cabled from Moda Newon, France, on the Italian frontier.

France Deeply Shocked at Death of Colonel Roosevelt.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Explaining that it was Colonel Roosevelt's wish that his funeral service be conducted entirely by those friends among whom he had lived so long and happily, Captain Archibald Roosevelt today declined on behalf of the family an offer by the Secretary of War to furnish an escort of United States troops at the funeral services at Oyster Bay to-morrow.

Deeply Shocked.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 7.—France is as deeply shocked at the death of Colonel Roosevelt as though she had lost one of her own greatest statesmen.

The newspapers to-day prominently displayed eulogistic articles regarding the former President.

AMATEUR NIGHT AT THE GRAND

Local Talent Given An Opportunity

"Amateur night," held last evening at the Grand Opera House, brought out some very excellent local talent. Last night's performers were as follows:

John Smith, baritone.

Primeau, Leonard and Morphet, in a "Coon Rehearsal," a comedy sketch which was well received.

Clark and Quinlan, in a step dancing act with banjo accompaniment.

Jack Perdue in a song number. The latter broke down several times, but insisted on remaining until the selection was completed in spite of the threats of the management to apply the hook.

Clark and Quinlan carried off the first prize while the second prize was awarded to Primeau, Leonard and Morphet. The third prize went to John Smith.

In addition to this there was a five-reel picture feature, and even other reels including a couple of comedy numbers.

This is the second amateur night held this season, and the result last evening was very creditable to all concerned, including the performers.

The object of holding amateur night is to bring out some of the local talent which is well represented in Peterborough in its various forms.

COL. ROOSEVELT'S DEATH.

Canadians share with their cousins in the United States in the general grief that is being shown at the sudden death of Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Probably no citizen of America appealed more strongly to the affections of the Canadian people than the ex-President, who was regarded on this side of the line as one of the most warm-hearted friends of Great Britain's cause in the United States. It has been the belief of many Canadians that had Roosevelt been president when the great war began the entrance of the American nation into the conflict would have been accelerated. His speeches on the war have struck a responsive vein in Canada, and his staunch support of Great Britain's share in the struggle won him the gratitude and esteem of Canadians everywhere. His death removes a world-famous figure.

A WISE DECISION.

The decision of the Peterborough War Veterans not to take any action in regard to a resolution passed by the Kingston branch, advocating the forming of a political platform by the G.W.V.A. would seem to be a wise one. With the political situation in its present involved state the Veterans are making no mistake in keeping away from the mix-up. They can accomplish their objects much more effectively by working on a non-political basis and the time is not ripe—if indeed it ever will be ripe—for the formation of an independent Veterans' party. At present the Great War Veterans will be much more certain of a general and sympathetic support from the public if they remain free from political entanglements. This has been the opinion of the leading officials of the Association throughout the Dominion, and the local branch is acting wisely in refusing to advocate any divergence from this policy.

VETERANS WILL HELP.

One of the strongest endorsations that the Salvation Army war-work campaign has gained is the action of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association in selecting two team captains to assist in the local drive. Peterborough returned soldiers are not only willing to praise the work of the Salvation Army, but are prepared to help in the securing of the funds needed to carry on the movement. The Veterans, appreciative of what the Salvation Army has already accomplished overseas, realize that in spite of the end of hostilities, there is still a vast amount of work to be done among Canada's troops, both on the other side and here. They have every confidence in the honesty of purpose of the Salvation Army, which has apparently succeeded in reaching the affections of the Canadian soldier in a manner that no other similar organization has been able to accomplish. The endorsation of the Veterans should be an incentive to the people of Peterborough to heartily support the local campaign. It is the Salvation Army's first appeal for assistance after four and a half years of magnificent work on behalf of Canada's soldiers—this fact should be remembered when the campaign for funds begins.

SARNIA'S CAMPAIGN.

Every now and then we have an outbreak in Peterborough of a make-this-a-better-city spirit. The symptoms are usually loud and long talking at the beginning of the attack, followed by a sudden lapse into silence. The seizures are intermittent but so far have never got beyond the initial stage because the attack has so far failed to reach the secondary phase where action follows talk. In this regard we might well take a leaf from Sarnia's book. The Western Ontario city is not merely talking, it is transforming its talk into activity, and as a first step there is being conducted at the present time an expansion drive for the formation of a Greater Sarnia Chamber of Commerce. Specialists in civic-commercial organization work have been called in and Sarnia is commencing systematically and efficiently to establish a strong local organization of which it is promised that thoroughness will characterize every step. The directors of the campaign are planning to show the business men and women, the manufacturers and workmen, of the city the splendid advantages that will follow the formation of a chamber of commerce. An intensive drive for membership will be staged immediately after a publicity campaign has been conducted. Following these steps there will be arranged a complete working organization for the chamber, the details of which will be worked out by the experts whose services have been secured. There is much enthusiasm over the movement in Sarnia, and commencing on business principles there is every reason to expect that it will be a brilliant success.

A CAPITALIST'S LABOUR PROGRAMME.

There are capitalists who take an extreme view of the claims of capital, just as there are labour men who take an extreme view of the claims of Labour. But it will usually be found that the more moderate and reasonable capitalists and labour men are not far apart in their views as to what is due to capital and what is due to labour.

There is Henry P. Kendall, for example. He would be classed as a capitalist, and the labour men who don't know him would naturally assume that he is "class-conscious" and not to be trusted to do justice to organized labour in any dispute between it and organized capital. He is chairman of the committee on industrial relations of the Chambers of Commerce of the United States. Mr. Kendall has framed a programme for the promotion of industrial peace on this continent. The following are its main features:

Definite recognition of the right of every individual to a job.

Continuous and regular employment wherever and whenever possible.

The right of organibation if such organization is not disastrous to industry.

Prompt and conclusive settlement of labour disputes.

The right of organization if such living wage, and the abolition of industries which cannot afford to pay such a wage.

The maintenance of wages as long as possible in periods of industrial depression, since good wages form the backbone of prosperous business conditions in general.

A standardized amount of work to be done for a definite return.

A forty-eight-hour week, or some similar standard, but not merely as a basis for overtime payments.

A "labour manager" for every important industry, to have national jurisdiction in handling problems of industrial matters, and to be maintained by the employers in that industry acting jointly.

If a moderate-minded and reasonable representative of organized labour were to undertake the framing of a programme designed to promote similar objects, would it be far different from that of Mr. Kendall? We don't think so.—Hamilton Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Liberty has lost a valiant supporter, and the cause of the Allies a staunch friend in the death of Theodore Roosevelt.

Canadian troops in Siberia are fighting in snow four feet deep. After last winter the Maple Leaf troops ought to be used to such conditions.

Returned men who came home on the Tunisian are complaining of the conditions on board that steamer. Complaints are especially vigorous in regard to the food supplied. Another inquiry may be necessary.

While the British navy is bombarding the Bolsheviks at Riga, Toronto foreigners are cheering lustily for the Bolshevik doctrine.

SITUATION IN POLAND

Paderewski Asked to Accept Coalition Government.

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Jan. 7.—The Polish government to-day was in control of Prince Sapicha, who acted as stage manager for the coup d'etat yesterday morning, which had for its object the forcing of the establishment of a coalition ministry.

Ignace Paderewski, who has been proposed as President of the Polish Republic, left the city Saturday afternoon. Efforts are being made to induce him to accept the coalition.

Under the direction of Sapicha, all State buildings were occupied during the early hours of yesterday, and the Cabinet members placed under arrest. Sapicha then conferred with the government military leaders, Gen. Pilsudski and Gen. Szeptycki. Sapicha, carried away by the success of his coup, endeavoured to get the generals to agree to a complete revolution, but they induced him to abide by his original campaign of a coalition government.

The Prince agreed, on the condition that amnesty would be granted all his followers, and that he should remain temporarily in control of the government.

A courier was sent to free the Cabinet members, but they had been removed to some unknown place in the meantime, and were still "lost" to-day. Szeptycki was then sent in an automobile to bring back Paderewski. The success of his mission has not yet been learned.

SCENE FROM "TURN TO THE RIGHT," WHICH WILL BE THE ATTRACTION AT "THE GRAND" TO-NIGHT.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Bolsheviki Take Riga

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

IF CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK, BILIOUS, CLEAN LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS.

Children love this "fruit laxative" and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty its bowels, and then, suddenly, they become quickly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, the stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, bad-tempered, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, the breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach aches or has diarrhoea. Listen, mother! See if the tongue is coated; then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers use "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

WOOD ALCOHOL WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR MAN'S DEATH

Coroner's Jury Recommends the Imposition of Additional Restrictions on Sale of Alcohol.

We find that the deceased came to his death by drinking 'Columbian alcohol and we strongly recommend that restrictions be put on the sale of Columbian alcohol.

Such was the verdict brought in last night by the jury which was impanelled to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Omer Bourgan, 45 Lafayette avenue, who died on Monday, December 30, under peculiar circumstances.

Evidence given by Mr. C. M. Moncur of the Moncur Drug Co. and corroborated by Emmet Faux showed that the alcohol was purchased in the Moncur Drug store by Emmet Faux on Saturday, December 28, about 7 p.m.

Mr. Moncur says that Faux purchased only 2 bottles, while Faux states emphatically that he bought 4 bottles that day at the Moncur store. In the evening of the same day Faux purchased a bottle of wood alcohol (Columbian spirits) and in 45 minutes came back for another bottle. Which Mr. Moncur saw him again he remark to his clerk.

"You don't suppose that he would drink that stuff to you?"

Wanted it for Horse

He said that he wanted it for his horse, answered the clerk.

Then Faux mixed the spirits with another more water and took a bottle over to the house of Mr. Omer Bourgan who had in the first place told him that wood alcohol was good to drink.

"That poison label is only a bluff," Bourgan is reported to have said when telling Faux of the alcohol.

The first bottle that Faux mixed was too weak for Bourgan's taste according to Faux's evidence. He (Faux) then mixed another bottle with less water in it. This bottle he also took to the residence of Mr. Bourgan which poured out a cup of the liquid but Faux was unable to swallow his. He said that it was too strong. Mr. John Hetherington of Jackson avenue was at the Bourgan residence the same Saturday evening and partook of the fatal bottle. He also stated that he took more of the contents than did Bourgan. Both Hetherington and Emmet Faux gave evidence that they were dreadfully ill on Sunday. Mrs. Bourgan stated that her husband was very ill on Sunday. In the afternoon he started to vomit and complained of pains in the back and a general feeling as if he had apoplexy. He did not eat anything all day and at 4.30 Monday morning became unconscious and died in St. Joseph's Hospital at ten o'clock. The bottle from which the alcohol was drunk was produced and identified by both Mr. Hetherington, Mrs. Bourgan and Dr. Edward Wood who attended the deceased. The bottle was labelled "ginger wine" and was purchased in a local hotel. The blood was made partly of this ginger wine and partly of the Columbian spirits.

Had Several Drinks.

John Hetherington said that he had 3 or 4 drinks out of the bottle. It seemed pretty strong and had a strangling effect. Mr. Bourgan put about half a teacup of water in the bottle but both men had taken two or three drinks before it had been weakened. On Sunday Mr. Hetherington did not feel at all well and felt sleepy and drowsy with headaches.

Practically Dead

Dr. Edward Wood who was called to the Bourgan residence Monday morning said that he found that Bourgan was practically dead. He was pulseless, his heart action was very weak and the only sign of life was his breathing which was very laboured. A hypodermic was injected and the patient rushed to the hospital. Dr. Wood smelt the contents of the bottle and concluded that it was methylated spirits or wood alcohol. Dr. Wood said that drinking wood alcohol is very disastrous and would likely kill anybody. It is always labeled poisonous when purchased. He did not think that it would make a person drunk but only delirious. This statement was corroborated by Mr. McDermid of McDermid and Jury Drug Co.

A post-mortem examination of Bourgan by doctors Wood and Cameron showed that one end of the stomach was filled with blood and the other end of the stomach was filled with a brown fluid which had no smell. Most of the organs of the body were congested. The mucous membrane showed a strong irritant poison which, in the absence of any other cause was sufficient to result in death. Dr. Wood volunteered as evidence that on Sunday evening he was called to the Faux home to treat the elder Faux brother, who was suffering from acute gastritis. Faux said that he had been drinking some of "that" alcohol on Monday night he was called to the Faux residence again and the younger brother (the man who mixed the alcohol for Bourgan) Emmet Faux was suffering from the same ailment, acute Gastritis. Other evidences pointed to the fact that he had been drinking wood alcohol and his eyesight was effected. Faux was delirious when taken to the hospital.

Restrictions Suggested

Both medical practitioners thought it would be a good plan to put restrictions on the sale of this alcohol which some people think is [illegible] because it is called alcohol [illegible] is not a grain alcohol at [illegible] a product of wood.

Mr. Moncur thought it would be a wise plan to change the name also etherr so that it would not include the name, alcohol.

Emmet Faux with a haggard face and lustreless eyes corroborated the evidence of the previous witnesses but stated that he bought 4 bottles of Columbian alcohol at the Moncur Drug store.

"Do you want any more of it?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"No, sir," said Faux emphatically. "It didn't make me 'feel drunk,' said Faux, but it made me feel sick to my stomach. All day Sunday I didn't drink any of it. It was Bourgan who told me that it was fit to drink but I didn't like the taste of it at all."

MEDAL OF MERIT.

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, Jan. 7.—Senator Frascare President of the Italian Red Cross, has awarded Mrs. Wilson the Medal of Merit of that organization, it was announced to-day.

Secretary of the Veterans Is Honoured

The good work that Mr. Sidney Whatley, Secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans Association has accomplished locally is shown by the fact that he has been offered a position as field secretary for the Great War Veterans' Association—an office that may require him to go overseas again in the interests of the Association. Mr. Whatley is in Toronto to-day consulting the Ontario provincial executive in regard to the appointment, the offer of which is a tribute to the successful manner in which he has looked after the affairs of the local branch.

Conference Will Be Held To-night

Brigadier A. Jennings of the Salvation Army, is in the city to-day and this evening will meet Mr. T. A. Aylmer and others in the office of Mr. F. H. Dobbin, in a preliminary conference respecting the million dollar drive. The campaign will open on Monday, January 19th. The objective for Peterborough City and County is thirty thousand dollars.

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

IF CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK, BILIOUS, CLEAN LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS.

Children love this "fruit laxative" and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty its bowels and the moment it is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, the stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, the breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach ache or diarrhoea. Listen, mother! See if the tongue is coated then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Dr. Wood volunteered as evidence that on Sunday evening he was called to the Faux home to treat the elder Faux brother, who was suffering from acute gastritis. Faux said that he had been drinking some of ethel alcohol. On Monday night he was called to the Faux residence again and the youngest brother (the man who mixed the alcohol for Bourgan) Emmet Faux was suffering from the same ailment, acute gastritis. Other evidences pointed to the fact that he had been drinking wood alcohol and his eyesight was effected.

Faux was delirious when taken to the hospital.

Restrictions Suggested

Both medical practitioners thought it would be a good plan to put restrictions on the sale of this alcohol, which some people think is drinkable because it is called alcohol although it is not a grain alcohol at all but a product of wood.

Mr. Moncur thought it would be a wise plan to change the name altogether so that it would not include the name, alcohol.

Emmet Faux, with a haggard face and lustreless eyes corroborated the evidence of the previous witnesses but stated that he bought 4 bottles of Columbian alcohol at the Moncur Drug store.

"Do you want any more of it?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"No, sir," said Faux emphatically.

"It didn't make me 'feel drunk'," said Faux "but it made me feel sick to my stomach. All day Sunday I didn't drink any of it. It was Bourgan who told me that it was fit to drink but I didn't like the taste of it at all."

MEDAL OF MERIT.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ROME, Jan. 7.—Senator Frascara President of the Italian Red Cross, has awarded Mrs. Wilson, the Medal of Merit of that organization, it was announced to-day.

Secretary of the Veterans Is Honoured

The good work that Mr. Sidney Whatley, Secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association has accomplished locally is shown by the fact that he has been offered a position as field secretary for the Great War Veterans' Association—an office that may require him to go overseas again in the interests of the Association. Mr. Whatley is in Toronto to-day consulting the Ontario provincial executive in regard to the appointment, the offer of which is a tribute to the successful manner in which he has looked after the affairs of the local branch.

Conference Will Be Held To-night

Brigadier A. Jennings of the Salvation Army, is in the city to-day and this evening will meet Mr. J. A. Aylmer and others in the office of Mr. F. H. Dobbin, in a preliminary conference respecting the million-dollar drive. The campaign will open on Monday, January 19th. The objective for Peterborough City and County is thirty thousand dollars.

Peace Deliberations May Sound Death-knell of Secret Diplomacy

Delegates Are Gathering for the Opening Meetings Next Week—Wilson's Fourteen Points.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 7.— The death knell of secret diplomacy is expected to be sounded when the formal peace deliberations of the associated powers open next week. The feeling was growing among the American officials to-day that these sessions, which probably will start at Verseilles Jan. 13 or 14, should be open to the press of the world. Inasmuch as the allied nations have agreed that secret diplomacy must be abolished, it was felt that the American attitude that this is the time to put his principle into effec, should receive ready endorsement by the other delegations.

These sessions at Versailles are likely to be more or less formal, with President Poincare welcoming the delegates, and the observance of other diplomatic courtesies. But they are expected to be symbolic of a new era of open diplomacy and the abolition of secret treaties. While the Versailles conference will mark the official opening of negotiations towards peace, the actual opening so far as discussion is concerned, began with President Wilson's return to Paris to-day.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The President's idea is to have the Congress grow from individual discussions into general conferences as the various subjects are developed. The Serbian, Greek, Polish, Chinese and other smaller delegations are already here. Lord Robert Cecil, assistant secretary of state for Foreign Affairs of the British Empire, was expected to arrive to-day, and Foreign Minister Balfour probably will be here on Saturday. All the delegates were expected to be present by Sunday.

The first subject for discussion will of course be relative to another extension of the armistice. There is a possibility that some modification will be made in the present terms, along economic lines. The armistice is entirely a military matter, however, and will be subject to military consideration. In view of the growing threat of Bolshevism, the Americans are understood to be inclined toward modifying the blockade feature in the armistice.

CARE NECESSARY.

Herbert Hoover having established the fact that conditions in some parts of Austria are desperate and that Germany is so lacking in fat as to threaten social quietude, it is felt that the greatest care is necessary to avoid bringing about conditions in the Central Powers which would result in such disorder that there would be no responsible government to deal with. At the same time the German statesmen may have no hope of gaining the sympathy of the United States. Foreign Minister Brockdorff's recent statement, in which he announced his policy would be an adherence to President Wilson's fourteen points, has aroused no particular enthusiasm in allied circles, as this is obviously the only course that Germany could pursue, whether she wished to or not. In spite of the preliminary discussion between the associated powers, the Germans will have to realize that the Americans, the same as all the Allies, are here to make a victorious peace—not a negotiated peace. America will stand form for making peace on the basis of Wilson's fourteen points, but it is not for Germans to say what will be accepted.

HOLY GEE, MY HEAD FEELS GOOD TO-DAY!

Pain Over Eyes is Gone, Headache Cured, Catarrh Relieved!

This is the Common Experience of Those Who Breathe the Vapor of

Catarrhozone

Remember this, Catarrh can never be cured or even relieved by a cough syrup, a spray, or tablet treatment. Trouble is these remedies slip quickly over the sore irritated membranes, drop into the stomach and do little else but harm digestion. It's different with "Catarrhozone"—you inhale it. Every breath sends healing balsams to the inflamed tissues. Tightness, soreness and inflammation are cured by healing pine essences. The cough dies away, throat is strengthened, huskiness is cured. Nothing is so simple, so convenient, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. The dollar outfit includes the inhaler, costs $1.00, and is guaranteed to cure. Small size, 50c., trial size 25c, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

INCREASE IN PENSIONS

A Number of Peterboro Dependents Will Benefit as Result of New Regulations.

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.— Substantial increases in pensions for children of Canada's deceased or disabled soldiers are officially announced to-day. Up to date eight dollars per month per child has been the rate of the pension. In future the children of deceased or disabled soldiers will be pensioned as follows:

For first child or dependent brother and sister, twelve dollars per month.

For second, ten dollars.

For third or subsequent children, eight dollars.

In cases where the mother also is dead, payments will be doubled.

A number of Peterborough dependents of soldiers who have been killed or disabled, will benefit as a result of the increases noted above.

BIG FIRE IN HALIFAX

Canadian Press

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 7.—Fire broke out this afternoon in the Roy building, one of the largest business structures in Halifax. It progressed rapidly. The all fire fighting force of Halifax was called out. The flames threatened the important business section bounded by Barrington, Sackville, Granville and Prince streets.

The fire fighters were successful after a hard fight, in extinguishing the spreading fire. The Roy block, however, was destroyed. First estimates placed the damage done by the fire at five hundred thousand dollars.

HAD SEVERE COLD

AND TICKLING SENSATION IN THE THROAT.

This trouble is most distressing, and is caused from a cold that has settled in the throat.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks, combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. G. C. Routley, Bright, Ont., writes: — "I take great pleasure in writing you of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For several weeks I was troubled with a severe cold, and a tickling in the throat. I tried numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I had heard so much about, and on taking one bottle got instant relief. I highly recommend it to those who need a quick cure."

So great has been the success of "Dr. Wood's" in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc., it is only natural that many imitations have been placed on the market. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Was Fined $50 in Division Court

A jury in the Division Court yesterday afternoon awarded Joseph Allen $50 and costs against Herb Doig for the loss of a dog, the death of which was the subject of a police court case against Mr. Doig under a charge a few weeks ago, of cruelty to animals. The evidence was repeated before Judge Huycke yesterday. Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. G. N. Gordon for Mr. Doig.

A Valuable Hint

Adjusting and fitting glasses should not be attempted by anyone unskilled.

It is not alone a question of good looks and comfort. Glasses to be right and helpful to the eyes must fit correctly, otherwise the eye muscles are subject to a continual strain, which most often results seriously.

We use every aid known to modern Optometry. Our lenses are ground correctly. Our Glasses fitted and adjusted so that the lenses are capable of fulfilling their duty without the handicaps of misfits and poor design.

An occasional examination of your eyes—and keeping your glasses in proper adjustment will aid greatly in keeping your eyes fit.

Northland Enquiry

but had nothing to do with the messing and berthing. He had been eight orderly officer on the fleet, making a round every two hours to see that all was correct below. On the 23rd he was the day orderly.

"Did you report anything on these occasions to Major Westmore?"

"I don't think so.

"If you saw foul conditions, bad ventilation etcs would it have been your duty to report?" asked his lordship.

"It would, I didn't see such conditions."

"No overcrowding?"

"Every man had a berth. I don't think I reported anything being out of order."

"Would the fact that you didn't report, though you might have found uncleanliness relieve other officers of the responsibility?"

The Deck Officer.

"We would act independently. The deck officer would be responsible for seeing that the quarters were made ready for inspection."

"On the 23rd he had made no written report. He had made one complaint and had it notified."

"If foul conditions were discovered he had power as orderly officer to call the non commissioned officer in charge of the deck to put on a fatigue party and clean things up."

"Complaints as to the shortage of food had been submitted to him to a [illegible] the attention of the chief steward called to it as the custodian was notified and had been told that if an orderly were sent to the galley more could be secured. He left it in the hands of the ship's Sergeant-Major and believes that after that everything was satisfactory."

"You didn't find out personally whether your order was carried out or not?" asked his lordship.

"No sir, I thought the Sergeant Major would have reported to me if it had not."

"It seems to me that it would have been better for you to ascertain whether the order was carried out or not. Otherwise there must always be a danger but such orders will be evaded?" remarked his lordship.

Food Shortage.

Witnesses attributed the shortage of food to the fact that on "X" deck the self service system was in vogue there. Pans were placed on the table and each man helped himself, some going short. "But there had been sufficient for all in the pans," said the lordship, "nobody would have gone short."

"We [illegible]ing from six orders when I was there and had good appetites."

"And some were a little greedy?"

"May be so."

"It was stated by one witness, Mr. Orde that the reason debarkation was held up for a day was to give the officers a chance to sober up. What have you to say about that?"

"I is very much surprised to see that statement," said witnesses seriously. "Liquor was barred to officers of all ranks and the civilians on board were all ladies and children. There was no drinking whatever."

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT NOW ADVOCATED THAT GIVES FINE RESULTS.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only makes matters worse. The best advice that we can give any sickly woman is to test out the following treatment.

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate coated Ferrozone Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run down, and in need of a strengthening, building up medicine.

Ferrozone aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood. This gives strength, vim, stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one that leads to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance—not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

[illegible] and tonic, a scalp-bringer and a body-builder, Ferrozone is unequalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself. Sold everywhere in 50 cent boxes, six boxes for $2.50, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Some Cream Applied In Nostrils Relieves Head Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and you head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely, because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Oh! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or strangling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

Runaway On Hunter Street

Two Boys Have a Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

Wesley John, a driver for J. R. Bell's grocery store, and Ralph MacGregor, son of Mr. Alex MacGregor, editor of the Review, had a narrow escape from serious injury last evening at five o'clock.

The boys were sitting in the sleigh at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets, when a dog jumped at the horse. The animal immediately took fright and bolted on Hunter street, turning north at Chambers street, where the sleigh skidded and striking an iron post, upset, throwing both the boys out. Only the fact that John's head struck MacGregor's stomach saved his life, as had he struck the pavement with the force he was thrown, he might have been killed. As it was both boys escaped serious injuries, outside of a shaking up. The driver quickly held the reins until the sleigh upset at Chambers street, when the horse broke away and proceeded north for half a block. Several witnesses who quickly gathered were confident the John boy was seriously injured.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., writes: "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter as when going out I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

LOCAL COMPANY MAY SHARE IN CONTRACT

The report from England of the placing of a contract with British Columbia lumbering interest for $40,000,000 worth of lumber for the European market has inspired the hope that some of this money may find its way to Peterborough in orders for saw-mill machinery to the Wm. Hamilton Company. The cutting of the millions of feet of lumber, it is believed, will require additional machinery, and Peterborough may share in the business. Of the saw-mill machinery manufactured by the local company a considerable part of it is for British Columbia mills, and with increased activity it is expected that the demand will be sharply affected.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SOUR, UPSET STOMACH

Eat One Tablet! Put Your Stomach in Order With Pape's Diapepsin.

No waiting! When food don't fit and you belch gas, acids and undigested food. When you feel indigestion, pain, lumps of distress in stomach, heartburn or headache. Here is instant relief.

ANAEMIA AND POOR BLOOD

How Mrs. Burnell's Daughter Recovered.

Dreweville, N. B. — "My daughter was anaemic, had poor blood and suffered from indigestion and bilious attacks. As Vinol had built up my son some time ago, I gave it to my daughter, she soon improved in health, and it has built her up and restored her health."—Mrs. N. Burnell.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mrs. Burnell's case is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonate and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weak, run-down system, make rich red blood and create appetite.

McDermid & Jury, E. T. Payne, and at the best drug store in every town and city in the country.

The Wanderer, a spectacle of the most compelling version of the famed Biblical parable of the Prodigal Son, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for an engagement of three nights commencing Monday evening, Jan. 13, with matinee on Wednesday.

It is produced by Elliott, Comstock and Gest, the most successful of America's theatrical firms, and is staged by David Belasco, the wizard of modern stage craft, both facts being an assurance that it is unsurpassed as a spectacle and dramatic offering. It is not alone in scenic investiture and costume perfection that "The Wanderer" excelled, when it made its first melodious sensation at the Manhattan Opera House, New York, where it ran [illegible] a capacity business for over a year. Belasco had looked over the entire field of American actors and actresses in order to secure the right person for each and every character.

The story is that of the Prodigal Son, only the father's house is in the "far country" and there the wasted his substance in riotous living. The characters of Judea, dressed in the beautiful costume and with flocks of sheep and goats, attended by the camels and their drivers are shown, and the gilded palaces of the dissolute of Jerusalem, where the Prodigal squanders away his fortune in gambling and dissipation, presents a series of spectacles such as have never been seen before on the dramatic stage.

The cast of more than one hundred people includes such well known artists as Frederick Lewis, Florence Auer, Richard Thornton, Olga Nowlan, Maud Montgomery, Henry Dunigan, Louise Orth, Francesca Kammenova, who leads the feature ballet of forty.

Seats for all performances may now be ordered by mail. The box office sale opens Friday morning at 10 a.m.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Whitby vs. Petes At Brock St. Rink

First Intermediate O.H.A. Game of the Season Will be Played To-morrow Night—Halpin, Rose and Other Favourite Players Will Be Seen in Action on the Peterboro Line-up.

The hockey season will open in Peterboro tomorrow night when the Whitby Military Hospital team will clash with the Peterboro team in an intermediate O.H.A. feature. The fact that ice was not available until a few days ago has been responsible for the absence of the usual hockey gossip but nevertheless the fans have been eagerly waiting for the opening of the season and they will be out in full force to see the Petes in action. The local team promises to be a strong one. Legros the good goalkeeper of the 247th team and Murray of last year's Juniors are both available for the nets. Grover Halpin home from overseas will be a tower of strength to the team and Laidlaw of the Royal Air Force will be a new face on the line-up. Ray Rose discharged from Military Service will also be in line and will play for his home city for the first time in several years. With Evans, Jackson and a number of others to select from the Petes will have a fast-working aggregation in line. Very little is known about the Whitby aggregation but the soldier team will undoubtedly be strong. It promises to be a lively battle all the way and with the two substiute rules working should be fast from start to finish. The Petes will appear before the fans in new outfits of red and white tomorrow night the old blue and white colours having been discarded.

At a meeting of the executive of the local club last night Mr. Jas. Skinner was elected secretary on account of the illness of Mr. J. P. Bond.

The Neill Trophy Games.

The games for the trophy presented by Mr. Robert Neill will begin on January 14th. Invitations have been sent to the following clubs Hastings, Keene, Norwood, Millbrook, Lakefield. It is expected that they will all be represented in this contest which will be staged for the first time next Tuesday. Only regularly scheduled rinks will be eligible and if substitutes are necessary they must be of the same rank. By this provision there will be no packing a rink full of skips and furthermore the new men of the local and outside clubs will be given a taste of trophy curling. It is hoped that the district clubs will be largely represented in order that the Neill trophy games will get away to a good start, and realize the aims for which the $100 silver cup was donated.

WAR WILL BE ABANDONED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The British government has decided to abandon the war against Russia, the Evening Star declared to-day.

Committee Appointed

Veterans to Get Club-house Proposition Down to Definite Basis.

At the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans Association held in the club rooms, George street, last night, a committee composed of President A. S. Morrison, Secretary S. Whatley and Capt. R. E. Layfield and C. R. Widdifield was appointed to go into the question of permanent quarters and to prepare a definite proposition along the line for submission to the city council, after it has been approved by the main body of the veterans.

At the request of the city council the veterans decided to turn out to take part in the reception to Hon. F. B. Carvell. The minister was to have been here to-morrow night but his visit has been postponed on account of illness.

The Veterans showed their interest in the Red Shield drive of the Salvation Army when Secretary Whatley and Comrade J. Kilbrick volunteered to act as team captains in the Army campaign.

Fourteen applications for admission into the membership of the G.W.V.A. were received and eleven were accepted, the other three being held over until the Dominion executive be consulted as to their eligibility.

THE ELECTIONS IN CAVAN TOWNSHIP

The personnel of the Cavan Township Council for 1919 is as follows:

Reeve—A. J. Henderson.
Deputy-Reeve—Harold Baptie.
Councillors—James L. McCamus, G. F. Clark and Harry Bland.

The reeve and deputy were re-elected by acclamation, but the contest for the Council yesterday attracted considerable interest.

Mr. Bland, of Mount Pleasant, is the only new member elected.

NO CONSTIPATION NO PILES

We think, without a doubt, that constipation is the most prevalent, and at the same time, one of the greatest troubles human nature is afflicted with, and causes more sickness than anything else.

Unless a free action of the bowels occurs at least once a day, constipation is sure to ensue, then comes the sore and uncomfortable piles, sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, obnoxious breath, sour stomach, heartburn, water brash, and many other ailments.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, thus removing the constipation and its allied troubles.

Mr. Dan Doucette, Eel River Crossing, N.B., writes: — "Having been troubled for years with constipation and trying everything I know of, a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I used four vials and am completely cured. I can gladly recommend them to anyone who suffers from constipation."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have been on the market for the past 25 years, and have been used with the best results by thousands of people in that time, and we have yet to hear of a complaint as to their curative powers.

Price 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THESE ATTRACTIVE HEALTH RESORTS ARE EASILY ACCESSIBLE

During the winter season may people plan, with advantage to health, a stay at one of the established sanitoriums where amid, ideal social conditions at a comfortable home-like high class hotel, the over-worked system may be re-invigorated and where treatment of proved efficiency for rheumatism and kindred ailments is available. Three of the most famous resorts of this character are reached by Grand Trunk lines, viz., St. Catharine's Well, Ontario, Mount Clemens, Mich., and Battle Creek, Mich. Medicinal waters, baths and expert treatment are features which attract patrons to the establishments at these points. Write for full information and booklets descriptive of these resorts, to-day, to any Grand Trunk agent or C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Prayer Service Last Evening

The opening service of the Week of Prayer was held in St. John's church last evening. The church, still decorated with flags and greens, was filled with an enthusiastic congregation.

A special responsive service was conducted by Canon Davidson, the congregation heartily joining in it and in the well-known hymns. Rev. Mr. Thomas read the lesson.

The subject running through the service was "The Great Brotherhood," and the Rev. J. A. Mackenzie discussed it in an able address, after which Rev. J. R. Webb spoke briefly, referring appreciatively to the beauty of the church and the welcome received.

All the ministers of Peterborough were present with one or two exceptions and after service they and their wives were entertained at the Rectory.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Canon Davidson left for Toronto, this morning and will be absent several days.

Mr. J. F. Davidson returned to Toronto this morning, where he will resume his course at Trinity College.

BRANDY WAS FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES

The "lady" who was reported in yesterday's police court case as having taken up the cause in the interest of Percy Holland and with that object in view secured a prescription of alcohol from Dr. Young, states that it was not alcohol but brandy which she secured from Dr. Young. This was obtained for her own personal use in a medicinal form but before it could be used for the purpose intended, was secured by Holland. Dr. Young stated that he never issues a prescription for alcohol and that the "lady" in question was one of his patients.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save four-fifths of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it really has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour it into a 16-oz bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

The Chicago corn market was very strong, activing evidently on the invisible supply statistics given out, showing a large decrease in corn visible, while wheat and oats gave an increase. Another bull feature was the announcement that all trading restrictions were now removed from corn which was expected to give a stimulus to an export movement. The local cash market continues very quiet, with scarcely any enquiry except in oats there being an enquiry for oats for export:

Why Can't I Get to Sleep?

Thousands of people all over the country ask this question but still continue to toss night after night on a sleepless bed and it is impossible for them to get a full night's refreshing sleep.

Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease, has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system that it cannot be quietened except by the pernicious use of opiates or narcotics. Or again, you have heart palpitation, and sensation of sinking, a feeling you are going to die, or perhaps you wake up in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and the only way that you can get relief is to sit up in bed.

To all who suffer in this way, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer an inestimable boon. They bring back the much needed night's rest by improving the tone of the nerves, strengthen the heart, enriching the blood and making the whole organization act in harmony—then you sleep as peaceful as a child.

Mrs. James Latimer, 39 Leinster St., St. John, N. B., writes: "At night I could not sleep. I had to sit up in bed, my heart beat so fast and when I walked up stairs I would get all out of breath. A friend recommended Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after using two boxes I can sleep all night, and am not out of breath after walking."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GIRLS, THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANRRUFF

Try this! Your hair gets wavy, glossy and abundant at once.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now for a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 50 cars with 664 cattle, 78 calves, 998 hogs and 623 sheep and lambs.

There was the usual Tuesday's high offering of fresh cattle and the market held firm and steady at the advance on butcher steers and heifers, and good butcher cows.

A very active demand for good feeding stock has developed and as usual when everybody wants them. There are comparatively few offering. The result is a sharp advance of from 50c to $1 for good quality feeders with some weight on, over prices a short time back, when the buyers neglected their opportunity.

There is not a very active enquiry just now for milch cows.

Lambs were strong and from 25c to 50c higher than the previous day.

The hog market appears stronger, with $18.25, fed and watered, the price bid, but few takers, the market generally going 25c higher.

American Soldiers Got Off Comparatively Well.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6. — Only about 100 soldiers of the American expeditionary forces in France have been made blind during the war, according to Major William T. Shoemaker who was in charge of the eye departments in all the American hospitals in England. Gas used during the war did cause much blindness, he said. It made the eyes very sore, but the essential parts were never impaired.

BETTER ROADS FOR PETERBORO COUNTY

Mr. G. A. Brethen Suggests That Time Is Opportune; That System and Proper Road Machinery Is the Great Need of the Present Day.

Editor Norwood Register:—

I believe the question of good roads for all seasons very important and I am pleased it is receiving through your paper the attention it deserves.

Referring to winter roads, while I commend the township councils for such action as they have already taken I believe they are warranted in going further in having, by financial inducement or otherwise, every fence along the highway replaced, if experience has shown it to be an obstacle to winter traffic. The saving in unnecessary work on roads often in the most severe weather and the increased profit and pleasure from teaming on roads hitherto almost impassable with drifts and pitch holes would amply repay the cost of applying the remedy at the very earliest moment.

In looking into the matter of better roads it seems to me the big obstacle to efficient roads is the absolute lack of road-making machinery. The Good Roads System provides one means of raising the money while opponents of this system advocate another. In either case unless the money expended upon our roads under different methods than has meen employed in the past we will have little to show for an increased expenditure.

The time dis-honored system of making roads in June, which the public invariably try to avoid for the balance of the season, is a method utterly indefensible and existing only as a relic of the good old days when road-making was an old boys' reunion not a business proposition.

In these days manual labor is too scarce and expensive to compete successfully with machinery. On our farms the hoe is largely replaced by the horse drawn cultivator, the flail by the threshing machine, the old straw cutter by the power driven machine and even the horse as a beast of burden is giving way in the rapid march of motor power machinery. In the towns the same transformation is taking place. By the introduction of up-to-date machines one man has now the efficiency of five, ten of the past. If the man on the farm, the manufacturer in the town, and in fact leaders in every industrial enterprise have found it profitable, yea, absolutely necessary to supplement man power with machinery why is not the same principle worth applying to the construction and maintenance of our roads? It is because the time of the farmer is valued so lightly that his representatives send him forth with a rake, a shovel and a hoe to do penance on the roads, or is it because the farmer himself in some cases is indifferent to bettering his roads in fear that some outsider should stray in and use them. In the latter case, we would suggest that we remember that practically every trip to town or elsewhere takes us upon roads of other municipalities, and it is not only right, but necessary, that we reciprocate in the privileges of our roads.

We believe in introduction of the road grader in this district marked an epoch in better road building. Had its use been followed in every instance by a dressing of gravel or broken stone followed immediately by the use of the road roller, we would have had roads upon which it would be an economy and a pleasure to drive from the day they were built, followed up at the proper intervals with the use of the comparatively inexpensive road drag, for which is claimed, the efficiency of 50 men working with hand tools and we have a road that will elimate 50% of the time of the men and teams now travelling upon it. This is a real saving. "Time is money more than ever before."

Right here some one objects to the purchasing and operating machinery mentioned. I would ask which is more wasteful and extravagant, to buy and use all the machinery and have a road or spend half the amount and have a sink-hole; or which is the more economical, to roll and pack our roads with a machine built for the purpose or spoil the job and wear out our vehicles trying to do it with buggy, wagon or auto tires?

While the purchase of above machinery under past conditions might prove somewhat of a burden to a single township, there to my mind is where the proposition of the Government fits in. They say, provided the county undertakes this work on a systematic basis, that is make a job of it, we will pay 40% of cost and maintenance of necessary road-making machinery and $40 for every $60 advanced by the county for the construction of a county road, and in addition pay $20 each year on every $80 expended by the county for up-keep.

In addition under the statute known as "roads within the suburban area," towns of over 10,000 inhabitants adjacent to such a road are assessable for the up-keep. Peterboro City's share of the maintenance of such a road,— not a foot of which would be within the city limits,—upon the basis of $14,000.00 assessment on a fair estimate would be in the neighborhood of $7,000.00 per year.

With such aid available for the construction and maintenance of a county road and for the purchase and operation of up-to-date road building machinery, which, I understand, would be available on adjoining roads also. It seems to me that the 30 or more counties in Ontario that have seen fit to adopt the Good Roads System have had good reasons for so doing and the Government is on safe ground when they refuse to grant substancial aid to any county that continues to sink money under the haphazard obsolete methods of the past.

Regarding some of the objections offered that the County Good Road System provides only for a county road and this would be benificial to only a small percentage of the people; also that such a road would be diverted to some pleasure resort or be extended to outlying districts for the personal advantage of certain individuals.

As the determination of the length of the road so constructed, the route it will take, the selection of the road superintendent, the option of adoption or withdrawal are all within the powers of our own County Council, we will have the voice as to where such road will run, its extent, etc., and I have sufficient faith in our county representatives to believe it will be built to give the greatest good to the greatest number, and that such accusations as the foregoing regarding the personal misuse of such road are simply bold attempts to substitute personal abuse for fair argument and stampede public opinion from the discussion of the issue at stake. While the county road will have the greatest opportunity for using same, but experience has always proven that the great bulk of the travel will follow the course of the best roads and hence all will benefit. Then as machinery will be available for use on all roads and money now expended on the road which will be taken over as a county road, can be diverted to the adjacent side roads and thereby the standard of all our roads materially raised.

I note with pleasure that the Peterboro County Council has appointed a deputation to interview the Minister at Toronto re the matter and I believe the time is opportune for a thorough discussion of this question and I would wish to be permitted to suggest that such discussion should be constructive rather than critical, that we may arrive at the best basis for action in bettering present conditions, and I think in a discussion of this issue, unaffected as it is by political rancor or prejudice, the tone of abuse that has been so very prevalent in all contributions of a certain individual in his handling of this question could well be dispensed with —"abuse is no argument."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the public interest you have displayed in bringing this very important matter before the public, and trusting it will be followed up in the very near future by the platform discussion suggested by a previous contributor, I remain,

Respectfully Yours,
G. A. Brethen.

THIS WOMAN SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, One of Thousands of Such Cases.

Black River Falls, Wis.—"As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation, I cannot say enough in praise of it. I suffered from organic troubles and my side hurt me so I could hardly be up from my bed, and I was unable to do my housework. I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINZER, Black River Falls, Wis.

It is just such experiences as that of Mrs. Binzer that has made this famous root and herb remedy a household word from ocean to ocean. Any woman who suffers from inflammation, ulceration, displacements, backache, nervousness, irregularities or "the blues" should not rest until she has given it a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. - THE WIFE -

BY JANE PHELPS

Mrs. Clayborne at Last Decides to Visit Ruth.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

All day Ruth thought of Brian's unappreciative remarks at the breakfast table. Often her eyes filled as she recalled the amost sneering tone in which he had belittled her work, and called her a "know-it-all sort of person. Then, too, she had constantly in her mind that question:

Where had he spent the time after his lesson? Was it with Mollie King? And if it was, why didn't he tell her frankly? She never nagged, never scolded him, regardless of what he had said. Perhaps if she would scold once in a while, talk to him about his duty to her—the duty he owed his wife—he might do differently. But no sooner had the thought arisen, than it was dismissed. Brian would not be criticized. She must find some other way. But there was one thing she might do—propose to meet him after his lesson and have a little supper at some gay, inexpensive place. It would do them both good to go out, in that way, twice a week. Perhaps things were getting a bit monotonous for Brian.

It came to Ruth that somewhere she had read that "A man will stand anything as long as he isn't bored." Was Brian becoming bored, and was that the reason he sought Mollie King? Mollie was bright, she was witty. Ruth acknowledged that in repartee she could not hold her own with the Greenwich Village girl. And then Mollie was so much more worldly wise. She knew her New York, and so many people whom Brian found interesting.

Yes, perhaps that was the trouble. Brian was bored. She must now find the solution. An antidote for Mollie King.

She did her work in an abstracted manner which caused Arthur Mandel to glance often in her direction. "Has her husband found fault with her for going to dinner with me?" he asked himself, and felt guilty, wondering if it were so and if he had caused her pain. He wished she would tell him. He couldn't fix his mind on his business while she looked so worried and anxious.

"Aren't you feeling well, Mrs. Hackett?" he finally could keep silent no longer. "I am sure you over-tired yourself yesterday."

"No, indeed I did not!" and I feel perfectly well. I am trying to solve a puzzling question, and probably that made me look as if I were tired."

"Is it about the business, may I ask?"

"Yes—it is business," she answered, salving her conscience by saying to herself that: "It WAS her business to keep her husband's love."

"Please do not look so anxious over it. If anything troubles you to that extent, take it to LaMonte or bring it to me."

"It's not as bad as that," she replied, wondering what Mandel would think, if he knew what it was over which she was worrying.

After this conversation, Ruth pulled her wandering thoughts back into line. She was a business woman. She must learn not to let anything, even Brian, to occupy her mind during the hours belonging to the firm. So for the rest of the day she was her natural busy, interested self; and Arthur Mandel smiled to think he had made such a mistake and could not help a throb of pleasure at the thought of the earnest, personel way in which she had regarded some business matter of his.

When Ruth reached home, she found a letter from her aunt, Mrs Clayborne. She had made up her mind to make her neice a short visit, and the letter announced she would arrive the following day.

"She's come around at last!" Ruth told old Rachel, "I knew she would forgive me. She's so sensible about everything else.

"Don' be too sure, honey, she's forgiv yo'. She's coming to see how yo' is livin' and ef yo' is happy. I knows her, I does."

"Now Mammy Rachel, don't y u try to spoil my happiness. I am so glad she is coming. I haven't anyone else to visit me, you know. I never had many folks."

"Yo' got ole Rachel, ain't yo'? An' yo' husband?" she added, but in a different voice.

"Yes, and what should I do without you," she hugged the woman who had been so much to her always; and ignored the part of her speech referring to Brian. She knew only too well, that her mammy's sharp eyes had detected her occasional unhappiness; and that she resented it. "But we mustn't talk! we must have everything lovely for her. I am so glad to-morrow is Friday. She won't get in until seven o'clock, so we can meet her, both of us—meaning Brian—and I will ask Mr. Mandel to let me off all day Saturday. Oh, Rachel, I so long to see her."

When Brian came in, a moment later, he was astonished to see Ruth whirling Rachel around the dining room, both of them laughing gayly.

"Here you two dancing Dervishes. Stop that racket and tell me what's up!" he exclaimed.

Many of the brave women who attend our wounded heroes in this war are women who have used Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, or who recommend it. The hospital, with its work and long hours, imposes extreme hardship on a woman's strength. Every woman should make herself fit for war's call at home or abroad. She should obtain a book called the "Medical Adviser," either at her nearest drug store or by sending 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont., for this book which tells about Nursing, Bandaging, Anatomy, Physiology, Marriage.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Sold by druggists in liquid or tablets. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg.

Chatham, Ont. — "I am very glad indeed to add my recommendation to the many others that have found relief in 'Favorite Prescription.' After motherhood I could not properly regain my strength. I was very weak and nervous, also had a terrible cough. I was very miserable when I began taking the 'Prescription.' I noticed a marked improvement before I had finished one bottle. I kept up its use and was completely cured of my cough and it built me up in a good healthy state. Favorite Prescription is one of the best tonics for women."—Mrs. Geo. Hill, 210 Wellington St. E.

CONSTANT PAIN AFTER EATING

The Tortures of Dyspepsia Corrected by "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. MARTIN'S, N.B.

"For two years, I suffered tortures from Severe Dyspepsia. I had constant pains after eating; pains down the sides and back; and horrible bitter stuff often came up in my mouth.

I tried doctors, but they did not help me. But as soon as I started taking 'Fruit-a-tives', I began to improve and this medicine, made of fruit juices, relieved me when everything else failed."

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

MAKE CONCRETE TILE

Well Cured and Properly Made Cement Tile Equal to Clay.

Strangles, an Infectious Disease of Colts May Be Controlled — The Cause, Symptoms and Treatment of This Serious Disease.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

TO make concrete tile satisfactorily many things must be taken into consideration. In the first place it is very necessary that the manufacturer have experience in the making of concrete tile; besides, it is essential to have good strong machinery, a good quality of sand and gravel, or crushed rock, first-class cement, material and cement thoroughly mixed, and a kiln where the tile may be steam cured.

Only strong, heavy and durable machinery should be used. With respect to material a good aggregate would be one part material, which would pass through a twenty-mesh sieve, and two parts, which would range from the previous size mentioned up to one-quarter inch stone. Only good sharp material should be used — one in which there is clay should be avoided. If this cannot be procured a sand washing machine will have to be added to the equipment of the plant.

Where a great many tile manufacturers make a mistake in the making of concrete tile is in the fact that they use too "lean" a mixture, that is not enough cement to the material. The proper mixture for first-class tile is one part cement to 2½ parts of crushed material, and in no case should the mix be more lean than one to three of a total aggregate, sufficient water being added to the mixture to make a gum consistency. When the tile are completed they should be placed in kilns where they may be steam cured and left there for a period of not less than 48 hours.

The kiln should be about six feet in height and of a width sufficient to allow the required number of trucks on which the tile have been placed to rest during the curing process.

The tile should be placed in the kiln not more than 1½ hours after it has been manufactured and kept there for 48 hours during the steaming process. After it has been cured it might be removed from the kiln and piled in the yard, and should have at least two weeks hardening before being again disturbed. Before the product of any tile plant is offered for sale samples should be tested either at the plant or sent to the Drainage Department at the O. A. C., Guelph, to be tested to see if it is of the proper strength.—W. R. Scott, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Strangles—Its Cause and Cure.

Strangles, commonly called "Colt Distemper," is an infectious, febrile, erruptive disease peculiar to horses, especially to colts or quite young horses, but those of all ages are liable to suffer. One attack does not render an animal immune from a second, but there are few cases in which an animal suffers the second time.

The disease appears in two forms, known as (a) Regular Strangles, (b) Irregular Strangles, often called "Bastard Strangles." As with all contagious or infectious diseases it is caused by a specific virus which is communicable from animal to animal by contact or surroundings, may be carried from a diseased to a healthy animal on the hands or clothes of the attendant, on pails, forks, harness, clothing, etc., and it is possible it may be carried considerable distances in the air.

Symptoms — When the abscesses form in the space between the arms of the lower jaw (called the maxillary space) the general health is often so little affected that nothing wrong is suspected until the abscesses break, but in most cases there is a dullness, more or less loss of appetite, increase of temperature, nasal discharge, at first watery, but soon becoming purulent, cough, often difficulty in swallowing. A tumor or tumors can be felt, and generally seen in the neighborhood of the head, usually in the space already referred to in the throat or higher up, just posterior to the lower jaw. In severe cases the patient becomes unable to swallow, the cough becomes very painful and breathing more or less labored and difficult; and he usually stands with his nose protruded, facing a supply of fresh air if at liberty.

Treatment.—In mild cases good care and comfortable quarters are all that is needed, other than flushing out the cavities of the abscesses three times daily with a five per cent. solution of one of the coal tar antiseptics or carbolic acid. In more acute cases in addition to the above it is good practice to steam the nostrils occasionally by holding the patient's head in steam escaping from a pot of boiling water, to which has been added a little carbolic acid. Feed and water out of a high manger, as he swallows with greater ease when head is elevated. Give the patient two to four drams of hyposulphite of soda (according to size) three times daily. Keep hot poultices to the throat, lance abscesses as soon as ready and treat as above. Feed on soft, easily swallowed and easily digested food. If he wont eat keep up his strength by giving new milk and raw eggs with an oz. of sweet spirits of nitre several times daily. Do not attempt to drench him. Give the powders out of a spool, placing them well back on the tongue. Give the liquids with a 2-oz syringe. If there be danger of suffocation, and the amateur cannot relieve it, a veterinarian should be sent for promptly. In cases of irrigular strangles the same treatment, less the local attention to the forming abscesses is all that an amateur, and, after all, that a veterinarian can do.

Preferred to Metal Pulleys

We guarantee immediate shipment of all orders for Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys from four inches up to six feet in diameter.

There is no telling how long you may have to wait for metal pulleys.

The United States Government won't allow steel to be released for their manufacture except for war orders.

Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys cost less to buy than metal pulleys, yet provide fifty per cent. greater returns in horsepower value, because their surface provides greater adhesion, consequently there is less belt slip; and because, being lighter and better balanced, there is less weight friction.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Better Way

By JESSIE ETHEL SHERWIN

She was a snowflake in the mire, a lily rooted on the rubbish heap, an ethereal being nurtured among people of the coarsest mold, with an environment distinctly of the slums and all the misery, want and ignorance that there unto appertained.

Claribel, they named her, and she had called old Jacob Roche "grandfather" as far back as she could remember. He allowed her to grow up like a weed.

To the children of the city grouped about the wretched settlement she had become champion, guide and leader. Somehow she had learned to read, and for doing some errands for an old book store proprietor she had been given a dozen tattered picture volumes and fairy stories, and after that she was educator and entertainer for her little ragged friends.

It was a matter of marvel and mystery for Claribel when, one day, her grandfather announced to her that they were about to part, and pointing to the little den of a closet where she slept, informed her there were some new clothes for her.

"Why have we got to part, grandfather, and am I to leave here for good?" she asked.

"And forever, and forget you ever knew me or Cassidy Corners, or that you were ever called Claribel. It isn't your name, it never was, and it will all be explained to you a little further on."

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

"Brother Feels Sick! He Wants a Candy Cascaret"

To Mothers! You will avoid worry and trouble by giving your children Cascarets instead of nasty Castor Oil, Calomel and Pills. Children look upon Cascarets as Candy and never refuse them even when sick, bilious, feverish, constipated. Besides Cascarets cost only 10 cents a box.

Nothing else works the bile, sour fermentations and poisons from a child's tender stomach, liver and bowels like good old harmless Cascarets. They never gripe, never injure, never disappoint the worried mother. Give Cascarets to children aged one year and upwards. Directions on each 10 cent box.

Never in her life had Claribel owned a pretty gown until now. Some feminine taste had selected gown, shoes, hat, ribbons, gloves, tasteful and appropriate. Even the eyes of old Jacob sparkled at her transformation as he placed about her neck a chain and locket.

"You must never lose that," he told her. "I found it on you when I picked you up on a doorstep."

"But why was I put on a doorstep, and why don't you tell me more about myself?" asked Claribel, but old Jacob simply added that she was going to a lady who would do all that when the right time came.

There ensued for Claribel a year of wonder and rare comfort. Old Jacob had taken her to a widow named Mrs. Dover. There Claribel found Dan Chesley, who claimed to be her brother, and whom she had often seen in close secret confab with old Jacob. The man was sinister looking, the woman Claribel disliked intuitively, but she was away at school most of the time.

It was when Claribel had learned to write that she sent a letter to a person she had known in her days of poverty. This was Stanley Dorr, a poor musician, a young man who had more than once played his violin for the little group Claribel had fostered. She had never forgotten him. He was poor like herself, and she had grown to like him. She directed the letter to his old lodgings, telling him of her new life but did not receive any answer.

Then one day through her presence in an adjoining room, unsuspected by Mrs. Dover and Chesley, she was enlightened as to the reason for her being with them. He whom she had called grandfather had died. When she left him he seemed to have mysteriously obtained large funds from some source and made life a continuous feast until it overcame him.

And now Claribel learned that her supposed grandfather knew no more of her parentage than herself. Chesley had formed a scheme to adapt Claribel to an imposture that would make her an heiress. A very wealthy man named Robert Dorr had quarreled with both of his children. The eldest, a daughter, had married against his will and he had banished her. She and her husband had died in the South, their child later in an orphan asylum, it was supposed.

The two specious schemers had hoped to foist Claribel on the old man as his granddaughter. They had secured certain belongings of the dead child, had framed up plausible evidence. They intended first to obtain a rich reward for the recovery of the child from Robert Dorr and later use Claribel to extort money from.

The moment Claribel had overheard all this she knew that Robert Dorr was the father of her musician friend, into her quick mind came a decision to cater to the fraud, and later—she had her plan, clever little counter plotter that she was!

The old man accepted her with eagerness and affection. Within a month she was his heart's delight. Gradually Claribel learned of the details of his senseless quarrel with his banished son. Through an agent she had Stanley Dorr hunted up. His father was stupefied one day to enter the library to find his son and Claribel awaiting him.

In a maze he listened to her confession, with a softening heart he realized his injustice to his son. Claribel had outwitted the human ghouls who counted on using her for their nefarious schemes.

"Take back your son, dear, dear grandfather," pleaded Claribel, "and I can go back to rags and poverty content and happy."

But it was not to be. She had woven a strong chain of love about the heart of Robert Dorr and he would not let her go. And as to Stanley, how could he help but love this noble, young girl, who had thought only of his welfare!

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How to Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.

Commenting on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder by over three million people annually, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and The Westchester County Hospital, said: "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

It may also transform a beautiful, sweet tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body something like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind.

For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable, and all "run down," while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy."

The accompanying article of Dr. Sullivan should be carefully read by every man and woman who wants to possess perfect health, great physical endurance and a strong, keen mentality. Dr. Sullivan tells how to increase the iron in our blood and thereby gain greater physical and mental power, brighter intellects and better health.

But in my opinion you can't make strong, vigorous, successful, sturdy iron men, and healthy, rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist on dosing themselves with metallic iron, simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron which is used by Dr. Sullivan and others with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by McDermid & Jury and other druggists.

How Nations Use Wheat.

France and Belgium consume more wheat per capita than any other country in the world, the former using an average of 8.80 bushels and the later 8.20 bushels. The United States averages 6.31 bushels, the United Kingdom 6.17 bushels. Austria-Hungary uses 4.60 bushels of wheat and three bushels of rye. Germany consumes an average of 3.38 bushels of wheat, but uses 6.40 bushels on an average of rye, and stands at the head of the rye-consuming countries.

The smallest consumption of wheat is in Japan, .52 bushel, and .85 bushel per capita. The Department of Agriculture of the United States has made this compilation and presents the average wheat crop of each country, compared with the average consumption of wheat and flour, in the following table:

Country.	Average yield, bu.	Consumption, bu.

Allied Engineers to Operate.

It is authoritatively stated in Tokio that the Chinese Eastern Railway and the Usuri Railway will be placed under the control of the Allied Transportation Conference. When this body is formally organized Lieut.-Gen. Takeuchi of Japan will be its president, and Mr. Stevens, the American engineer, who, with a large staff of assistants, has been in Vladivostok, will have active charge of the permanent way and rolling stock. A despatch from Pekin to the Japan Advertiser states that Mr. Stevens' selection is due to the recommendation of Mr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Minister at Washington. Mr. Stevens has with him more than two hundred expert railway engineers and a vast amount of railway materials, including fifty Baldwin locomotives not yet assembled and upwards of six hundred miles of American steel rails.

The Mystic Shriners.

The Ancient and Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine was founded 1,400 years ago at Mecca, Arabia. The modern order is of comparatively recent origin. It was founded at New York in 1871 by William J. Florence, the actor. It contains a legend as to Arabic origin and on its altars rest copies of the Bible and the Koran. The Mystic Shriners are an entirely separate organization from the Masonic order. However, one of the provisions of membership is that the applicant must be either a Scottish Rite Mason, that is to say, a Mason of the thirty-second degree, or a member of the order of Knights Templars.

C.P.R. to Take On All Workers Who Enlisted For War

Wounded Employees to be Given Posts Suited to Their Capabilities.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—The C.P.R. has not forgotten the promise it made to those of its employees who went to the front during the war. The company undertook to reserve the positions of any members of the permanent staff who joined for miliary service. The company is now arranging to implement that promise, as the following circular issued conjointly by Mr. A. D. MacTier, Vice President eastern lines, and Mr. D. C. Coleman Vice-President, western lines, will show.

"To heads of Deparments:

"At the outbreak of the war it was announced that the company would reserve their positions for any members of the permanent staff who joined the forces of Great Britain or Canada for active military service.

"The staff registrar is preparing lists of the company's employes who have been reported to him as coming under the above category for whom it may necessary to furnish employment when demobilized.

"These lists will be sent to you when complete but in the meantime it should be made known to all concerned that the company will, in accordance with its undertaking, provide employment for all these returning soldiers who, at the time of their enlistment, were filling permanent positions, or had been in the company's service for a period of over six months, and who apply for reemployment within three months of the date hey are discharged from miitary service.

"It is possible that a number of the men returning may be incapacitated for service in the occupation in which they were previously engaged, but in such cases we must make every endeavor to furnish work which their condition will enable them to perform."

OCEAN OF WHISKEY

Petition Says Winnipeg Physician Prescribes Too Freely

WINNIPEG, Jan. 6.—"Oceans of whiskey are being prescribed as medicine by certain physicians in Winnipeg," is the way the Pharmaceutical Association words its protest to the Attorney-General's Department by resolution urging that the Government limit the amount of whiskey that a physician can prescribe for any one person to eight ounces. The evil has become rampant throughout the city, the petition further asserts with vast quantities being brought and dispensed under the forms of legality.

ALMOST BLIND FROM HEADACHES.

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time. Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In nine cases out of ten, persistant headaches are due to poisoned blood, the blood being rendered impure through some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

The reason Burdock Blood Bitters makes permanent cures of all cases of headache, is because it starts the organs of elimination acting freely, and the poisons and impurities are carried off from the system, purified blood circulates in the brain cells, and instead of pains and aches there is revived mentality and bodily vigor.

Mrs. Geo. Monck, Arden, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with sick headaches, and at times would almost go blind, and have to go to bed. I tried different kinds of medicine without any benefit until I was advised to use Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking it, I have not been troubled since."

SOLDIERS HOME THE SALVATION ARMY COMING CAMPAIGN

Help Her to Help Them

Over There Over Here

THE BOYS WON'T ALL BE HOME FOR MONTHS YET!—The boys went away with your promise ringing in their ears: "We'll keep the Home fires burning till the boys come home." That meant until the last boy was home and settled in civilian life.

While fighting was going on you helped—and helped liberally—Red Cross, Comforts, Huts, Hostels, everything! But what of the months that must elapse before they are all back home and comfortably settled?

It is for YOU to say the word. Shall their comforts cease? Shall their splendid manhood suffer under relaxed discipline? Shall they have WHOLESOME recreation overseas, and over here? Shall they rest content in the knowledge that their families are being taken care of?

There is only one answer—A MILLION FOR THE BOYS WHO PUT IT OVER!

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL"

You will not deny the soldier his Salvation Army comforts—the Hostel is his HOME, his store, his entertainment, his church, his club! Shut him out and where will he go?

MOTHERS! You cannot go "over there" to mother your boys, to bake pies, mend their clothes and give them the hundred and one little comforts of home. But the Salvation Army Lassie is there. She is doing these things for you. Help Her to Help Them!

Ask the Boys Who Have Come Back

Ask any returned soldier about the Salvation Army. As one man said: "If you're hungry, they meet you with eggs and bacon; if you're mopish, they cheer you up with a song; if you're not doing the straight thing, they give you a rough time in their meeting; and if you are put out of action by a shell, they give you a ride in a motor 'bus."

We thank God the casualties have ceased. But there is much work to be done. The Salvation Army will see that even the boys that are sent to do garrison duty in occupied territory will not be out of touch with the comforts of life—if you say so.

Keep the boys smiling in France and Britain. Keep the chain of Hostels intact from Halifax to Vancouver until the last boy is home. Let the Salvation Army offer hospitality everywhere it is needed, during the repatriation of the soldiers. Do not let one man feel he is stranded without a friend after he has done his bit. Remember your pledge—"Till the boys come home"—All the boys.

"Give and it shall be given unto you—good measure"

Don't Prod Your Liver to Action

NR Overcomes Biliousness, Constipation, Sick Headache, Quickly. No Griping or Pain. Guaranteed.

The organs of digestion, assimilation and elimination—the stomach, liver and bowels—are closely allied, and the proper action of any of these organs is largely dependent upon the correct functioning of all the others.

"Whipping" your liver into action with calomel or forcing your bowels with irritating laxatives or strong cathartics is a great mistake. A better, safer plan is strengthening and toning the whole digestive and eliminative system with Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), which not only brings immediate relief, but genuine and lasting benefit. It acts on the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys, improves digestion and assimilation, overcomes biliousness, corrects constipation and quickly relieves sick headache.

Get your system thoroughly cleansed and purified for once; stomach, liver and bowels working together in vigorous harmony, and you will not have to take medicine every day—just take one NR Tablet occasionally to keep your system in good condition and always feel your best. Remember it is easier and cheaper to keep well than it is to get well.

Get a 25c box and try it with the understanding that it must give you greater relief and benefit than any bowel or liver medicine you ever used or no pay. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

A FAMOUS EXPRESSION.

How Strong Words Came to Be Spoken.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, signing himself with the initials A.E.S., says Wm. H. Vanderbilt never said "The public be damned," in the sense generally understood for the last 35 years. He writes as follows:

"Clarence Dresser (a fine young man, but temperamental to a degree), the Hyde Park correspondent of the Chicago Times in the early eighties, boarded Mr. Vanderbilt's private car at Grand Crossing, Ill., before seven o'clock in the morning and, pushing by the porter, forced his way into the stateroom where the magnate was dressing. The latter, naturally was much incensed and ordered the intruder out of the car.

"Dresser stood his ground and persisted in getting an interview. He wanted to know if the rumor was true that John Newell, H. B. Ledyard and J. H. Devereaux, general managers of the Lake Shore, Michigan Central and Bee Line, respectively, were to be promoted to the presidency, while the incumbents, Cornelius and W. K. Vanderbilt, would be raised to the chairmanship of the respective boards of directors.

"Mr. Vanderbilt wanted to know of what interest that would be to anybody, and Dresser replied that the public was much interested in official changes of that character.

"'The public be damned,' Mr. Vanderbilt blurted out, 'if you're a fair sample of the Chicago public. Young man, you have virtually broken into my private car, as an unseemly hour, to ask questions that could well wait until I reached my office, and I will tell you positively nothing. Tell your editor to send a gentleman to Newell's office in business hours and he will get all the facts when they are ready to be given out. Now, get out.'

"I was railroad editor of the Times, and Dresser told me of his experience. He was very sore and said he was going to get even by writing a scorching interview. He did so, putting an entirely unwarranted construction on the expression uttered under strong provocation."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatism twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With regards to Mr. Burnham's suggestion that labour representatives get in touch with ministers of the Government coming to Peterborough, I here publish the communication, with suggestions made to Mr. Burnham by myself on behalf of munitions workers, who so suddenly found themselves out of employment. The communication met with sympathetic consideration from Mr. Burnham, who forwarded it to the proper authorities, and the reply of the Government is here published:

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 16th, 1918.

J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.:

Sir,—The munition workers of Peterborough, Ont., desire to bring to your notice, our status, now that munition orders are being cancelled, etc.:—

There is a mistaken idea abroad, that munition workers earned colossal salaries, during the rush of munition manufacture, and that they at least can afford to be idle for months to come, and live in apparent luxury. This idea is only part truth, and is a brilliant idea for intellectually lazy diplomats, and employers, who viewed with alarm, the working man getting the true value of his labour. What are the facts? They are that approximately 50 per cent. of the munition workers did earn from $30 to $35 per week, (the word earn is not at all misplaced) and that the majority of these men attempted to realize, with their hard-earned money, an object, that is dear to the heart of every worker; to earn his house and home. They were keen; and were therefore, often exploited by real estate sharks, and now that munition works are closing down, it finds this supposed over-rich, overworked munition worker, in a worst condition, so far as ready money to live upon is concerned, than he was before the war. The keeping up of those payments: on his dearly cherished home is now a source of worry to him. Are the real estate sharks to rob the men (many of them physical wrecks) of that 600 or 1000 dollars invested in that home. Who blames the worker, for an attempt to raise his social condition. This is speaking, Sir, for the majority of the more ambitious of Canada's best citizens.

We therefore make a respectful appeal to the Government to push forward public work, with all dispatch, to relieve the immediate strain both mentally and financially. Peterborough is a good manufacturing centre, with the Canadian General Electric Co., also the De Laval dairy machinery producers, for government agricultural colleges. We also most respectfully submit that a minimum wage be established by Government consistent with the present high cost of living. This we understand has been adopted by the Government of Great Britain, our Motherland: it would help to relieve the social unrest that is creeping upon the people.

Also that eight hoursor even six hours if necessary be stipulated on all Government contracts for a day's work in order to help distribute the labour more equally. The above for immediate relief.

We also would suggest that in forming a National Industrial Policy for the Dominion, that Employers, Trades Unionists, and Departmental representatives be brought together, to hold a conference to consider the outlining of a definite policy, and the creation of machinery, to put that policy into effect. We believe that the majority of employers and employed want to find a path, leading to a good understanding. Working people are reading and thinking hard, and want to avoid anything which means disaster. We feel that if there is no better idea of central unity than we have now, both Capital and Labour will be at the mercy of extreme but capable leaders. By adopting this collective conference, for a business settlement of reconstruction; men would be there who understand not only the needs, but the possibilities of the loyalty of those, by whose efforts these needs can be met.

We are a young country, and not fearful of innovation. Do not let Capital and Labour miss this opportune time for getting together. Of course we realize the difficulties(and do not expect a whole clean up: but a better understanding is essential; if Canada is to escape the serious epidemic of social unrest that is now spreading over the various countries. We believe that Industrial Unity be worth the trial. It would only be right to have all the cards upon the table for the reconstruction of our prosperity, such as development of our national resources to the full State rendering all the assistance in its power to attain that object: and also put a ring fence around the German Industrial Pirate.

Yours respectfully,
THOMAS TOOMS,
Brownton P.O.,
Peterborough, Ont.

The Reply From Ottawa.

Ottawa, November 18, 1918.

Dear Sir,—

I am to acknowledge your letter addressed under date of the 15th instant to the Minister of Labour, enclosing a communication you have received from Mr. Thomas Tooms, of Brownton P.O., making certain representations on behalf of the munitions workers of Peterborough, and the situation which may arise from the cancellation of munitions orders, etc. In reply I am to state that the Minister has given careful attention to Mr. Tooms' remarks and has been specially interested in the suggestions made. The Minister has taken up with his colleagues the question of the steps to be taken to meet so far as possible the industrial emergencies which may arise from the close of the war, and there is good ground for the view that the co-operation of employers and workmen will be cordially extended to the Government in carrying Canada without disaster through the difficult period of reconstruction.

Yours truly,
J. A. ACLAND,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

J. J... ham, Esq., M.P.,
...rough, Ontario.

...is back in November, nothing more has so far shown itself. Some men have had to support their families for six weeks up to the present without employment, and some of those that were fortunate enough to secure work are getting the starvation wage of 25 cents an hour. About fifty more men were put on the unemployed list last week. I am looking after the men's intrests, who do not qualify for unions, for they consist of office clerks, salesmen, storekeepers, students working their way through, etc., and can vouch for the above mentioned condition of affairs and the other letters speak for themselves. If labour should take the opportunities presented, all should be united in urging despatch, in all undertakings also. If I am permitted I would like to make the suggestion to the Minister of Public Works, that he advocate a sum of money be laid by for distribution, among the different municipalities for the erection of monuments to commemorate Canada's part in the world's war, and our heroes. The amounts granted could be on a graded scale in accordance with the number of men supplied from the district. This would facilitate the municipalities, getting along with their own particular scheme, for War Veteran buildings, as well as a suitable monument, etc. Public opinion of every loyal Canadian, is that the fallen heroes should have these memorials and nothing could be too good for them. I ask what better place could be money come from, than from the prosperity of the State, which was brought about by the sacrifice of these heroes.

Look how nice a fine Victory Arch or City Gate consisting of two small arches over side walks, and one main arch over the road, at the entrance of Hunter Street bridge East City side, with the names of the Peterborough County and City heroes, inscribed in letters of gold, cut into the polished stone on the underneath side of the smaller arches, emplacements for war trophies could be put in it. Sculptored panels surmounted by a statue of Victory, the possibilities of an arch of this kind are innumerable. The City of Dublin, Ireland, has a nice arch similar to the one described in commemoration of the fallen heroes of the Boer War. It would be an everlasting memorial and could be used for state or public receptions as the city gate. (President Wilson's great honour was passing under a certain arch). The position suggested is for visitors to Peterborough could then see three of Peterborough's most remarkable structures. The single span of the bridge, the memorial or city gate, and lift lock, all on the one route. To obtain this we must put up the proposition, that the money come from the State that was defended and made secure by Canada's citizen soldier heroes. Say ten million dollars would help the different county towns or cities of each province. This would come in line with Public Works for the Reconstruction period.

T. TOOMS,
New Romaine St.,
Peterborough.

The Morning After The Big Night

The Wise Precaution of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After the Banquet Brings Pleasant Memories with the Morning Coffee.

If it hadn't been for Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets like as not I'd have a Headache this morning.

If you ever feel distressed after eating be sure to take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. For no matter what you eat there will be no gas, no sour risings, no lump in your throat, no biliousness, no dark brown taste in the morning. And should you now be troubled, eat a tablet as soon as possible and relief will come promptly. These tablets correct at once the faults of a weak or overworked stomach; they do the work while the stomach rests and recovers itself. Particularly effective are they for banqueters, and those whose environment brings them in contact with the rich food most apt to cause stomach derangement. Relief in these cases always brings the glad smile. Get a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, 50 cents, in any drug store. Be good to your stomach.

Demand For a League of Nations

A Resolution to This Effect Endorsed by Labour Men.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The British delegation to the International Socialist and Labour conference at Lausanne, Switzerland, will demand that the League of Nations be formed before peace is concluded with Germany, the United States was informed at Labour party headquarters here to-day.

A resolution to this effect will be transmitted to Peace Congress through the Labour members of the peace delegation, it was stated. All belligerents and neutrals who participated in the last Socialist Congress before the war, including the Central Powers and Russia, have been invited to attend an open conference which will open January 13. The conference will seek to reach an agreement on uniform International Labour policies, for the purpose of making fairer international commercial competition and thus lessening the causes for war.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of his old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

TELEGRAMS TO PALESTINE.

Communication Now Opened Up With Eastern Territory.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—The Chief Cable Censor announces that from now on telegrams both personal and commercial will be allowed to and from Palestine, Mesopotamia and the occupied parts of Syria. By the last expression may be understood those parts of Syria north of Palestine up to the Gulf of Alexandretta and extending from the coast to a line passing through Damascus, Baalbee Home Aleppo to Bagche.

A League of Nations Has Been Established Among Balkan States

This League Will be Known as the Balkan Confederation—Understanding Between Greeks and Serbs.

CASE OF BULGARIA

The Balkan situation is recognized as one of the most import to be taken up by the Peace Conference. The following interview is the first authoritative word from any of the peace delegates of the Balkan countries, and indicates that those nations have undertaken in a large measure to solve their own problems.

(By Henry Wood, Copyright 1919 by the United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The Balkans, which have been considered the world's greatest war menace—and where the spark that started the biggest war of all time was kindled—have anticipated a League of Nations by the establishment of a similar organization.

This league within a league, which was organized for the purpose of eliminating the Balkan war threat, will be known as the Balkan Confederation.

Foreign Minister Politis, head of the Greek peace delegation, who made these facts known to-day, said the Confederation would in no way interfere with the League of Nations. He declared it was a necessary arrangement for the handling of internal affairs of their paricular corner of the world.

Complete Understanding.

"Greece has reached a complete understanding with the Serbians, Roumanians, Jugo-Slavs and Czecho-Slovaks regarding future co-operation in the Balkns," Politis said.

"This will result eventually in the perfection of the Balkan Confederation, which has been a definite Greek policy since 1821, when it was the principal point in the programme for which Greece waged its war of independence. Later it was espoused by Statesman Krykoupis. Since 1910 it has been adopted and maintained by Premier Venizelos.

"The Confederation's position toward Bulgaria is the same as President Wilson's attitude toward Germany. A place awaits Bulgaria within the Confederation when she shows her repentance and fitness for it. The reason for Bulgaria's present exclusion are many.

First, she betrayed Krykoupis' federation plans to Turkey. Then she treacherously attacked Greece and Serbia in 1913, and Serbia in 1915. All of these things prevented the realization of Confederation heretofore. This attitude toward Bulgaria is not the policy of Venizelos alone, but of the entire Greek nation. Venizelos would not attempt to carry out this idea of initially excluding Bulgaria—and could not succeed anyway—without the people's support.

Enters Conference.

"Greece enters the peace conference without any apologies for her late entrance into the war. The time having arrived when secret diplomacy must be abolished, I can now venture to reveal that Venizelos was ready to do in 1915 what he did do in 1917, but the Allies informed him that Greece's entry at that time would be incompatible with their interests. Finally when Venizelos went to Salonika and established a government favourable to the Allies he did so without either the Allies' consent or support. The wisdom of this policy is demonstrated today in the successful establishment of the Balkan Federation.

"Greece is in the fullest accord with President Wilson's programme for the League of Natsions. She has attempted to contribute to this universal league by doing her part toward affecting perfect accord in the Balkans."

TAPPED SEWER PIPE TO SECURE WHISKEY

OTTAWA, Jan. 8. —Tapping a sewer pipe into which the Hull police were pouring several barrels of good whiskey, was a feat performed by two members of the Hull Fire Department. They got a coinsiderable quantity of it, but before they could make any use of it were caught by one of their superiors and afterwards discharged.

President and Premier Met

Great Interest is Attached to Meeting—Conflicting Views.

By Robert J. Bender.

(United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 8.— Premier Clemenceau and President Wilson were believed to-day to be approaching some understanding regarding their apparently conflicting views on balance of power and league of nations.

The two leaders certainly had an opportunity to exchange views on this matter as a result of their unexpected meeting late yesterday in offices of Colonel House.

Great interest is attached to this meeting as it was the first time Clemenceau and Wilson had met since the former's frank declaration in favour of retention of balance of power and the latter's simultaneous statement in Manchester that this ancient institution must give way to the League of Nations. American circles have all along held the opinion that the divergence in Clemenceau's and Wilson's views are more apparent than real, and that both were working towards the same end, only along different channels.

The meeting took place in the Hotel Crillon at dusk, the President walking from Murat Palace to the hotel in a drizzle of rain. He was accompanied by secret service men and was wholly unrecognized by the public. Clemenceau had gone to the hotel to see Colonel House. While the meeting was wholly unplanned, it is believed to have been anticipated by only a few hours scheduled conference between the two leaders.

General Harris Forced to Lower American Flag

Incident in Connection With the Riots in Berlin.

By John Graudens.

(United Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 8. — Rioters forced General Harris to haul down the American flag, which was raised over the Adlon Hotel to protect the Entente officials to-day.

Shooting in front of the hotel caused the Entente officials to seek refuge within. They suggested that that General Harris, head of the American mission, hoist the American flag as a measure of protection. When the flag was raised the crowd went wild and threatened to storm the Hotel unless it was lowered, which was finally done.

Scores of persons were killed in the rioting which resulted from a collision yesterday morning between rival processions of Spartacan and Government demonstrators. Motor cars armed with machine guns and manned by sailors, raced through the streets, shooting wildly. The fusilade could be heard throughout the city.

WANTED TO SEE BILL

Two Armed Automobiles Journeyed to Amerongen Castle—Burgomaster on the Job.

CARRIED RIFLES

(United Press Service.)

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—Two armed automobiles containing twelve persons arrived at Amerongen Castle last Sunday night, and a demand was made to see the former Kaiser immediately free, it was learned today. The burgomaster became suspicious and gave orders that the occupants of the automobiles be prevented from carrying out their demand. After some time the party and automobiles departed. One report circulated to-day was that the automobiles came from Germany and that it was a plot to aid Wilhelm to escape. Another report was that the altomobiles were United States army cars from Belgium and that the party consisted of newspaper correspondents, who wanted an interview.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The occupants of two automobiles who were prevented by the burgomaster from seeing the former Kaiser, were from headquarters of Leon Trotsky, the Minister of War and Marine, who has made himself dictator, according to a Moscow despatch. Troops were also stated to have been rushed from Amerongen to-day. The despatch said rifles were carried in one of the cars.

Prayer Service Well Attended

Third of Series Will be Held this Evening.

A large gathering attended the second service of the week of prayer held last night in Murray Street Baptist Church. The service was conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue. Rev. Mr. Mallot preached an inspiring sermon an "Answered Prayers". The third of the series will be held this evening in St. James Church.

An outstanding feature of the services is said to be the fact that for the first time in the hisory of Peterboro a clergyman from another denomination preached in the Church of England when on Monday evening Rev. A. J. MacKenzie gave an address on "The Great Brotherhood" in St. John's Church.

THE WEATHER

Last night's lowest temperature was but 30 degrees, barely freezing, and to-day the mercury is well above freezing. This is a decided and most agreeable change from the conditions prevailing last winter. The mild weather is good for several days yet, at least. It is believed by some that the weather, like other things, is prone at times to get into a rut, and follows the line of least resistance. Last winter the weather started off cold, got into a rut, and the same brand was handed out all the season. This winter mild weather has generally so far prevailed. While severe cold weather will without doubt, occur at times, the winter generally will not likely be a severe one. The theory looks plausible; we will see how it works out.—W. P.

SKIDMORE IS DEFEATED

Sympathy For Him Evidently Merely Opposition to Order-in-Council Rule.

STRATFORD, Jan. 7.—There are many reasons advanced for the defeat of Arthur Skidmore as public utility commissioner. In view of the recent apparent wave of sympathy for Skidmore during his confinement in jail it was expected that he would be elected, however, the interest taken by the people at that time was not so much a personal one as it was an expression of disapproval of the system of the Government by order-in-Council.

Skidmore took little part in the campaign, not even speaking at the public meeting. He polled a good vote in his own district, but fell down badly elsewhere. He was 287 behind Lowillow and 704 behind Mason.

Early Return From Siberia

Militia Department Asserts Canadian Troops May be Back Sooner—Unofficial Statement.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—Canadian soldiers who have been despatched to Siberia will be home again some time during the coming Spring, it is asserted at the Militia Departmen, and they may return sooner if the reported intention of the British Government to withdraw its troops from Siberia is carried on. No official announcement of the British Government's decision to recall the men it sent o Siberia has been received at th Militia Department. The Canadian Expedition, however, forms part of the British force there, and if the Briish soldiers are withdrawn, the Canadians will also be withdrawn.

The sending of Canadian soldiers, some of them drafted under the Military Service Act, to Siberia after the signing of the armistice, evoked some complaints in Canada and led to considerable correspondence by cable between the Canadian and British authorities. Inasmuch as Canada had given an undertaking that troops should be sent, it was decided that he expedition should proceed, with the understanding that all men should be released by November, 1919. It is now stated that the soldiers will be returned to Canada during the Spring if not sooner.

Funeral of Col. Roosevelt

LESS THAN FIVE HUNDRED PERSONS ATTENDED THE SERVICE.

OYSTER BAY, January 8. — Less than five hundred persons, nearly all of whom were relatives or fellow villagers of the great American, attended the funeral here to-day of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

In accordance with the desire of Roosevelt, the services at the house, the village Episcopal church, and the quiet graveyard, were simplicity itself. Many parts of the regular burial service were omitted by the Rector. His remarks were quiet, but eulogistic of Roosevelt's life and works.

VOLUNTEERS WILL REPLACE BRITISH TROOPS IN SIBERIA

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The British Government has not the slightest intention of sending any more troops to Russia, it was announced here. Not more than 20,000 British troops are in Russia to-day, a number of whom are non-combatant, the announcement states, and they are being brought back as quickly as possible. These will be replaced by volunteers.

HEMMING IS DEAD

Commander of This District Passed Away To-day—Flags Half Mast in Peterboro.

BRIEF ILLNESS

Canadian Press:

KINGSTON, Jan. 8—Major-Gen. T. D. R. Hemming, aged 56, commanding Military District Number 3, died here this morning after a brief illness. He had recently been promoted from Brigadier-General and was to retire shortly to be succeeded by Major-Gen. V. A. S. Williams.

The flags on public buildings in Peterborough, including the ramouries, have been lowered to half past.

Discipline Was Poor

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Major Westmore conducting officer on the Northland, testified at the investigation that discipline on his boat was poor. Only about seventy-five per cent. of the men would come to attention at command. He said this was due partly to the fact that many of the men were from forestry battalions, and also that the war was over and the men coming back.

Sinn Feiners Call Open Meeting

(Special to Examiner.)

DUBLIN, Jan. 8. — Twenty-nine Sinn Fein members of Parliament under the leadership of Count Plunkett, met yesterday and decided to call a constituent assembly inviting the members of all the Irish constituencies without regard to party, it was learned to-day. No date for holding the constituent assembly was fixed.

Letter From a Peterboro Soldier

Bandsman Baker is With the Salonica Forces.

Miss Margaret Hanlon, Aylmer Street, has received the following letter from her cousin, Bandsman Baker, of the Middlesex Regiment, in Salonika:

November 23rd, 1918.

Dear Cousin Margaret,—Your letter safely reached me, and of course I was extremely pleased to hear from you.

Of course we are now enjoying peace, and in a few months I hope to be again in England.

Two years in this country is very trying, as the weather is so different from that of England. Just now we are having a lot of rain.

Before the war I was a lawyer's clerk, but I am not sure as to what I shall do after demobilization. It is a pity we have to spend another Christmas out here, but we will make the best of it.

My brotrer Fred is an officer. His full address is Second Lieut. F. C. Baker, 21st East Kent, Castlebar, Ireland.

I expect to be out here about five months as far as I can tell. Our band is not playing just now, but will soon start I expect.

I should like you please if you would not mind to send me some writing paper as it is sometimes difficult to get out here.

I don't suppose this will reach you in time for Christmas, but I hope you will have a happy time.

Perhaps I may see you some day, anyway I hope so, and if not we must keep on writing.

Your affectionate Cousin,
George.

Several Clashes Between Government Forces and Spartacans in Berlin

MINISTERS ARRIVE FOR CONFERENCE

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino, of Italy and Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Minister Balfour, of Great Britain, are expected here soon to confer with Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon in the Peace Conference.

Conflicting Reports Come From the German Capital—Revolt Spreads to Other Parts.

SEVERAL HUNDRED KILLED

(United Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 8.—The Spartacans hav spurned the Government's proposal to arbitrate on condition that they disarm all their followers except soldiers and evacuate all public buildings and surrender Police President Eichorn, Berlin despatches reported to-day.

According to other reports the revolt has spread to Mannheim, where the Spartacans raided a Social Democrat meeting, smashed furniture and attempted to wreck the offices. The rioters were dispersed.

The Spartacans still control the post office and other government buildings and have frustrated the attempts of the government forces to retake the Spandau arsenal, according to reports from various sources. The Spartacans, it was said, have placed machine guns in the windows of buildings opposite the few newspaper offices they have been unable to seize and are preventing their publication.

Truce Declared.

Special to The Examiner:

BERNE, Jan. 8.— A truce has been declared between the government forces and the Liebknecht element, according to a despatch filed in Berlin yesterday and received to-day.

The despatch said the truce will continue while rival factions discuss the government's demands that the Spartacans evacuate all government buildings and surrender Police President Eichorn. The Spartacans will be represented at a conference by their parliamentary delegates, while Ebert's ministers will act as the government delegates. If the Spartacans refuse to accept conditions it was reported, the government will take severe repressive measures. Demobilization Minister Noske has been given full military power to carry out these measures.

Fighting Continues.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 8.—Fighting is continuing in Berlin, according to a despatch received from that city to-day by Frankcher Kurier, Spartacan troops commanded by Police President Richorn have seized the Royal stables, where mutinous sailors recently held out against government guards for several days. Other Spartacans are reported to have attacked the residence of Herr Ernst, who has been appointed by the government to succeed Richorn.

All available military forces will be employed to crush the Spartacus uprising in Berlin. The decision was reached at a joint conference of the Central Workmen's and Soldiers' Coun-

WILL STICK TOGETHER

Unionists Like Their Jobs So Well They Have Decided to Hang On.

(Special to Examiner.)

OTTAWA, January 8. — The Union Government members have decided to stick together for the period of reconstruction, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Following the declaration of the armistice, rumours of early defections from the government in its ranks were rife at the capital. It was freely stated for instance that Hon. Frank Carvell believed that his duty to the Union Government ceased with the war and that he would retire shortly from the Cabinet. It was further rumoured that Hon. T. A. Crerar, never fond of politics, would go back to his business in Winnipeg.

From present indications, it is not the intention of the Opposition to give the government any particular trouble at the coming session. The tactics of Sir Wilfrid Laurier apparently will consist of allowing opinion in the country to force issues on the government without he himself precipitating a crisis during the coming session at least. In fact it appears doubtful if even the tariff will become a controversial issue during the pending session.

SPECIAL MEETING OF LABOUR COUNCIL TO-NIGHT

At the special meeting of the Trades and Labour Council to-night, the nomination of officers for the new year will be held. As the result of the success of the Labour candidates in the municipal elections and also of the exhortations that the delegates from the unions attend regularly, the meetings of the Trades Council, it is expected that there will be few absentees.

It has been reported that a "bee" may be held on Saturday at Mr. Alex. Murray's residence to move his fence from its slight encroachment on the street line, and thereby meet the scrupulous objection to his assuming the place in the City Council to which he was elected.

Local labour men have been pleased by the election of the Labour municipal candidates in Ontario cities other than Peterborough. In Kingston and Hamilton especially their success was as marked as in this city.

The Most Wor., the Grand Master, has called a meeting of Grand Lodge at Peterborough, Friday, January 31st, for the purpose of dedicating the new Masonic Temple. A complimentary banquet to the Grand Master and Grand Lodge officers will be given at the Empress Hotel at 6.30.

The number of tickets for the banquet is limited.

All brethren desiring to be present should communicate with the Masters of Corinthian, Peterborough and Royal Arthur Lodges in order to secure reservation. Tickets $2.00.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8TH, 1919.

THE CANADIANS IN GERMANY.

The London Advertiser points out that one of the most gripping features of the whole war is the march of the conquerors into Germany, and remarks that the real story of the historic journey of the Canadian troops to the Rhine may never be told, unless it comes from the letters of the soldiers themselves. "Newspaper despatches are necessarily fragmentary and tinged with official terms," says the Advertizer, "and history will survey it from a calm distance."

The suggestion of our London contemporary is one that the Examiner is glad to second. Many Peterborough homes must be receiving letters from the loved ones with the Canadian Army Corps telling in simple language of the incidents of the trek from Mons to the Rhine. Many of these letters would give a vivid impression of the great journey into Germany, about which the public has heard very little. The Examiner will be glad to publish any such letters that may be sent in. They are documents that will grow in value from being published.

SEND THEM HOME.

"People of alien birth who have prospered in Canada and are willing to accept all the benefits of living in a democratic country have a strange way of showing their gratitude. The recent occurrences in Toronto where speeches endorsing the Bolshevik doctrine were loudly cheered by excited foreigners, are not appreciated by the great mass of Canadians. The gentry who wave the red flag and cheer at the slightest mention of Bolshevism should be invited to as soon as possible cross the Atlantic to a country where they may have an opportunity of enjoying the full advantages of the policy they are so eager to cheer. They are not wanted in this country and the sooner they are made aware of the fact that Canadians have been able to form their own opinions of the methods of the Bolsheviks, and are not in the least anxious to see their plans adopted on this side of the Atlantic, the better it will be for the country at large. Foreigners who are able to buy furlined coats and ride around in motor cars have no reason to attempt to spread anarchy in the land that has given them prosperity.

A MORAL TO BE LEARNED.

Peterborough's returned soldiers, who are shortly to ask for civic assistance in establishing permanent headquarters here, may be able to find a moral in the fate of the by-laws for a similar purpose that were submitted to the electors in Sault Ste. Marie, Belleville and Galt on Monday. In Sault Ste. Marie the Veterans asked that debentures be issued for the raising of $40,000 to provide permanent club rooms. The measure was backed by a strong organization of prominent citizens who publicly supported it, but when the by-law went to the people on Monday it was turned down by a large majority. On the other hand, in Belleville and Galt, where the amounts asked for were $10,000 and $15,000 respectively, the by-laws went triumphantly over the top. The ratepayers of Belleville and Galt are not any more patriotic than the electors of Sault Ste. Marie. The difference in the results is accounted for by the fact that the citizens of Sault Ste. Marie felt that the sum asked for was unreasonably large — that a much smaller amount would accomplish what was needed. It is probable that had the grants asked for been reversed in the cases of Sault Ste. Marie and Belleville, the results would also have been reversed.

However, the voting on these measures gives the local Veterans a chance to decide upon a policy that will commend itself to the ratepayers. All friends of the returned men will hope that they do not prejudice their claims by asking for something that will not appear reasonable. The sinking of many thousands of dollars into a huge building that will require a big sum every yar to maintain would not be complacently viewed by many taxpayers, judging from what happened in Sault Ste. Marie on Monday.

AFTER VERSAILLES.

The Allied nations can hardly expect to complete a guaranteed permanent peace during the few weeks that the Conference is in session at Versailles. It is by means of the proposed League of Free Nations that, in effect, a continuous peace conference may be carried on, adjusting to-day's general terms to the detailed developments of to-morrow.

The great war has transformed the whole face of the world, with the most momentous changes in Europe and the Near East. There is the gravest need, for immediate and practical service, of a super-national authority to organize the new democratic system. To leave the young nations to be created now in Europe at the mercy of Bolshevism or radical jealousies would be to set the stage for another tragedy.

The people of Canada are just as much concerned over the proper organization of Allied victory as are the people of Great Britain, France and Italy. The future that holds another threat for Europe menaces Canada. Canadians gave of their best in blood and treasure for a better world, established safety for future generations and there can be no realization of this ideal unless we take a part in setting up the machinery calculated to finish the work begun by the men who fell in battle and the women who sent them to fight.

The responsibility rests upon all the peoples which fought for democracy. The question of Germany's deserts is not involved. Germany would require closer watching without the league than with it. But the very existence of an organization built to keep the peace would discourage ruthless ambition in any quarter. The Allied peoples would be invited to perpetuate the happy relations growing out of their successful contest with Prussianism.

The policy of President Wilson forms a rallying point for the nations in this matter because the United States, a newcomer in European councils, substantially lacks association with historic grievances and, being both wealthy and content as to territory, wears a distinct badge of impartiality. The ovations tendered President Wilson in Great Britain, France and Italy utter that shrewd statesman's most telling argument for the League of Free Nations. No skeptical Old World leader can afford to overlook it. The masses of Europe are tired of war and, unless orthodox Democracy has an alternative plan to offer, there are ominous possibilities in the growth of unrest now noted abroad.

For every purpose of restoring economic strength and political stability to-day and in the future the League of Free Nations is required. Only the triumph of Democracy has made the idea practical, but that triumph also has made the organization necessary.—Montreal Star.

The weather man continues to shine as a fuel controller.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

In congratulating Mr. T. F. Matthews on his election for the seventeenth consecutive year as chairman of the Utilities Commission, The Examiner feels that the citizens are also to be congratulated upon the appointment. In his long term of office Mr. Matthews has done splendid service for the city, and Peterboro is fortunate that a man of his business ability, energy and acumen has been available during all these years to act as the head of such an important municipal body as the Utilities Commission. To be elected to the position for seventeen years, without a break, is a remarkable record, and may be considered as a recognition by the citizens generally, and by Mr. Matthews' fellow commissioners, of the efficient and faithful manner in which the duties of the office have been discharged.

DRINKING POISON.

The death of a Peterboro man from drinking wood alcohol and similar fatalities all over Canada from the same cause, shows the need of of greater precautions in the handling of this deadly poison. A coroner's jury, which inquired into the circumstances surrounding the death of of the local victim, recommended that restrictions be placed on th sale of wood alcohol. The latter is of course widely used for commercial purposes, and the question of restricting its use is on that account a difficult one. Some way, however, must be devised to impress upon the public that wood alcohol when taken internally is a most dangerous poison. Labelling the bottle does not seem to accomplish this result, and the sugestion of Mr. Moncur that the name should be changed, and the word alcohol eliminated, might be tried. Many persons confuse the wood alcohol with the grain product and may possibly be the victims of the idea that it is for use as a beverage on this account.

The government should consider this whole question thoroughly. Deaths from using Columbian alcohol are increasing and some action is necessary at once.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Berlin is not escaping the horrors of war after all. If the revolution gets into full swing the Germans may be able to clearly comprehend what the Belgians had to endure.

A temperance advocate claims that North Monaghan shouwed its adhecence to the temperance cause by rejecting Rye, but on the other hand the electors chose a McIntosh, which is usually a signal for a wet spell.

The Bodsheviks are said to be preparing to spend a half million dollars on propaganda work in the United States. The Germans spent a lot of money in the same way that did not bring results.

Voice of the People

To the Edicor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read carefully Mr. Burnham's suggestions for the benefit of labour. It is very good business for him to try to bring Capital and Labour together seeing that he represents a Party that is an apostle of Capital, and has always been, since Sir John Maclonald left the stage, tied up to the Manufacturers, the Trust Companies, and big interests generally. Mr. Burnham then invites the labour men to interview Mr. Carvell, the Minister of Railways and Canals, when he comes to-morrow, and Mr. Burnham who has endorsed Mr. Carvell, is apparently using him as a part of his campaign for re-election. Labour men and workers generally should not forget that Mr. Carvell was the member of the Cabinet who advocated and urged the importation of Chinese Labour.

Chinese Labour has been the cheapest, the poorest, and the most unsatisfactory labour from the standpoint of building up a country, that there is. Chinese Labour is the kind of Labour that works for the lowest wage, spends only sufficient to keep body and soul together, and then sends the money back to China.

Has Mr. Burnham tried to discourage Chinese immigration by refusing to patronize Chinese places of business?

There is just one thing that organized labour believes in more than all others, and that is loyalty to the British flag, and making this country a country for those of British origin to live, work and die in, and not spend their lifetimes making it a favourite hunting ground for aliens, whose interests are ever in their own native lands.

Until Mr. Carvell and Mr. Burnham show interest in labour and the cause of the toiler, not prompted just at election time, the workman will hesitate to take Mr. Carvell's and Mr. Burnham's advice. Mr. Burnham saw the big vote that organized labour received on New Year's Day here, showing the confidence of the people in their cause, and this has brought to him the knowledge that organized labour stands for real principles, and has numerous hearty supporters.

Yours truly,
MOULDER.

Ford Cars None Too Plentiful; Present Stocks Running Short; The Demand is Increasing

"It seems practically certain now that the demand for Ford cars this year will far exceed the output."

With these words Mr. J. J. Duffus of the Duffus Garage, replied to an enquiry as to the prospects of the motor cars business for 1919. He also added:— "That it is equally obvious tha unless the prospective buyer acts reasonably soon, he may find it a difficult matter to obtain the car he wants."

Every passing year has seen Canadian made Ford cars increase in demand by the thousands, because under almost every conceivable condition this car has proved itself a splendid all-round utility. It has sold on its record for dependable and economical performance, not on the rosy promises of salesmen or its makers With the great Ford factory at Ford Ontario, as its base, there has been a Ford Service Station everywhere the roads will carry you from coast to coast.

The difficulties involved in obtaining the large amount of material required by the Ford Motor Co., of Canada, and to transport this material to its factories, cannot be told in this article. It is a well known fact, too, that many of the Ford dealers, of which Mr. J. J. Duffus is a notable example, have sold from 25% to 50% more cars than called for by their contracts, over-selling their estimates almost year after year. So that when one begins to estimate for the now contract season, the volume of the domestic demand and supply alone becomes difficult to handle.

Should the present schedule of curtailment of Ford car production go through a very considerable re-arrangement of business methods by the dealers may be found imperative. There is no indication how long this rate of curtailment will prevail, the official understanding being that it will be subject to future conditions in the steel industry.

To make up for the possible shortage in Ford cars, Mr. Duffus has secured the sales agency for both the Gray-Dort and Dodge Brothers cars. These cars are favorite marchines, being included in the medium priced cars, and are sure to be good running mates for the Ford. Supplies of both these care are not likely to be so difficult to procure, so that buyers can have the choice of three different medium priced automobiles in the standard class of motors. The Gray Dort "has the real stuff in it"—a tribute paid to this popular car by some of its users. The Dodge is known to be a car of external beauty, real value, strength, comfort and energy.

Mr. Duffus also intends to do a good deal of "speeding up" with trucks. The Ford One-Ton Truck and the Smith Farm-a-Truck are both going to "go strong", because people are beginning to realize how much golden time is wasted by the old fashioned methods of getting products to the markets, commercial hauling, etc.

A strong feature in the new garage will be the well-equipped facilities for carrying large stocks of motor car accessories and supplies, to be handled wholesale and retail.

Mr. Duffus stated that he is now in a position to meet the allround diversified requirements of motorists.

Although this mamoth new garage is still undergoing some of its finishing touches for the perfecting of its up to date labor-saving features, this will not be allowed to interfere with "business as usual" at the Duffus

LENINE ARRESTED; TROTSKY DICTATOR

Trotsky takes Reins of Government —Quarrel over the Future Policy —"Reds' are still in control.

(Canadian Press.)

COPENHAGEN, January 8. Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier of Russia, has been arrested at the command of Leon Trotsky, the Minister of War and Marine, who has made himself dictator, according to a Moscow despatch. Trotsky was phompted to make the arest because of a difference of opinion with Lenine concerning Bolshevik reforms.

The despatch states that Lenine desired to effect a coalition with Mensheviki ,or the Moderates, while Trotzky wished to continue the reign of the red terror.

Letter From Lieut. Hatton

Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, received mail from two of his sons now in Germany.

As no press notices have been considered necessary to record the progress of our sons on this "world record" march, and it would appear that to date, at any rate, mail service has been of no importance to the government "now that the war is over," it is a great relief to know that a month or six weeks ago, the boys were able to "keep on."

The Letter.

Dec. 4th—Still in Belgium—do up to 30 kilo's (8 kilo's to 5 miles) average 20 kilos—a couple of hikes 30 and 33. So far I came over 260 kilos up and down the hills—in fact all the hills through the Ardenes. You remember, and the Ardennes waves above us her green leaves, dewy with nature's dew drops," as we pass. Little did I think, when at the Collegiate, I would experience the very life of the picture so poetically presented. I notice nothing was mentioned about mud, plain common mud, "the poet's license." I suppose some of the hills are over a mile long—are marching with full packs the whole way—have a good billet to-night. Wet through the last three days—billets old barns only 8½ kilos from the border—expect therefore to-morrow night "to sit around a nice fire." "Somewhere in Germany."

Expected a day off, had my laundry out and in the tub—got word to go, and have been wearing pyjamas for some days. This march is hard on shoe leather. Some of the boys have gone through three pair, and I am on my third pair. We will all be glad when the march is finished, and canteens, Y.M.C.A.'s baths, etc., opened to us. A "touch" of civilization.

Saw Frank Patterson moving out just as we were, had to pull to the side of the road to let his outfit pass —looks fit. We go forward with advanced guards, place our outposts out and so on, but our headquarters is mostly a long way in advance now Some change.

Send a postcard photo of one of my chums, second from right, Capt. Morrow of Peterborough. Enlisted as a private, M. C. and bars, M. C. at Amiens this summer, anad bars at Upon Wood.

Lieut. Davies was in nearly every scrap the Battalion was in. A private at Ypres, a sergeant on the Somme—he was of the original 4th—and is still going strong.

Lieut. McLean got his M. C. at Upton Woods. Came to France as a captain, reverted to lieutenant.

Capt. Lawrence, killed Oct. 1st last, wounded three times.

Lieut. Gillham, his brother, lived with Walford at Simcoe.

Lieut. Powell, wounded three times.

Music & Drama

TURN TO THE RIGHT.

It is a long time since a Peterborough audience has had as many opportunities to laugh as there were afforded in the presentation of Winchell Smith's splendid comedy, "Turn to the Right" at the Grand last night, and it must be admitted that they took full advantage of the chance. From start to finish there was not a dull moment, and the big audience enjoyed the production as few offerings have been appreciated, judging by the unrestrained laughter that punctuated the performance. "Turn to the Right" tells the story of Joe Bascom, a country boy, who run away from home, and after getting into trouble and eventually into prison, returns to his mother, determined to live a better life. By a coincidence common in plays, but rather unusual in real life, two of his former "pals," two most amusing and loveable crooks, turn up at Joe's home. The village Shylock is just about to turn the mother out of her home when the trio get busy and save the situation in a most hilarious fashion that must be seen to be appreciated. The two former criminals succumb to the influence of Mother Bascom and remodel their lives. Gain wealth through the exploitation of Mrs. Bascom's jam, and everything ends happily. This is the outline of the story, but it is impossible in an article of this nature to picture the wealth of good things to be found in the play.

It was most capably acted by a large and well-balanced cast. Howard Smith and Allen Mathes were most amusing as the two crooks and Joseph striker made the part of Joe Bascom convincing and realistic. Mat Thompson scored heavily in the "Fatty Arbuckie" part of Sam Martin, and Pacie Ripple, who will be remembered by his fine work as the butler in "The Brat" last season, was effectively cast as Deacon Tillinger. Ethel Strickland was a most successful Mrs. Bascom, and the other parts were excellently handled. The scenic accessories were all that could be desired, and the realistic nature of the last scene impressed the audience.

Demand Rapid Demobilization

Soldiers Make a Demonstration Near the War Office—Were Re-assured by Officials.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 8.— Soldiers objecting to delay in the demobilization of the British armies, engaged in further demonstrations to-day. The vicinity of the War Office was invaded by lorries filled with men and by marching soldiers. They came from Shoreham camp. Many of them were on leave from Salonika and objected to being sent back. On the sides of the lorries were signs reading, "Get a Move On. We Won the War." "Give Us Our Tickets," "Get On With It Lloyd George," and other similar sentiments. The men were generally well behaved and treated matters reasonably, although they refused to disperse until a deputation of officials assured them that Viscount Milner and General Robertson were adjusting their grievances.

Mr. B. L. McLean is Mayor of Lindsay

LINDSAY, Jan. 8.—In a contest which was slow and listless at the outset, but which waxed warm during the closing stages, Mr. B. L. McLean defeated Mr. G. H. M. Baker for the office of mayor by the small margin of 26. Th vote was small.

Bell Telephone Company's Case

Claim Based on Fifty Per Cent. Wage Increase.

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Basing its claim chiefly on matters of fifty per cent. increases in wages, the Bell Telephone Company this morning opened its case for twenty per cent. increases in exchange fee before the Dominion Railway Commission to-day. Chairman Drayton said that the Commission would sit at Toronto on January 13th and Montreal on the 16th, to hear arguments against the proposed increase.

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Guaranteed to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symtoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright, and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

It is sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterborough and most all good druggists.

CAUTION — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

NORDHEIMER Or STEINWAY

Wherever one or more master musicians gather in the practice of their art there will be found in most unique events, either the Nordheimer or the Steinway Piano as a fitting complement to the occasion. This preference is so general that it speaks volumes for the supremacy of the NORDHEIMER and the STEINWAY.

Evidence Failed to Show That Wood Alcohol Caused Death

Coroner's Jury Brought in a Verdict of Death From Natural Causes in the Case of Late Pte. Walter Irwin.

The outstanding feature of the inquest held last night in the police court chamber, was the entire lack of evidence to show that Walter Irwin came to his death by drinking wood alcohol or any other beverage, although it was shown that Irwin had purchased a 50c. bottle of Columbian spirits from Emmet Faux on the evening of Saturday, December 28. Faux, according to his own evidence, and confirmed by the druggist, bought the spirits from the Moncur drug store the same evening. The jury accordingly brought in a verdict of death from natural causes.

A Pathetic Figure.

Mrs. Gray, the mother of Irwin, was a pathetic figure as she told of the scene at the bedside of her son immediately preceding his death. Nothing in the house was found to prove that Irwin was drinking, although a little cough medicine was found on the bureau in Irwin's bedroom. This plainly had never been opened. All day Sunday (December 29) Irwin complained to his mother of not feeling well and said that he had a pain in the back of his eye. He rose Monday morning, but in a few minutes went back to bed again. He complained of pains in different parts of his body, which his mother rubbed. When she became aware of the serious condition of her son, she told him to pray.

"Oh pray, Walter, for I am afraid that you are going to leave me."

"I have, mother," was the feeble reply.

"You may think that I have been drinking, but I haven't been," were his last words.

Met Deceased.

Emmet Faux, the second witness, looking much better than the night previous, stuck to his story that he met Irwin by accident on Saturday night at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, and that Irwin asked him if he had any liquor?

"No, I haven't."

"Do you know where I can get some?" asked Irwin.

"No," answered Faux, but I know where to get Columbian spirits. Bourgan told me about it."

Irwin reached in his pocket and handed Faux 50c. and both walked up George street to a drug store. When Irwin came out with the bottle and he saw the poison label on it he said that it was not poison as they had used it in the west.

"They get it out of pulpwood," said Irwin.

Faux never saw Irwin alive again.

Was Delirious.

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, who was called by Mrs. Gray to attend to her son, stated that he had been called by Mrs. Gray about nine o'clock Monday morning and reached the bedside of Irwin 20 minutes later. Irwin was unconscious and delirious, and apparently suffering an agony of pain, and he was waving his arms about, and the doctor concluded that his condition was due to a distended bladder. He saw no evidences that Irwin had been drinking. Taken to the hospital in a state of clammy perspiration, he breathed his last just as he was laid in bed. The doctor said that he could not give a certificate as to the cause of death because no port-mortem had been held.

Asked by the Crown Attorney what kind of a poison Columbian spirits was, the doctor said that diluting does not lessen its poisonous effects. Mrs. Gray told him that Walter Irwin, just before his death, complained of seeing red and seeing with difficulty.

Menthylated alcohol is known to cause blindness," concluded the doctor.

AIRDROME STORMED

Polish Troops Capture German Garrison and Planes

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6.—The airdrome at Lawica near the city of Posen, was stormed on Sunday by Polish troops. According to a despatch from Posen the German garrison and all the airplanes were captured after a fight.

IN THE LAST DAYS OF FIGHTING

In a letter home, a Canadian soldier gives some very interesting touches of the final days of the war. The letter, written in Belgium on November 15, was in part as follows:

Well, the war is all over for the present anyway, and I think the whole world is thankful. We finished the last day of fighting slightly south of a place which was mentioned in 1914 in connection with a famous retreat (Mons). We were in a hot encounter with the Prussian Guards and drove them back all day. In the night they beat it and we haven't seen anything of them since. We had a number of casualties and it does seem a pity that men were killed and wounded on the last day of fighting. I have been lucky and have come through without a scratch. One house that we drove the Huns out of was owned by quite a prosperous farmer and as soon as we occupied it he went out in the yard and dug up some pre-war wine and gave us all a drink. He also handed out coffee and bread to us and I tell you it was welcome.

Yesterday we buried our dead and had a very impressive ceremony. All the Belgian church officials took part and the civilian population turned out en masse. The Belgian people also dug up their band instruments and followed us playing a Dead March. The Belgians literally covered the graves with beautiful floral decorations, and one of them made an excellent speech in English and assured us that we could go home and tell the relatives of the dear Canadians of the 19th Battalion who died to save their homes that their graves would always be cared for and that they would pray for the departed souls.

I will never forget the last few days of the war. We were marching through Belgium with our brass and pipe bands going, and the Hun going so fast that we couldn't get in touch with him. The whole country seems to be one continuous village, and everywhere we went the people came out and fell on our necks and gave us hot coffee and oatmeal cakes and took all our badges for souvenirs. When we halted in the square of quite a large town near the French border and the band struck up the Marseillaise the crowd simply went wild. They sang, cheered, threw up their caps, danced, and did everything imaginable. As we passed along, old women from 60 to 90 kicked up their heels and danced like two-year-olds. It was funny to see them in their wooden shoes.

We leave here on Sunday for a thirty days' march into Germany, where we will do garrison duty until about the end of April, when I expect they will send us back home.

PHASES OF AN AIRMAN'S LIFE

("Going Overseas," by a R. A. F. Officer).

Three hours ago orders for a pilot and machine to replace a casualty in a certain British squadron overseas had been telegraphed down to the training wing. Attendance at the orderly room followed by a note from the Mess President settled that I was to fill the bill. Jock, the best of Batmen, stayed behind to pack my kit and see it off by train, while I stowed away a few necessaries in a brand new single-seater English Scout.

Equipped with maps and tips from pals who had crossed by air before, I was soon circling over the town of Blank, looking for the last aerodrome this side of the Channel which divides us from the war. Blank is distinguished in service gossip as the place where a rather famous stunt pilot, ferrying a machine to France, landed on the lawn in front of the principal hotel, and over the 'phone reported his arrival to the Base Aerodrome with the remark that he "couldn't find the aerodrome, so landed here!"

From twelve thousand feet the long white open-ended sausage streaming out from one corner of the line of camouflaged hangers was barely visible. Some smoke from a factory stack gave a better indication of the direction of the ground wind against which I should have to land.

No words can describe the five minutes' thrill of a glide at eighty miles an hour down miles of rushing wind, the whistle of the rigging and throb of the propellor a guide to the slightest change of speed. At two thousand, the engine is switched on again for a better look round and to mark the landing tee, while the blood gets a chance to respond to the different air pressure nearer the ground.

Landing on a strange aerodrome sets a pilot on his nettle. Many pitfalls await the over hasty flier; telegraph wires—invisible up aloft—wet patches and changing winds. One's efforts may be witnessed by mechanics with aspirations to aviation brevet rank, or critics of such matters who are met soon afterwards in the mess. This first impression, good or bad, everlastingly classifies a pilot in a fellow-officer's thoughts.

Two mechanics rush across the aerodrome to hang on to the rear struts while I taxi into the shed. The orderly officer strolls up with a friend of the days when I was an observer in his squadron in France. He is doing ferry pilot as a rest from six months' active service.

"Too late to cross to-day old thing; I'm taking a mechanic over to-morrow. You can get your bearings from the aerodrome the other side." A chance not to be missed.

What a change from the tedious entraining and embarking of the mortals who do not fly!

Calendars Are Scarce This Year

High Price of Inks, Paper and Labour is Given for the Dearth.

Who has tampered with the spout that flooded the business offices and homes of Peterborough each new year with colourful conglomeration of calendars? This question is being asked and several answers have been given.

Usually the walls of the business establishments and homes are covered at this time of year with calendars. They ranged in size from that of a dwarfed Christmas card to a panel sufficiently large to cover the place where the roof leaked in the storms last September. This year but few specimens have put in an appearance thus far. Insurance firms, grocers, and a few others have ventured forth with calendars but the flood is more like a trickle this year.

The high price of inks, paper and labour is given as one of the reasons for the dearth of complimentary calendars. The increased postage is also given as a factor in the new order of things.

AVIATOR IS ARRESTED FOR TELLING RECORD

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Capt. Lang, the aviator who on Thrusday last established a new airplane altitude record of 30,500 feet, has been placed under arrest by the British army authorities, acording to the Evening News today. The captain was arrested, it is said, because of his disclosing without authorization, the details of his climb.

cil and the German Cabinet, held at Chancellor Ebert's palace.

Troops Concentrated.

This despatch was obviously sent by the Wolff Bureau, official German agency, which was forced to remove to Frankfurt after its main offices in Berlin had been seized by the Spartacans. It is the first official word received regarding conditions in Berlin since the Spartacan demonstrations began Monday.

(United Press.)

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 8.— The German government concentrated great forces of troops outside Berlin Monday night, planning to enter the city at daybreak Tuesday and crush Karl Liebknecht's rebellion, according to Berlin advices received through various channels to-day. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg was reported to have arrived from German military headquarters and it was assumed he would direct the attack on the Spartacans.

Hundreds Killed.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Several hundred persons have been killed in fighting in Berlin, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, but up till 2 o'clock this morning no details of conditions there have been received. The government seems, at least provisionally, to be master of the situation.

Firearms Distributed.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Ten thousand firearms were distributed among the Spartacans in Berlin yesterday, according to a Basle despatch received by the Midi to-day.

Chancellor Ebert, addressing the rioters Monday, said:

"The government is determined to fight to maintain the security of freedom and the right of free speech. We will stand or fall by the National Assembly."

Philip Scheidemann, who addressed the crowds after Ebert had concluded, said:

"Half an hour ago it was decided by the Spartacans that Ebert and myself should be shot. We are still alive."

The Foreign Office and other Ministry buildings were attacked by the Spartacans during the rioting.

Have Seized Bank.

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Jan. 8.— The Spartacans have seized the Reichsbank in Berlin is was reported in despatches received here to-day.

Special to The Examiner:

BASLE, Jan. 8.—An entire division, with artilelry and machine guns, is marching on Berlin from Potsdam to put down the Spartacan revolt, according to advices received from German sources to-day.

Special to The Examiner:

FRANKFORT, Jan. 8.—The "Anzeiger" reported to-day that the Spartacans control the railways in Berlin and that all traffic has ceased.

Gained Control.

Canadian Press:

BASLE, Switzerland, Jan. 8.— The German semi-official Wolff Bureau, which was removed to Frankfort when its Berlin office was seized by the Spartacans, sent out a message yesterday declaring that the Berlin Soldiers' and Workmen's Council and garrison of the city had placed themselves on the side of the government. The Frankfort Anzeiger on the other hand, declared that the Spartacans continued to occupy some of the public buildings. They easily gained control of the railways, the newspaper adds, and the employees ceased to run the trains.

Scenes Recorded.

LONDON, Jan. 8.— Early Tuesday morning the Berlin government massed troops outside the city. The troops are ready to enter, it is said in a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is reported to have arrived in Berlin. Street fighting has been particularly sanguinary, it is said, owing to the fact that the Spartacus element has plenty of weapons taken from the munitions factories at Spandau. While machine guns were firing and bombs were dropping, moving picture operators were busily recording scenes enacted in the streets. It was announced recently that the American army had sent moving picture operators to Berlin.

FLAME THROWERS USED.

BERLIN, January 8 — A Spartacan delegation to-day endeavored to confer with the government, but was notified that the government members could not discuss any matters until all public and private buildings now occupied by the counter-revolutionists had been evacuated.

At this hour the Spartacan forces are being massed at several places where weapons and armoured motor cars have been concentrated. In the Wilhelmstrasse, the government forces are awaiting an attack.

Government troops have been posted on the adjoining buildings, with machine guns. The troops in the government buildings have been equipped with flame throwers.

"OF ALL SAD WORDS OF TONGUE OR PEN."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 8. — Roy Colloy returned home and found his wife stretched out on the floor, her neck and throat covered with what appeared to be blood. He screamed and rushed to the street calling for the police. The beat man pulled an alarm box and the reserves rushed to the house. Meantime Mrs. Colloy had washed the ketchup which had been evidence of the "crime," and calmly explained that she "trusted she had taught Roy a lesson," and that he would stay at home evenings in the future.

HAD SUFFERED FOR FOURTEEN YEARS

Couldn't Lift an Arm or Leg From Bed—Tanlac Restores Health.

"I wish I could have found Tanlac fourteen years ago," said William D. Lawrence, who lives at 417 East 30th street, Tacoma, Wash., a few days ago.

"I have suffered all the pangs of inflammatory rheumatism just that many years," he continued, "and many times I have been in such pain and misery I would almost wish I could die and end it all. My whole body was wrecked with pain nearly all the time, and I would get terribly swollen all over, sometimes my feet would swell so bad I couldn't get my shoes on. The swelling and pain would come so suddenly in my feet at times that I would have to cut the strings in my shoes so I could get them off real quick. I was so bad off at one time that I was flat on my back for two or three months on a stretch, and couldn't raise an arm or leg all during that time, and every part of my body just ached with pain all the time. I went night after night without a minute's sleep, just had to lie there and suffer.

"I tried everything I could get my hands on, thinking I would get something after a while that would do me some good, but nothing seemed to help me very much. I thought a change might do me some good, so I came to Tacoma a short time ago, and when I got here I heard a great many people talking about the good Tanlac had done them, and I thought I would try it myself. Well, sir, it began to overcome my trouble right away. I am practically free from these terrible rheumatic pains now, and all that swelling is a thing of the past, and in fact, all that fourteen years of misery seems to be over. I sleep like a log and am gaining both in weight and strength every day. I never lose a minute from my work now, put in full time every day, and just feel good all the time. It sure is great to be in such fine shape after fourteen years of agony. I don't believe there is another medicine in the world equal to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

POLAND BADLY IN NEED OF MEDICINES AND FUEL, SAYS MINISTER

WARSAW,—Poland is in need of vast quantities of medicine, besides food and coal, said Dr. Chodzko, Minister of Public Health.

"We must have quinine, morphine camphor, vaseline, oils, cotton, wool and gauze. Tuberculosis is fourfold as menacing as other diseases, since the Germans refused to give patients medicines," he declared. "At Lodz there were in 1913, 12,000 births and 17,000 deaths. At present there the annual rate is 2,000 births and 8,000 deaths. The Germans not only requisitioned food but cut down the forests and deprived the people of fuel."

Board of Education Held Final Meeting of Year

Vote of Appreciation for Mr. V. Eastwood, Who Retires as Chairman of the Board—Dancing in the Collegiate Institute—Salary Question May Re Exhumed.

At the last meeting of the 1918 School Board held last evening Mr. G. N. Gordon moved a standing vote of thanks to the retiring chairman, Mr. Vincent Eastwood. In moving this vote Mr. Gordon expressed the appreciation of the Board for the whole-hearted manner in which Mr. Eastwood had as chairman of the board and of committees, made great sacrifices to attend meetings and to generally further education in ePter-generally further education in Peterbeen ready to meet the committees and was always first to come and last to leave. His rulings as chairman had invariably been fair and consistent. Mr. Denne seconded Mr. Gordon's motion, while Mr. E. G. Patterson said he could not let the opportunity pass of expressing the great loss the city sustains in losing Mr. Eastwood as a member of the Board.

Mr. Eastwood thanked the Board for their appreciation of his services and said he had enjoyed the chairmanship and appreciated the honour of responsibility involved in the position. He said that if at times he had appeared abrupt it was merely on account of a desire to conserve time, make the meeting quick and give all a chance to speak.

Dance in Collegiate.

Following the reading of a letter from Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, principal of the Collegiate Institute, suggesting that the assembly hall might be used to hold the annual Peterborough Collegiate Institute dance in, an animated discussion arose over the advisibility of such a step. The ban on dancing was inaugurated when the school was built with the object of using the building for school purposes only.

Mr. G. O. Cameron thought that the interests of the school should be kept within the school and believed it proper that the dance should be held in the assembly hall.

Mr. Gordon objected on account of the fact that as the dance is given by invitation many ratepayers are debarred from it, and on account of the danger of doing damage to the plaster of the building. He added that some had religious scruples about dancing.

Dr. F. C. Neil thought that if the dance could not be allowed in the school it should not be called the Collegiate dance.

Mr. Patterson said that if the Quoit Club could be allowed the use of the school grounds it was ridiculous not to let the children use the building for a school boy and girl's dance.

Mr. Eastwood, Mr. Denne and Mr. Fowler favoured the idea of letting the hall be used for the annual dance.

It was finally decided to leave the matter to the Supervision Committee.

Account Paid.

An account of $50 from Mr. G. M. Miller for plans which though never used, was submitted by him in 1915, for a system of ventilation in the Collegiate Institute, was ordered to be paid.

Teachers' Salaries.

The motion passed in 1918 leaving the matter of a new schedule of teachers' salaries over until June, 1919, was rescinded by a two-third vote and will be dealt with by the incoming board at its discretion.

Splendid Response.

Mr. Mowat reported a splendid response in the opening of the schools. An unusually large number of scholars returned on the first day; also all the staff except one who returns on Thursday.

Fire Chief Grange in reporting his annual visit to the schools, said that he was satisfied with the orderly manner in which the fire drill was carried out by the children. He reported some slight defects in the Queen Mary School, which will be left to the Property Committee to rectify.

MOTHER DENIES MRS. CASTLE'S ENGAGEMENT.

NEW YORK, January 8. — It is reported that Mrs. Vernon Castle is engaged to be married to Tom Powers, of the Royal Air Force, but now appearing in "Oh Boy" in London.

Mr. Powers was a friend of the late Captain Vernon Castle, and it was under the instruction of the latter that Mr. Powers began to fly. Mrs. Castle has been reported engaged many times since Captain Castle came to his death flying in Texas.

It was news to Mrs. Castle's mother that her daughter was reported engaged. She said that she had heard nothing of it. She would be the first person likely to know it, and regarded the rumour as unworthy of consideration. Yet the rumour persists.

Women's Activities in Wartime

(The Work of the Women's Royal Naval Service.)

Of many fine qualities which Englishwomen have displayed in work they have taken up since the war, their capacity for organization is one of the most remarkable. The extent to which organizing power is in their hands is little known even in England, for the most efficient work is carried out by them with a total disregard for publicity and advertisement and an engrossed attention to the matter on hand.

No one is writing about this form of war-work in England; few people realize it; yet it is a remarkable thing that in the case, for instance, of the Women's Royal Naval Service, women have founded in a short space of time a corps of auxiliary workers, have learnt the business of administrative work, have got the thing running smoothly, and are existing today as a department of the Admiralty entirely run by women who are directly responsible to their supreme head, the Second Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

The Women's Royal Naval Service was founded a little over six months ago in England. It was established for the purpose of setting free numbers of men in the Navy employed on land as clerks, cooks, stewards and motor-drivers, and training women to take their place. Their officers are educated women of the same social standing as officers of the Navy, and on them falls the duty not only of carrying out the administrative work at headquarters, but of looking after the women while they are training and after work hours, providing amusements for them, inspecting their lodging, arranging for the adapting of private houses to their needs, acting as guardians of their morals and, in general, seeing to their welfare.

The women, after being recruited—recruiting for this service is done in conjunction with the Ministry of Labour and is co-ordinated with that of Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps—are brought before a Selection Board. In some cases they are sent to train at one of the established naval training centres under chief messmen or warrant officers, and when trained are posted for duty in seaport towns, thereby setting free a certain number of men available for service at sea. Such women, although trained at the usual centres, do not receive their training with the men, though they are under their instructors. While they are being trained, they live in hostels found for them by the local naval officer and approved by an officer of the Women's Royal Naval Service. In London there is also a depot hostel where women are drafted when they are first recruited and where they are given their uniforms and are drilled and trained.

The staff-work at headquarters is divided into five departments, Personnel, Administration, Recruiting, Inspection and Training. There are no men officials in any of them. In this the Women's Royal Naval Service stands alone, for although the staffs of the sister corps of Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps, the Women's Royal Air Service and the Women's Land Army, are run mostly by women, they all have men officials in their Administration department. Sub-departments under the last named are concerned with the registry of documents, filing and typing, the keeping of records, the question of pay, and post-office work.

To prevent over-lapping and secure equal distribution, representatives of the three above-mentioned corps and the Women's Royal Naval Service sit on what is known as a Co-ordination Committee. Their aim is to secure level rates of pay in the different corps and equal privileges, to place women where they are most wanted, and to try to prevent one corps being more favoured by intending recruits than another.

Women officers in the corps have, as well as the duties mentioned non-administrative work of a confidential nature. For this work there is a Scrutiny Department where antecedents of intending applicants for the work are gone into very carefully. Great stress is laid on the value of discretion and the need of secrecy for work of this kind, and the work is only given to highly reliable and intelligent women with a strong feeling of responsibility.

These are the women who with their fellow-workers are placed at their right value by the high official for whom they are working, and who by their capacity for hard work, clear thinking, initiative and reliability have attained a standard of high efficiency in keeping with the best traditions of the British Navy, in an important branch of war-work in England to-day.

Tells How Pershing Saved Girls' Party

YONKERS, N.Y., Jan. 8.—A gathering of young women war workers and army telephone operators in France, guests of General Pershing at an afternoon tea saw him save the day from threatening failure by calling across the music room to Miss Anne Morgan:—

"Let's take up the rug and have a little music!"

One of the General's guests, Miss Charlotte Gyss, of this city, has written to Miss Veronica Taaffe, a chum relating the story of the tea. Miss Cyss, who is in charge of a unit of telephone operators, numbers her dance with General Pershing as the most important incident since the armistice was signed. In her letter she wrote:

"Wonder of wonders! General Pershing asked us all to tea at his chateau. We went and Anne Morgan poured tea. It rather threatened to be a stiff party until 'Black Jack' said, 'Let's take up the rug and have a little music!'

"The General danced with mostly all of his guests, and believe me, he is some wonderful dancer. It turned out to be the most wonderfully jolly party. You know, the General is the most democratic, unspoiled by fame man you would ever want to meet, and we all lost our hearts to him.

"Previously I regarded him with awe, but I don't any longer."

Every Girl Who Earns Her Living, Read This!

Very complex in her physical relations to life, disease early seizes upon the woman who works, and she must therefore guard jealously anything that would tend to destroy her vitality or health.

Probably nothing is of more service than Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and every girl and woman can employ this grand remedy with gratifying results.

As a system tonic and blood renovator no treatment gives such results.

For maintaining good digestion and healthy appetite it is impossible to equal Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Dusky, sallow, complexion is changed to a healthy, ruddy glow, which proves that Dr. Hamilton's Pills circulate blood that is rich and nourishing.

Weak organs are filled with new life and vitality; weakness, irregularities and the common ills are prevented.

When you feel poorly, when the head aches, back feels lame and a drowsy tired feeling creeps through you—that tells of the need of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; try them.

The Price of Electricity

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—Comment on the Hydro-Electric development of Ontario, was made by Keiji Nagao, chief electrical engineer of the Furukawa Mining Co., of Tokio, Japan, who is staying at the King Edward Hotel. He is on a tour of Canada, where he is visiting the large electrical works.

Asked as to the price of electricity in Japan, Mr. Nakao said that the price varied considerably, as he understood that it does in Canada. His own company sells current at the rate of one-half cent a kilowatt hour and that is about the cheapest available. Japan, he says, has great possibilities for Hydro development.

A Valuable Hint

Adjusting and fitting glasses should not be attempted by anyone unskilled.

It is not alone a question of good looks and comfort. Glasses to be right and helpful to the eyes must fit correctly, otherwise the eye muscles are subject to a continual strain, which most often results seriously.

We use every aid known to modern Optometry. Our lenses are ground correctly. Our Glasses fitted and adjusted so that the lenses are capable of fulfilling their duty without the handicaps of misfits and poor design.

An occasional examination of your eyes and keeping your glasses in proper adjustment will aid greatly in keeping your eyes fit.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course, if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1440 at age 21.

Besides, while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Dead in France Asleep at Home

Receives Message From Overseas Announcing He Has Been Killed.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 7.—John H. Everett of 123 First street, was awakened at night to receive a telegram from Washington conveying the information that he had been killed in action in France.

Still drowsy after coming from a warm bed to answer the door bell Everett read the telegram twice and began to think he was having the nightmare.

The fact is, Everett has never been in France. Neither has he worn a militiary uniform. He is within the draft age, but was never called for service.

He returned the message to the war department, quoting Mark Twain to the effect that the report of his death was "grossly exaggerated." Everett is employed as a clerk.

WARSHIPS COMING TO GREAT LAKES

Britain May Send as Many Light Ships as Can Get Through the Canals.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—It became known Saturday that the messages telling of the coming visit of the King and the Prince of Wales to Canada to review a British naval fleet off the City of Quebec intimate that the authorities in London are arranging to assemble as large a squadron as possible for the Canadian visit.

It is also announced that it is the intention of the British Government to have as many of the warships as the size of the Welland Canal will allow, proceed up the St. Lawrence and into the great lakes, so that the more inland cities, including Toronto, may have an opportunity of seeing at least a part of the great navy which played such a tremendous part in the war.

It is stated, of course, that it will not be battleships, but the smaller naval vessels, such as light cruisers and destroyers, and possibly submarines, which will visit the cities of the great lakes.

HOCKEY SEASON TO OPEN TO-NIGHT WITH WHITBY TEAM HERE

There is much interest in to-night's intermediate O.H.A. game at Brock street Rink and the probabilities are that a big crowd will see the Whtiby Military Hospital and Peterboro teams usher in the season. There is a good sheets of ice ready for the game and there is every reason to expect a hard battle. The teams of course are not in mid-season condition but the fact that two substitutes are allowed this season will make the pace fast all the way and the fans are assured of a good exhibition with Legros, Halpin, Rose, Evans and Laidlaw was a nucleus the Petes will have a well balanced team in action and they are confident of opening the season with victory. The soldiers from Whitby are an unknown quantity but will undoubtedly prove formidable opponents who will make the Petes extend themselves all the way. The present hockey season promises to be a good one and the fans will be anxious to get a line on Peterboro chances by watching to-night's game.

LINDSAY JUNIORS HERE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The first junior O.H.A. game of the season will be staged at Brock St. Rink on Friday night when the old rivals, Lindsay and Peterboro will clash. A game between these two teams is usually worth going miles to see and Friday night's battle should be no exception as both teams will be strong. The Peterboro outfit is particularly fortunate this season in having five of last year's team available while Frost who played two years ago is again out. The result is more seasoned team than has represented Peterboro in the junior seven for some time. Cherrett, Park, Hagerman, Williams and Gerard of last years outfit have been showing good form in practice and there are a couple of handy youngsters to fill in the gaps in the line up. Lindsay has also the majority of last year's team in line so that the game on Friday night should be a repetition of hard fought clashes of last year. The Petes had a lively practice last night in charge of Coach Jerry Coughlin and they should be in good shape for their first O.H.A. appearance of the season on Friday night. The junior team has a big following in Peterboro and their friends will all be out to see the battle.

Maple Leafs Still Leading

Won Two Games From the Grocers.

Last night at the Water Street Alleys the Maple Leafs took two games out of three from the Grocers. The game was exciting throughout and some good scoring done. Ross for the Grocers was high man with 600 and a single of 248 while Miller was high for the Leafs with 596, and single of 240. Four others were also over the 500 Mark. The scores were:

Stiff Fighting Around Lemberg

POLES ARE MAKING A BIG EFFORT TO SAVE THE CITY.

(Associated Press.)

WARSAW, Jan. 8. — Stiff fighting still continues around Lemberg where the Poles are defending themselves tenaciously against the Luthenians. The water and electric supplies to the city have been cut by the besiegers. Bloody hand to hand fighting has occurred daily in the suburbs. Virtually all the available troops of the Polish army have been sent to Lemberg in an effort to save that city. The Polish forces there are said to number 20,000 and are being assisted by many civilians, men, boys and women. The civilians are dressed in Austrian uniforms and helemts left behind when the Austians retired from Lemberg.

COUNTY ELECTOR ENDORSE COUNCIL'S ATTITUDE ON ROADS

The winter session of the County Council will be held during the last week in January, the first session opening on Tuesday, January 28th. There have been few changes in its membership, except those resulting from retirements, and the retention of the Reeves in the offices they held last year, and some of them for quite a number of terms, may be regarded as an endorsation of their attitude and expressions upon the good roads problem. In fact it has been rumored that the defeat of Albert Webster in Dummer by the former reeve and warden, C. J. Darling, after only one year's term, was partly due to an idea that gained some prevalence that he was an advocate of the Provincial system in its present form.

The new Council will undoubtedly occupy itself with the question of roads this year, but it is practically certain that it will impress upon the Government the feature of the sysem to which it has shown itself to be unalterably opposed.

POULTRY EXHIBITORS HERE FROM ALL PARTS OF THE PROVINCE

Are Well Satisfied With the High Standard of the Peterboro Show A Few of the Prizewinners.

Veteran poultry exhibitors agree that the Poultry Show now being held at the Armouries is one of the best, if not the best, local show in Ontoria.

Mr. Bruce Curtis, of Norham, who has exhibited his fowl for fifteen consecutive years, said that while the exhibit is not as large as he has seen here, the birds are of a higher standard, and compare admirably with the exhibits at Ottawa, Guelph, and the larger shows. In his collection of Asiatics, Mediterraneans and Hamburgs, with which he has taken a good percentage of the prizes offered, he has birds ranging from $5.00 to $20.00 each, and many worth more, which he would not sell. His birds are of such a quality he refused imported ones this year, as those he already had were of a better grade.

A Prize Winner.

Mr. W. W. Lord's, Campbellcroft, collection of Embden geese have carried off a number of prizes. His water fowl which is the largest exhibit ever shown, are the result of years' experience. He carries off the honours for the largest entry of bantams.

Mr. S. J. Cox, of Colbourne, the leading Golden Laced Wyandotte breeder in Canada, has a splendid exhibit of 20 very fine birds ranging in value from $5.00 to $25.00. He has taken all the prizes at the show for his Toulouse geese and Bronze turkeys. He said to-day that from the standpoint of a man who specializes in poultry he did not think the general run of birds at the Show could be beaten. He has taken the S. J. Warne Cup for Golden Laced Wyandottes.

Peterborough Doing Well.

While a large number of the prizes are going out of the city, the Peterborough men are making a splendid show considering the competition.

Mr. Daniels, of Lindsay, who took the coveted Columbia Dyandotte Cup for the most points, ran a close race with Elliott Brothers of Peterborough.

The Use of Eggs.

A feature of last night's show, which will be repeated this evening and to-morrow, is the lecture by Mr. J. R Fee, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture Live Stock Branch, Ottawa. He is endeavouring to educate the peopel to buy eggs by the grade rather than on the flat rates used at present and proves the values of such a step. His candling apparatus is an attraction to the farmers, many of whom have never seen candling done before.

The Attendance.

While the attendance las evening was not as large as expected, it is anticipated that with the added attraction of the birds being judged and marked, this evening's attendance will be satisfactory to the management who have gone to a considerable amount of expense to make the show the success it is.

Mr. Capstick of Bobcaygeon, a new exhibitor at the Peterboro Poultry show carried off Mayor Duncan's cup with his white leghorn cockerel which he values at $50. Mr. Capstick is practically a novice in the poultry line but has already cleaned up many of the prizes for birds of his class at the Lindsay fair.

Miss Yates Ill

Miss Yates who was to have lectured at the show has developed Spanish influenza. The managment, however wired the Department and an able substitute in the person of Mrs. Dawson of Brampton was sent and is assuming Miss Yates duties.

Valued at $5,000

The birds at the show are valued at at least $5,000. Some of the ornamental fowl run as high as $75 each,

Price of Paper Before Tribunal

Argument on Appeals Opened To-day in Ottawa.

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Before the paper control tribunal to-day, W. N. Tilley, counsel for the publishers, opened arguments on appeals from the price of sixty-nine dollars per ton set by Commissioner Pringle. Mr. Tilley declared that paper manufacturers charged a wrongful cost in the argument in favour of such increased price. Subscriptions to Y.M.C.A. and other denominations were among these charges.

Five Inch Exposure Is Quite in Order

LENGTH OF WIFE'S SKIRT PROBLEM OF DEBATE IN COURT.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, January 8. — A debate on the proper length of a woman's skirt held the attention of the spectators in the common pleas court. The specific question was raised when Ross Langham was defending himself against a divorce suit. As stated by Judge Morgan, the question was:

"Should a wife wear dresses which reveal more than five inches of her stockings above her boot tops??"

The Judge asked Langham if the "average distance" from a womans knee to her ankle is about 14 inches.

"Your honour, I cannot say, as I have never made such measurements," replied the witness.

"Well do you think five inches of exposure between the boot tops and the tip of your wife's dress too much of an exhibit?" asked the judge.

"I suppose that would be satisfactory," Langham replied.

The matter was taken under advisement.

Benighted Boston.

Owing to the war a distinguished Boston man, deprived of his summer trip to Europe, went to the Pacific coast instead. Stopping off at Salt Lake City, he strolled about the city and made the acquaintance of a little Mormon girl.

"I'm from Boston," he said to her. "I suppose you do not know where Boston is?"

"Oh, yes, I do," answered the little girl eagerly. "Our Sunday school has a missionary there."

Send C. O. D.

"I feel that I have an important message for the world," declared the young man.

"Send it collect," advised the practical friend.

Professor Leaves O.A.C. to Enter On Business Career

W. H. Day, B.A., in Charge of Physics Department, Resigns.

GUELPH, Jan. 8.—Professor W. H. Day, B.A., who has been officially connected with the Ontario Agricultural College as a fellow-demonstrator and lecturer, and for twelve years past professor of the department of physics, handed in his resignaion to President Creelman. The resignation will not take effect until March 14, as Professor Day has some important work in connection with his department which must be completed. Guelph will not lose the popular professor, for he has purchased an interest in and will be associated with as secretary and manager of the Shinn Manufacturing Company of Canada with offices and factory at Guelph.

Professor Day graduated from the University of Toronto in August, 1903, as an honour student in the department of physics, and was awarded the gold medal. The Tie That Binds

THE influence of music in the home cannot be overestimated. Think! Wouldn't every member of the family insist on being home if Alice Neilson was going to sing in your parlor next Wednesday? The most important event you can think of wouldn't keep them away.

Alice Neilson will visit your home—not once, but every evening on your Columbia. She, or some other famous singer, will sing your favorite songs, but that isn't all. Charlie may be fond of Creator's Band, Mary may have a friend in France and long for military Music, little Billie would just love "Little Red Riding Hood." You can please them all.

The long winter evenings have no dread for the family which owns

Haig Tells How Germans Were Completely Fooled

Camouflage Preparations for Great Attack In Flanders Were Complete Success—Fighting Was Entirely in the Open at Times.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—A historic document written by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-chief of the British armies on the Western front, deals with the operations of the British armies from the end of April, 1919, up to the conclusion of the armistice.

The document opens with a recital of the situation when the British armies had been forced to give ground before the tremendous German onslaught in the spring, and when the German forces on the Western front greatly outnumbered those of the allies. The only course open for the allies was to preserve their front unbroken until summer could bring additional American forces.

By an exhibition of wonderful tenacity, says the document, the allied troops preserved their line intact until July 18, when they did more. Field Marshal Haig says the complete success of the allied counter-attack on hat date marked the turning point in the year's campaign.

From that time Field Marshal Haig says, until the victorious conclusion of the armistice, the allies never looked back. Regarding the preparations for the attack at Amiens the Field Marshal says: "Instructions of a detailed character were issued to the formations concerned calculated to make it appear that a British attack in Flanders was imminent. Canadian battalions were put into line on the Kemmel front, where they were identified b ythe enemy. Corps headquarters were prepared, and casualy clearing stations were erected in conspicuous positions in this area. Great activity also was maintained by our wireless stations on the first army front, and arranegments were made to give the impression that a great concentration of tanks was taking place in the St. Pol area.

"The Germans were completely fooled, Field Marshal Haig says, and in the early morning mist of August 8 British troops caught the surprised Germans and captured 13,000 prisoners, nearly 400 guns and vast quantities of ammunition, and stores of all kinds. Following the storming of the German lines on all parts of the battle front came a period when the fighting was entirely in the open, except for such use as could be made of villages and natural cover. Here, according to the Field Marshal, British cavalry took a wonderful share in the operations, and the only aim of the enemy was temporarily to hold up the advancing allies in order to unravel the tangle of their forced retreat.

DANGER OF COAL FAMINE PAST; SUPPLY SUFFICIENT

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Danger of a coal famine during the rest of 1919 has passed, no matter how severe the weather may be the remainder of the year. Figures furnished by the Fuel Administration show the supply is sufficient. The output for 1918 exceeded that of 1917 by 34,000,000 tons. The production of bituminous coal and lignite is estimated at 585,883,000 net tons, setting a new high record, while the production of anthracite is estimated at 99,473,000 net tons, a slight decrease from 1917.

The coal production is the more remarkable in view of the fact that 125,000 men were lost to the mines through military service and other industries. This number was made up in numbers, if not in efficiency, so that the total number of men employed in the mines in 1918 did not fall below that of 1917, when it was 603,000. It is estimated that bituminous mines worked on an average 255 days in 1918, as compared with 243 in 1917 and 230 in 1916.

A Report on Farm Conditions

Falling Off in the Supply of Milk.

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The weather was comparatively open during the last half of December, and in Kent some cattle ware on pasture until a few days before Christmas. Winter conditions have since prevailed.

Fall wheat has a fair covering of snow, and so far is in good condition. There have been a few complaints in Kent of Hessian fly.

Live stock generally entered the stable in good condition, but Lanark reports some poor animals being marketed, chiefly young stock.

Three carloads of live stock were shipped from Emo, Rainy River, last week, the average price paid being 6c a lb. for cattle and 18c for hogs, live weight.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves have been going on the market in Brant at 14 and 15c a lb., and dairy cows have changed hands in that county at prices ranging from $140 to $170.

There has been a considerable falling off in the flow of milk, but fresh cows are now coming in, and the supply is beginning to show a decided increase.

Hogs are being marketed in more finished condition compared with last year's offerings. There are said to be a fair number on hand. Little pigs are selling at from $12.00 to $14.00 a pair.

All fodders are sufficient except hay, of which some farmers are rather short. This article has a remarkable range in price, from $18.00 to $33.00 a ton being quoted. There are some complaints of the general quality of corn ensilage.

The bean market is dull, buyers being unusually slow in bidding. Oats, however, are in considerable demand, with a large supply on hand.

The labour supply is regarded as sufficient generally, the recent scarcity being more or less relieved by men returning from military service.

GRAIN MARKET

Although there was but a short session on the Chicago corn market yesterday, prices were again boosted 1-2c. higher, showing the inherent strength of corn in the present situation, with a large decrease in stocks in hand, continued light deliveries, and the belief that the Argentine crop will afford very little assistance. There is very little business doing in the local market, and all the American markets closed early out of respect to the late Col. Roosevelt.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William (not including 1 1-2c. tax), No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

American corn, new crop— No. 3, $1.75; No. 4, $1.70, January shipment, track, Toronto.

Ontario wheat—No. 1 winter, $2.14 to $2.22; No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 1 spring, $2.08 to $2.17; No. 2 spring, $2.08 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10, f.o.b., shipping points, according to freight.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 71c. to 74c.; No. 3, 70c. to 73c., according to freight outside.

Barley—New crop, 92c. to 97c.

Peas— No. 2, $2.00, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.30.

Rye—No. 2, $1.54.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.25; Toronto-Montreal, $10.25, new bags.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $42.25; bran, $37.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $21 to $22; No. 2 mixed, $19 to $20 per ton; straw, car lots, $9.50 to $10.50.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 128 cars, with 914 cattle, 128 calves, 2,550 hogs, and 822 sheep and lambs.

There was a good active demand for butcher steers and heifers at prices a shade higher than the opening markets this week. Extra quality choice steers, were easily 25 cents higher. Good feeding steers with any weight on are correspondingly high, for the reason that they are readily taken for butcher purposes.

Choice fat cows were firm, but the medium fat were a little slower sale yesterday.

Lambs were again firm at this week's advance.

Calves strong.

There was so much uncertainty as to prices in the hog market that it is difficult to give an absolutely reliable quotation. It is certain, however, that $18.50, fed and watered, is being paid, and in some cases a quarter higher.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Ruth Plans For Her Aunt's Entertainment

Chapter LXXXII

"Oh, Brian! Aunt Louisa is coming! Coming to-morrow. She will be here on that seven o'clock train. We must both go and meet her."

"When did you hear?" Brian tried to look interested, tried to put some enthusiasm into his voice. Ruth was so unaffectedly happy that he must not allow her to see he did not share her joy.

"The letter came this afternoon. Hurry up, dear, we must get thru dinner. I have so much to do."

"Why what are you going to do so different?"

"I must fix the guest room so it will look home-like, then I want to get a list ready for the marketing so Rachel will be sure to have everything we need in the house. I do want Aunt Louisa to have a good time while she is here. I am so glad the house is so pretty, aren't you?"

"Yes, if you are," he replied, not ungraciously. Altho he left a twinge of jealousy—as he always did when Ruth mentioned the beauty of the home which she alone made possible for them.

"I shall stay at home all day Saturday. I know Mr. Mandel will let me, and we must get tickets for the theatre Saturday night. Auntie loves the theatre."

"I'll look up the plays after dinner," this was one thing he could do. Help in the plan for Saturday evening. Monday was his lesson night. So he would not be able to with them that night.

It never entered his head to forego his lesson, to give up the evening spent with Mollie because Mrs. Clayborne was coming. In fact he experienced a feeling of relief as he thought it would be one less to spend under her sharp eyes. He realized perfectly she had not wanted Ruth to marry him. And that she also blamed him because Ruth had gone to work. Then, too, she was apt to question him. He would not endure any prying into his business; nor any questions as to his resources.

All the evening Ruth chattered, flying about the apartment or seated at her desk making the list for Rachel, and adding to the menu such things as were not procurable at her aunt's home.

"We must give her the things she cannot get at home," she said to Brian, her brows knitting over her task. I do so want everything to be perfect for her, Brian. Be sure you get good seats for the play. I would rather not go again all winter, than not to take her as we should—as she is accustomed."

"Don't worry! I'll see to that!"

There followed a discussion as to what they should see. Finally a musical comedy which had been very favorably noticed in the papers, was decided upon.

"You better get the seats on your way down in the morning," Ruth said. And looking up, because of his failure to answer, she noted the flush on his face.

"He has no money!" she thought Then "Why is it that, whenever he is out late, he has no money the next day? I wonder—" the thought in her mind was so staggering she paused in the thinking.

That Brian might gamble, never had entered her mind. But she had read of men who, wanting money, took chances in that way. They always stayed out late, too. Did Brian gamble? To, her surprise, a feeling very like relief rushed over her. Anything—ever that—was better than spending his time with Mollie King.

Opening her purse, she quietly laid a ten dollar bill on the table.

"Be sure and get good seats. Not further back than the 7th or 8th row in the orchestra," she said, then turned back to her list for Rachel, so giving him time to put the money in his pocket.

"I'll get the best I can," he returned. "Tell Rachel to have breakfast a little earlier. That theater is a bit out of my way, you know."

"Very well, that's finished." Ruth rose and, with a glance, saw he had taken the money she had laid down.

"What a goose he is to be sensitive," she thought, and then leaned over, as she passed him, to kiss his cheek.

"Where are you going?" he asked, detaining her and returning her caress.

"To the kitchen to give this to Rachel," she waved her list, her face shining because of his caress.

"My what a list! we're going to live on the fat of the land, it is evident, while your aunt is with us.

"You bet we are! if we starve afterward."

To-morrow—Mrs. Clayborne Arrives. Ruth and Brian Meet Her.

HER FIVE CHILDREN
Had Whooping Cough At the Same Time

Whooping cough is one of the most dangerous diseases of children, especially to those under five years of age. It first starts with a fever and cough, sneezing, watering of the eyes and an irritation of the throat. Later the coughing increases, the child becomes livid in the face, the eyes appear as if they would burst from their sockets and suffocations seems imminent till relief is brought by the "whoop."

On the first sign of whooping cough we would advise the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This famous remedy will clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm, and in this way ease the racking cough and in a short time make it disappear entirely.

Mrs. Walter McGaughey, North Battleford, Sask., writes:—"I have five children, the eldest thirteen and the baby two years old. They all had the whooping cough at the same time. I tried two or three cough remedies, but none gave the same satisfaction as Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A home where there are young children should never be without it. I will highly recommend it to those who want a quick cure."

There are many imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so be sure you get the genuine by insisting that the package is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RAVAGES OF INFLUENZA

Analysis of Deaths Therefrom in Large Cities in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The influenza epidemic which swept the country during the latter part of last year caused 111,688 deaths in the forty-six largest cities and increased the combined death rate for these communities in 1918 to 19.6 per thousand, according to the statistics made public today by the census bureau. Total figures for the country were not available.

Baltimore with 26.8 per thousand, and Nashville, with 26.4 had the highest rates of the registration cities, while St. Paul, with 13.9, and Minneapolis and Grand Rapids, with 14 each, had the lowest. Grand Rapids showed the smallest increase, the death rate for 1917 having been 13.1.

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of his fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

Worth While

By MARY GRACE LESLIE

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was sympathy that aroused pity that first led Warren Brooks to realize his love for Maizie Donaldson. He had been "coming around" the Donaldson home for nearly a year. His visits were pleasant, uneventful and the rut he had fallen into somewhat indulged his "take it easy" disposition.

But now in an instant, with a thrill, in a flash his soul woke up. He had strolled into the Donaldson garden and the mother of Maizie nodded to him from the front doorway.

He coaxed on her announcing his arrival to Maizie and cherished their harmonious companionship on the comfortable rustic bench.

Neat, wholesome and clean as a pin in her dainty house dress, Maizie came towards him—floating towards him, his ardent fancy expressed it, she was so angelic, so ethereal!,

Then came the sudden shock to his spirit. She nodded a pretty welcome and there was a smile on her face, but tears as well.

"Why, Maizie," he cried, "you are crying!"

"Onions," said Maizie simply, and it sounded euphonious and alluring as "roses" from her dainty lips.

"You mean—"

"And horseradish."

"I thought—"

"You see, we are pickling, and I had to peel and grind. Oh, dear, I must have wept rivers. There, getting into the fresh air mends it all. Why, you are actually trembling."

"I thought I fancied—I was all roiled up because I thought someone was scolding you."

"Oh, no one ever does that! The world is very good to me, Warren."

"When I saw those tears in your eyes," Warren abruptly paused, for just then Grand Idea No. 2 popped into his mind. On the very verge of giving voice to the love that consumed him, his eyes sparkled, his breath seemed taken away.

"I've hit it!" he could not help but gasp out, and Maizie wondered if it was his foot, or his hand, but just then Mother Donaldson called to her, and Maizie turned over the dinner particulars Warren had manifested and he, hugging close to his soul a vast secret, managed to act rational.

She noted suppressed excitement in his manner when he left her later in the evening. It was three days later when he reappeared. Warren looked as if he had not slept since she last saw him. He was haggard, his hair rumpled, but his eyes glowed with some inspiring internal fire.

"Maizie," he said, as he took a little package from his pocket, "I have here a remarkable invention, and as it was through you that I came to devise it, I bring you the first one made."

"Why, what is it," asked Maizie.

"The Perfection Patented Onion and Horse Radish Mask. See?"

In a triumphant way Warren unwrapped the parcel. There was a piece of thin glass, molded to cover eyes and nostrils, while a band of whalebone fitted it close into place.

"Why, Warren," exclaimed Maizie, "what in the world are you going to do with it?"

"Do with it?" cried the optimistic enthusiast. "Why, sell one to every person who slices onions or grinds horseradish."

"Oh, Warren," said Maizie, striving hard to repress a secret merriment "nobody minds the keen bracing tang of onions and horseradish. In fact, the doctors say it brightens the eyes and clears the head. But to think you got it up for me."

She playfully set the mask in place. The bright laughing eyes shone through the thin glass, roguish, bewitching. Then Maizie was sedate and attentive as Warren told her of his plans. He had been directed to a patent lawyer in the city, and he was exhilarated over the belief that his invention would be a great money maker. Maizie thought different, but she did not dampen his hopes by saying so. Two weeks later, a disappointed, dejected man, Warren alighted from an evening train.

Just as he was nearing home, turning a corner, he came face to face with Maizie. It warmed his heart, that fervent clasp of her hand. Her eyes shone with fervid emotion. "Well," he blurted out disconsolately, "I don't seem to have done anything worth while with my grand invention."

"Worth while," Maizie took up the refrain in vibrant accents. "Oh, Warren, haven't you heard?"

"Heard what?" he questioned. "I just got back from the city. No bad news, I hope."

"No, glad news, joyous news," cried Maizie, and her eyes filled with happy tears. "Oh, Warren, only for you, only for the glass mask, my dear little sister Ruby, would have been burned to death."

He thrilled as she told the story of a fire that had destroyed their home; of awaking to find only one means of escape—by the window. Then M— had caught the echo of a wild, affrighted scream. It was Ruby.

"And oh, Warren, if I had thought of the mask I never could have found my way or seen my way to our sweet darling."

He found himself a hero with the townspeople, and to Maizie so much dearer than ever, that when he spoke out what was in his heart hers was ready with a responsive echo.

Here's the latest method of collecting debts. We cannot vouch for its effectiveness in all cases, says a contemporary, but the following letter, sent out recently by a well-known firm, was successful, for a check was received by return post. The firm wrote: "Dear Sir: You owe us an account amounting to ..... which dates back about eighteen months. We have tried to secure payment by frontal attack in the form of monthly statements and field guns in the shape of letters and telephone messages, but without avail. We mean to find your vulnerable spot, and if you do not shell out by Wednesday we shell in by 'Big Bertha' in the form of a writ."

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

IF CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK, BILIOUS, CLEAN LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS.

Children love this "fruit laxative" and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty its bowels, and the result is ,they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, the stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, the breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach ache or diarrhoea. Listen, mother! See if the tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs,' and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mother give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Few People Know How to Make Tea!

One is served "boiled" Tea, "second-hand" Tea, and flavoured water; rarely does one obtain that real Tea—tasty Tea," that has been called the "Nectar of the Gods."

The way to get it is to buy Lipton's Tea and follow these directions in making it :

1—Always use an earthenware or china teapot.
2—Thoroughly warm the teapot by rinsing with hot water.
3—Put enough tea into the pot to suit requirements. Two teaspoonfuls of Lipton's is ample for five cups.
4—Always use freshly-drawn water, and have it briskly boiling when poured on the tea.
5—Allow the tea to stand not longer than five minutes.
6—Add cream and sugar to suit taste.

But be sure to get Lipton's, because it is the only GUARANTEED QUALITY TEA. Grown, blended, packed, and sold by the same firm.

No other firm can give this guarantee.

MUST PASS PHYSICAL TEST TO GET ORDER FOR ELUSIVE LIQUID

Essex Doctors Put Up More Barriers For Thirsty Ones.

WINDSOR, Jan. 8.— In order to place a check upon the reckless issuence by some physicians here of liquor prescriptions to all comers, the members of the Essex Medical Society have agreed that here after they will prescribe liquor up to the amount of quart, as permitted by the act, but only after the applicant has been given a thorough physical examination. For this examination a charge of $2 will be made.

Some time ago the physicians' organization decided to eliminate so far as possible the business of issuing liquor prescriptions. Some doctors, it is alleged, continue it. One doctor here is alleged to have issued as many as 100 to 150 prescriptions for a day, each for one quart of whiskey, for which he made a charge of $1 for each prescription. The whiskey can be purchased by presentation of the doctor's order for $2.75 a quart at the local vendor's shop here. The new arrangement will become effective at once.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

At the Spelling School

Three Simple Words About Which He Needed Prompting.

By CAROLINE SPENCER.

Burt Seymour, son of Farmer Seymour, had given a "sugaring off" party in the sap bush, and his invited guests numbered a dozen of the young men and girls of the neighborhood. Such parties are always given with the last run of maple sap and are simple affairs. The guests all gather at the sugar bush, where the sweet sap has already been boiled down to thick sirup, and seat themselves on a log while the sirup is boiled a little more and then served around on clean maple chips. There is snow yet left in the woods, and a dab of sirup dropped on the snow produces maple wax. There is a general stickiness, a general state of hilarity, and the girls go home with wet feet and the young men with wax on their chins.

In one sense this party referred to was a great success. In another it was a calamity. A sewing machine agent had been stopping at Farmer Halliday's for the last two weeks while he beat up the country. He happened to be a young man and a taking fellow, but there was no earthly reason for Burt Seymour to be jealous of him. Eunice Halliday and Burt had been engaged for three or four months, and while she was naturally flattered at the compliments paid to her by the agent, whose name was French, they didn't turn her head by any means. She saw from the first that Burt was inclined to be jealous, and she was therefore more circumspect, but Burt's jealousy still rankled. He took good care that the stranger shouldn't be invited to the sugar party, to which Eunice was duly escorted by the host, but cheek is a part of the stock in trade of agents of all sorts, and no one was greatly surprised when Mr. French showed up as cool as a snow bank and took the biggest chip in the collection.

As old Aunt Martha used to say, all girls that amount to anything have a spice of deviltry in their nature. Be they ever so sweet and nice, there are times when they like to hector. When Eunice saw, with all the others, that the coming of the agent annoyed her lover and that Mr. French was inclined to put himself out in another and more agreeable way to make things a success she came as near flirting with him as she could and miss it. The harder Burt scowled and the more he showed his vexation the more reckless she became. She didn't intend to go too far, but just far enough to punish him. He would be sullen and sulky going home, but she would make up with him before they reached the gate—that is, she thought it would be that way, but she was mistaken. Burt referred to the agent as a "snide" and several other things, and, although she only defended mildly, it was sufficient to keep his temper hot. He announced that he had been disappointed in her; that there was no such thing as loyalty known to her sex; that a few compliments from a "masher" were valued by her more than his enduring love, and when the gate was reached she announced that she wouldn't submit to be browbeaten, and he flourished his arm in reply and exclaimed:

"Farewell, false girl! I have loved you as no man ever loved before, but you have let a fool part us. I may die of a broken heart or commit suicide, but 'twill not matter to you. You will have simply broken one more human heart—shattered the faith of another man in woman's integrity."

Of course Eunice went into the house prepared to brave it out, but it wasn't fifteen minutes before her mother suspected that something had transpired and whisked her into the family bedroom to say:

"Now, then, has that Hattie Jones been saying mean things about you again?"

"No, ma," replied the daughter as she burst into sobs.

By and by all the details were in the mother's possession. The girl did not deny that she had flirted a bit, but she had not really meant anything serious. She was deeply in love with Burt Seymour and as she thought of his dying of sunstroke and going to his grave believing she cared for any other man, no matter how many sewing machines he could sell in a week, it almost broke her heart.

"Well, now, stop crying while I talk to you," said the mother. "You should not have flirted, and Burt should not have made a fool of himself. He's gone away to chew the rag, as your cousin Ben puts it. He thinks he'll get a letter from you in a day or two asking his forgiveness. Then he'll take a week before coming around and condescending to make up. First and foremost, you are not to write him a line. Second and hindmost, he's got to come to you if there is any coming about it. Your father was just another such idiot when he was running after me, and I made him crawl. That's why I have always had the whip hand of him."

"But you know how set Burt is in his ways," pleaded Eunice.

"But you can be just as set in yours."

"But suppose he's found dead with my photo on his broken heart."

"Suppose our old dog should bark his tail off! You are going to do just as I say, and that ends it. I'm your mother, and I know something about men, and if I don't help you to bring that smart young man back within two weeks I'll never darn another pair of socks for your father."

One event invariably follows the other in the country. After the sugar party, about two weeks after, comes the last day of the district school, or the close of the term. Word goes out for ten miles around, and the 200 young and old who attend manage somehow to get into the schoolhouse. Then two persons choose sides, and the whole crowd lines up, and the schoolmaster pronounces the words. The spelling school for the Seymour district was announced for a date two weeks subsequent to the sugar party and the lovers' quarrel. No Burt called at the Halliday farmhouse to make up. The days passed, and poor Eunice went about with tears in her eyes. Even her father noticed that the daughter was looking red-eyed and pale faced and asked the wife if a doctor had not better be consulted.

"Don't you worry, Joseph," was all the reply he got, and about all he expected, but to the daughter the mother said:

"Eunice, when the spelling school comes off I am going to bring that young man to the mark. He is one of the best spellers around here, isn't he?"

"Yes, ma."

"Well, so are you. Some folks say you are better than he is. If you are on one side and he on the other, you are going to beat him."

"But suppose I can't."

"I'm just going to pray that you will."

"Then he'll be madder yet. Maybe he'll go right home and commit suicide."

"And maybe he'll go right home and get some sense in his head. I'm running this show, and I want you to do just as I tell you."

There was the usual big turnout when the evening came. The sewing machine agent had departed for other fields, and Eunice arrived at the schoolhouse in the company of her father and mother. Almost immediately she heard that Burt Seymour had come along with his horse and buggy. She also heard that their misunderstanding was being gossiped about. The schoolmaster was well known to the Hallidays, and a few whispered words from Mrs. Halliday perfected her plans. It was announced that Mr. Burt Seymour and Miss Eunice Halliday would choose sides, and they found themselves at once the center of interest. Each sought to decline, but each was pushed forward. Each line when filled numbered eighty, and then the spelling began. The first five minutes did the business for twenty.

In a quarter of an hour there were only ten spellers on their feet. Five minutes later Eunice and Burt alone were left. They stood facing each other, though not looking into each other's eyes. Burt looked obstinate, and the girl had her chin in the air. It was called the greatest contest of the decade. For twenty minutes the teacher hunted out the hard words, but could trip neither. Then Burt was caught and went down, and the victory was awarded the girl amid cheers. Five minutes later the crowd broke up, and Eunice was hunting for her wraps when a hand was laid on her arm and a voice whispered:

"Eunny, how do you spell 'idiot,' 'forgive' and 'love?'"

"The simplest way," she replied as she turned to Burt.

"Then ride home with me. I brought my buggy on purpose."

"Of course it worked," said Mrs. Halliday that night to herself after making a cackling noise in her throat. "If it had been left to Eunice, now—but it wasn't. When a smart young man thinks he's smarter than an old married woman it's time he was spelled down a few and made to take a back seat."

MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Act as a stimulant to the sluggish liver, clean the furred tongue, sweeten the foul, obnoxious breath, and clear away all the poisonous accumulations from the system by causing the bowels to move regularly and naturally every day, thus preventing as well as curing constipation, sick headaches, bilious headaches, water brash, heartburn, and all diseases arising from a lazy, slow or torpid liver.

They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take, and there is nothing of the griping, weakening and sickening effects of the old-fashioned purgatives.

Mrs. John Kadey, Chipman, N.B., writes: "I have been using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for some time and can recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried other remedies, but they only relieved me for a short time. I always recommend Laxa-Liver Pills to all sufferers, as I think they are a valuable remedy."

When you go to your dealer and ask for Laxa-Liver Pills, see that you get the genuine "Milburn's." Price 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Beavers Busy In New Quarter.

Beavers are exceedingly busy at present in the Ennismore district, not far from Peterboro, where the "first engineers" supposedly have been long extinct. The theoretical explanation is offered that the industrious rodents may be a colony escaped from Algonquin Park.

Never Too Late to Form Habits.

Mrs. Mary Morse, of Erwin, N.Y., cast her first vote and celebrated her 95th birthday anniversary coincidently at a recent election.

A STUDY IN EGOTISM.

Utterances of the Kaiser During the War.

British newspapers give prominence to some of the Kaiser's utterances during the war.

In 1914 he said: "Before the leaves fall from the trees we shall be back again in the dear fatherland. Exterminate first the treacherous English, and walk over Gen. French's contemptible little army. You, my troops, are my guarantee that I can dictate peace to my enemies. Up and at the foes. God's goodness will guide the German people through battle to victory—to the goal appointed for the German people by Providence. I have drawn the sword which, without victory and without honor, I cannot sheath. To the dust with all the enemies of Germany. Amen."

In 1915 he said: "Our brave soldiers have shown themselves invincible in battle against nearly the whole world. The war drama is now coming to its close." He also said: "America had better look out after the war. I shall stand no nonsense from the Americans. In a just cause I am ready to force myself to be cruel."

In 1916 he said: "The world was prepared for anything, but never for victory of the German fleet over the British. Fear will creep into the bones of the enemy. With God's help, Germany is invincible, in spite of the superior numbers of our enemies, and every day confirms this anew. The foe is defending his native soil foot by foot. This is the resistance of despair, but it must be broken. He has prepared his soup, and now he must sup it."

In 1917 he said: "If the enemy does not want peace, then we must bring peace by battering in with the iron fist and shining sword the doors of those who will not have peace. Victory in the coming year will again be on our side and that of our allies. If only we cast the burden on the Lord he will smite the foe hip and thigh, as he did Amalek, the prototype of perfidious England. The enemy has got to stake his men until, exhausted, he lays down his arms. England is particularly the enemy to be struck down, however difficult it may be.

"The year 1917, its great battles, have proven that the German people have, in the Lord of Creation above, an unconditional and avowed ally, on whom they can absolutely rely."

In June, 1918, he said: "God has laid a heavy burden on my shoulders, but I can carry it in the consciousness of our good fight, with confidence in our sharp sword and our strength."

This was followed by various utterances of growing despondency.

What the Weather Costs.

It is very aged, that western notice: "Don't Shoot the Organist. He's Doing the Best He Knows How." By the same token, don't blame the newspapers for the weather forecasts. They are doing the best they can by printing the copy supplied by the government, and the government is spending on its weather service the tidy sum of $1,610,080 a year—a nice little increase compared with 1870, when the work was begun on $20,000. Of course there are glaring failures, but on the average the accuracy of the prognostications has very materially improved.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S——There Was No Doubt As To Which Valet Would Resign

By Wellington

Article No. 1
Cut out for Reference.

THIS Announcement is made by the Dominion Government—made now because it feels that every Canadian wants to know, and is entitled to know, just what plans it has made to meet the problems that face the country. Only now has it been possible to finish the many plans and policies necessitated.

From day to day the Government will use this space to explain what it is doing to bring back our soldiers, to ensure the comfort of their dependents, to keep the whole nation busy and prosperous.

The problem is to take back our soldiers and war-workers into our social and business life under proper working and living conditions. It has four phases:—

1. To bring the soldiers home.
2. To fit those who have suffered overseas for useful employment.
3. To have ready for every soldier and war worker an opportunity for employment.
4. To assure for them proper living and working conditions.

The plans of the Government are such as will help solve these problems. What those plans are will be reported to you in this series of announcements.

PANAMA CANAL RIVALRY.

One Workman Picked Up For Dead, but Still Enthusiastic.

"When Goethals first went to Panama," says Ray Stannard Baker in the American Magazine, "the work was organized on what may be called the horizontal system—that is, the canal was considered as a whole, and one commissioner had charge of all the lock work, another of the excavation, and so on—but after a short trial of this method Goethals reorganized the entire work on what may be called a perpendicular basis. He divided the canal into three divisions—Atlantic, central and Pacific—and placed each of them under a superintendent. Two of these superintendents, Colonels Sibert and Gaillard, were army engineers and members of the canal commission, and the third, Mr. Williamson, was a civil engineer.

"Rivalry was instantly awakened between these divisions.

"'They are putting in concrete at Gatun at so many yards a day,' the superintendent would tell the foreman, say, at Pedro Miguel. 'You aren't going to let Gatun beat you, are you?'

"A fierce rivalry grew up over amounts of excavation done, cement used, ironwork put in, and the results were published from week to week in the Canal Record. The struggle has come to infect all classes of workmen. A story is told (and they swear it is true) of a man on the Atlantic division employed at the upper end of a huge drainage pipe used to carry water out of the hydraulic fill at Gatun dam. It was a long tunnel with a curve in the middle, and this man's job consisted in keeping the entrance free from obstruction. One day he inconsiderately fell into the pipe and was caught up and swept through with the torrent. They picked him up for dead, but presently, opening his eyes, he said, 'They couldn't do that on the Pacific division.'"

FRANKLIN'S LONDON HOME.

Passing of the Old House In Which the Philosopher Once Lived.

The house in London where Benjamin Franklin once lived is about to be torn down. It is at 7 Craven street, the site of a great new restaurant about to be erected, and it is supposed that the tablet which now marks the building will be replaced upon the new building. It reads: "Lived here Benjamin Franklin, painter, philosopher and statesman. Born 1703; died 1790."

At No. 7 Franklin lived about 1770. Here he "went home and thought over it" when the secretary of state informed him that orders in council had the effect of law. Here he boarded with a Mrs. Stevenson and entertained his fellow boarders by a series of whimsical papers, the Craven Street Gazette, detailing the adventures of Mrs. Stevenson upon a trip. Sparks prints this citation: "At 6 o'clock this afternoon news came to the post that her majesty" (Mrs. Stevenson) "had arrived safely at Rochester on Saturday night. The belle immediately rung for candles to illuminate the parlour; the court went into cribbage, and the evening concluded with every demonstration of joy."

N. Darnell Davis of the Royal Colonial institute suggests that if Americans would interest themselves no doubt they could induce Sir Joseph Lyons, the restaurateur, to deal gently with the historical relic, which might well become a Franklin hall.—New York World.

How G. B. S. Does Love Himself!

Bluntly tackled about the date of his next volume of plays, George Bernard Shaw again made confession.

"A volume is due very soon now," he said. "What has been holding that back is the most important part of the book."

"You mean the preface?"

"Yes. This is to be the last of my great prefaces. It is to be called 'Parents and Children,' and it will be the first really complete exposure that has ever been made of the tyrannic imposture of our whole system of imprisoning children because they are troublesome under the pretense of educating them."

"Quite in the key of your other famous prefaces?"

"I think so. When this is finished all my prefaces, taken together, will form a body of doctrine more complete than anything since Plato."—London News.

Every Wage Earner Should Answer Question Himself or Herself

WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR YOU IF HEALTH GIVES WAY?

In dollars and cents, what is the worth of the brawn of your arm; what is the value of the staying power that permits continuous labour—what are they worth to you?

Suppose you did something so foolish as to reduce your strength, vitality or judgment one half, and it were impossible to get them back — how much would you pay to regain the lost portion?

When you let yourself run down, you reduce your chances for success in life — if sleeplessness comes you score lower still—should appetite or digestion fail, you are stared in the face by physical bankruptcy.

Don't let it go so far, take Ferrozone, it has cured thousands and it will cure you; it builds up bodily strength, makes muscles like steel, replaces Spring tiredness by energy and new life. Ferrozone rebuilds sick folks because it contains the strengthening elements that every run-down system requires.

Especially before the hot weather comes, everyone needs a purifying tonic—Ferrozone fills the bill exactly—nothing known that juvenates and uplifts so fast.

At once the appetite improves. You rest well and arise next morning feeling fit and fine.

Headaches disappear, weakness gives way to the vigor that only Ferrozone can supply. Try it, results are guaranteed, 50c. per box or six for $2.50 at all dealers or by mail to any address if price is remitted to the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ontario.

A Howl.

A lady recently selecting a hat at a milliner's asked cautiously:

"Is there anything about these feathers that might bring me into trouble with the Bird Protection Society?"

"Oh, no, madam," said the milliner.

"But did they not belong to some bird?" persisted the lady.

"Well, madam," returned the milliner pleasantly, "these feathers are the feathers of a howl; and the howl, you know, madam, seein' as 'ow fond he is of mice, is more of a cat than a bird."

Asthma Cured to Stay Cured

Thousands testified to the lasting benefit secured by

Catarrhozone

CURES WITHOUT DRUGS

One of the finest discoveries in medicine was given to the public when "Catarrhozone was placed on the market about fifteen years ago. Since then thousands have been cured of asthma and catarrh. An interesting case is reported from Calgary in a letter from Creighton E. Thompson, who says:

"Nothing to strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one-dollar package lasts two months; small size, 50; rampe size, 25c; all storekeepers and druggists or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Care of Children.

The baby's nourishment is the most important factor of its earlier life. Mother's milk is the ideal food for the child. We should go back to nature as much as possible and try not to use prepared food. Too many mothers follow the printed formulas for sicknesses of children. A physician should be consulted for the children's ills. Each case requires a different treatment.

The best children are those brought up in a happy frame of mind. The children should be taught to love their parents and not to fear them. The proper clothing of babies at night is a great factor in a child's life. A cold contracted during the early part of the life oftentimes develops into more serious disease when the child reaches its maturity.

Dog Heroes.

A remarkable feat is said to have been performed by two French dogs during one of the German offensives. Their keeper stayed in the rear of the retreating French army till the last possible moment, waiting for his dogs to come back to him with a message. When they returned there was no way of escape except by swimming across the Marne. The man could not swim, but the dogs could. He chained them together and clung to the chain, and so they got him safely across under heavy fire. As dogs cannot be decorated nor have the honor of a "citation," an account of the incident was posted up at all the kennels of the army.—Tit-Bits.

French Casualties 4,762,800 Official Statement Reveals

The Dead and Missing Were 1,327,800 and Nearly 700,000 Rendered Useless for Work—Killed and Wounded a High Ratio of Men Mobilized.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Casualties in the French army, excluding colonial troops, up to November 1, were 4,762,800, according to official figures made public here by the French High Commission to correct conflicting reports hitherto published.

Men killed in action or dead of wounds numbered 1,028,000, and to this total must be added 299,000 listed as missing and given up for lost, making a total of 1,327,000. The number of wounded was 3,000,000, with 435,000 listed as prisoners. Three-fourths of the wounded have recovered either entirely or at least to such an extent as to be fit to work again.

Slightly less than 700,000 are absolutely unable to work and have been pensioned. To this figure must be added those who will come back from prison camps in Germany unfit for work. The French Government estimates that the total number of unfit and pensioned may finally be between 800,000 and 900,000 men.

The losses among the native troops coming from French colonies or protectorates were 42,500 killed or died of wounds, with 15,000 missing and very probably dead. The number pensioned after wounds or illness was 44,000, to which must be added those of the 3,500 held as prisoners of war who will have to be pensioned.

"If one considers only the losses among French citizens," said the Commission's statement, "and compares their number to the population of France, about 38,000,000 and to the number of men mobilized, about 7,500,000, one sees that the total killed or dead of wounds, missing and unfit for work, was between 5 and 6 per cent. of the menmobilized."

CONCERT AT THE CONSERVATORY

In spite of the many counter attractions in the city, including the hockey match, the second concert of the Redpath Lyceum series given under the auspices of the Conservatory of Music last night, drew a capacity house. The concert was given by Knight MacGregor, the noted Scotch baritone and assisting artists including Mr. Boris Hambourg, 'cellist, a member of the distinguished Hambourg family of Toronto, and Miss Edna Wallace, pianist and accompanist.

Mr. Knight MacGregor is undoubtedly an artist who possesses the ability to sing. He had selections suited to every taste in the large audience varying from a solo from Rigoletto to Harry Lauder and "Dear Old Pal of Mine," by Gitts Rice. Mr. MacGregor won a place in the hearts of the audience by his singing and his genial manner. Mr. Boris Hambourg appeared five times on the programme and played with much authority and refinement of tone and brilliant technique. He was recalled several times after each appearance.

To promote an appreciation of good music the Conservatory admitted one hundred of the pupils free. These pupils occupied the background of the platform, and reserved seats.

Next Event.

The next event of the course will be Beauchamp, the philosopher and lecturer.

Preparing to Attack

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 9.— The Germans have recaptured a number of towns in East Prussia from the Poles and are preparing to attack Posen, the Evening News declared to-day.

Considerable disorder is reported in Warsaw. The newspaper said the situation in East Prussia is "most serious."

FARMERS ASK WAR PRICES FOR WOOD JUST AS A HABIT

Farmers have been busy drawing wood into the city during the past week, and the prices they quote would suggest that they had not yet heard that the war was over and the fuel scarcity at an end. Fifteen dollars for a cord of hardwood was met with the comment that coal, purchasable for $12 a ton and less, was decidedly cheaper than the very best hardwood at this price. Last Saturday one farmer chased around the west end with a load of wood. It was getting dark, but he declared that he would sell that load at some price or other rather ride home on it. Doubtless had he quoted a reasonable figure in the morning or afternoon he would have had no difficulty in disposing of the wood. The farmers should remember that consumers are thinking more than twice these days before paying the rural profiteer's price of $15. There was some other poor-looking stuff, that looked as if it had been gathered from the roadside, or that it had long done duty as a snake fence, was priced at $7 and $8 a load. Last winter when any kind of wood sold at a premium this nondescript punk was sold at ridiculous prices, but it will be decidedly inexperienced buyers who will take it this winter, with the coal supply becoming normal, and the dealers' yards well supplied with hardwood.

A LESSON IN ECONOMICS.

Food stuffs are carried from England, France, New York, Montreal and Toronto, to the grocer in Peterboro on an average much cheaper than it cost to deliver from the grocery store to your home. Therefore, when you wipe out this latter expense in addition to the heavy credit system expense, you realize why "The Groceteria," in the old Market Arcade, can supply quality goods at a low price.

Slightly Used Sewing Machines For Sale

A number of machines used by different societies for Red Cross work. No reasonable offer refused. Must be cleared out to make room. In new machines we have Standard, Singer and New Williams, also oil, needles and repairs of all styles of machines. If you have a machine new or old that is not giving satisfaction, write, 'phone or call J. W. Stuart, 390 Water street. Munro House block, adjoining Manning Garage. Store phone 713F, house 247W. Scores Were Killed When Rival Processions Collided—Socialists Fight Each Other.

CORRESPONDENT WOUNDED

(United Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 9.— John Graudenz, the United Press staff correspondent in Berlin, was badly wounded during the street fighting, according to a personal message received from him by the United Press Bureau here to-day.

Graudenz said he had a "badly damaged foot," as a result of being struck by fragments of a hand grenade which exploded near a telegraph office, where he had gone to file some despatches. He explained, however, that he was "too busy" to go to a hospital.

While the original German revolution united the Socialists of the old regime, Socialists are now fighting each other. The Independent Socialists have joined the Spartacans in an attempt to overthrow the government, which is dominanted by Majority Socialists.

Karl Liebknecht, addressing a crowd of demonstrators in Tiergarten said: "Workmen and brothers, the moment has come for action. Don't return to the workshops until the task is done. The Berlin garrison will join us. Ebert and Scheidemann must go. Your confidence and your actions will bring us success and will prove that the Socialist Republic is not a lie, but a reality.

"To-day the world knows the Socialist revolution has begun at last. It will influence the Entente and the whole world. Prepare for action with rifles loaded. Do not rest until the government is reached. The Ebert-Scheidemann government has become disgusting to the whole world. Long live the world revolution and International Socialism."

Will Issue Weapons.

At practically the same time Scheidemann was addressing the throng in front of the Reichstag building. "This mess must end," he said. "We will not allow the minority to terrorize the majority any longer. The government will suppress the Spartacan movment with iron hands.

A voice from the crowd cried, "Give us arms." "Patience," Scheidemann reuplied. "Weapons will be issued this afternoon."

He leaves to mourn his loss besides addressed and people who had listened to Scheidemann, started to parade. The rival processions collided and in the riot scores were killed.

INVASION OF CANADA

Organization Formed for That Purpose in the United States.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.— German plans for the invasion of Canada by men in this country who had served in the Imperial German army were told to-day to the Senate committee probing German propaganda, by A. Bruce Bielaski, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

"The men Germany depended upon to invade Canada before we entered the war belonged to the Kriegebund," said Bielaski. "Men who had seen military service in Germany were eligible for membership. Some of the organizations were actually drilling and were supplied with rifles. Nothing of a serious character ever developed, although the society was harmful in its influence."

Bielaski said the society was well organized and had a number of branches sacttered about the country. "So far as he knew," he said, "only unnaturalized Germans who had seen military service at home belonged to the society."

Steinberg, the Fishman

Having sold out his stock of dry goods and ready-to-wear, Mr. Steinberg intends to give his whole time to the fish business. An extra delivery service will be put on in order to cover all parts of the city, and full supplies of fish will be provided for every day of the week. Prices will be the lowest possible and the public can always depend on being well served. Watch for special offerings on Wednesday and Friday. Fish should be more largely used and Mr. Steinberg is bound to supply them in prime condition and at moderate prices. 1d.

HOLD GERMANY ACCOUNTABLE FOR ARMING THE BOLSHEVIKI.

PARIS, January 9. — At the last meeting of the Armistice Commission Marshal Foch called attention to the actions of the Germans, who, he said, while evacuating Poland and the Baltic provinces, left their arms with the Bolsheviki, thus violating the conditions of the armistice. Marshal Foch added that Germany would be held accountable for the damage done by these members of the Bolsheviki faction.

Big Strike in New York

Port of New York Tied Up To-day —Strike May Spread.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The port of New York was tied up to-day when fifteen thousand members of the marine workers struck at the call. The strike was expected to spread rapidly to other marine workers. The International Longshoremen's Association met early to-day to take steps in sympathy with the Marine Workers' Affiliation. It was estimated that unless some measure was taken within a short time about 60,000 men would be idle.

Ferry boats, steamers, lighters, tow boats, coal barges, grain boats and other craft are at a standstill, according to strike leaders. Union officials announced that all the city's fire and police boats would be tied up by the calling out of the crews.

Consideration Is Promised

Municipalities May be Given Greater Control of Streets.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—Careful consideration was promised by Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, on behalf of the Ontario government in regard to resolutions of the Ontario Municipal Association for various amendments giving municipalities greater control of their own streets against company-owned utilities. A large and representative deputation from all parts of Ontario presented these demands to the government this morning. The resolutions were passed at the last convention of the Association.

THREE YEARS FOR WATSON

Was Convited of Carrying Objectionable Literature.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—Three years' imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary and a fine of five hundred dollars or a further six months' imprisonment, was the sentnce imposed by Mazistrate Kingsford to-day on Charles Watson, a former city policeman, who was convicted yesterday of having objectionable literature in his possession. The literature included a pamphlet entitled "The Red Terror," with which Toronto and other Ontario cities was recently flooded. This circular was issued by a Provisional Soldiers' and Workers' committee of Canada, and incited returning soldiers and workers to take charge of all affairs of the government and industry.

ATTEMPT TO KILL PREMIER

Canadian Press:

BASLE, Jan. 9.— An attempt has been made at Prague to assassinate Dr. Karl Kramarz, the Czecho-Slovak Premier. Eight revolver shots were fired at him, none of which, however, took effect.

THE CONGREGATION will be asked to make an OFFERING ON FRIDAY evening to defray expenses.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Diplomats Will Hold a Preliminary Canter To-day—Conference Opens Next Week.

PRELIMENARY WORK

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 9.—President Wilson's conferences with the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy, which were to open to-day, have been delayed and will probably not begin before early next week. Mr. Lloyd George is detained in London by work of reconstruction of his Cabinet. Premier Orlando, of Italy, will probably return to Rome, where his presence for forty-eight hours is necessary because of matters under consideration by the Italian government. There will, however, be a meeting to-day at the office of Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister. It will be attended by Mr. Wilson, Premier Orlando and Japanese representatives, but it will be informal because of the absence of Lloyd George, although British representatives will probably be present. It was considered best to hold a meeting and clear up some of the preliminary points, and it is believed that important details of procedure will be settled. If this is done the delegates will be in a position, when Lloyd George arrives, to complete the preliminary work rapidly and warm up for the opening conferences on Monday and Tuesday.

OPINION EXPRESSED BY LORD ROBERT CECIL

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Lord Robert Cecil, who has arrived here with the first section of the British peace delegation, expressed the opinion to the Associated Press to-day that a definite organization of a League of Nations is indispensable as the first step toward the conclusion of that enduring peace and satisfactory settlement of International problems which have arisen out of the war. Lord Robert made it clear that his statements were personal views and not an attempt to give the views of the British government.

Prayer Service at St. Paul's Church

The Speaker Was the Rev. J. R. Webb.

The services of the week of prayer are growing in interest night by night. Last evening the service was held in St. James' Methodist Church. The people came from all parts of the city in spite of the storm. The speaker was Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray Street Baptist Church, and the subject was taken from one line of Cowper's great penitential hymn, "I Hate the Sins That Made Thee Mourn." Among others, Rev. Mr. Manning, the first pastor of St. James' Church, took part in the service.

To-night the meeting will be held in Trinity Methodist Church. Rev. R. Pogue will speak on "Our Responsibility to the Returned Soldier," and the chair will be taken by Rev. D. Brown. It is hoped that there will be a large number of returned soldiers present. When from time to time the veterans have something to say to their follow citizens they rightly expect that the citizens should give them a hearing. There are no class of men in any community who have done more for the returned soldiers than the members of the Ministerial Association, and when one of their number as well qualified as the pastor of St. Paul's devotes himself to a subject like this in the week of prayer the soldiers of the city should in all fairness see that they are present.

To-morrow night the service will be held in St. Paul's Church. All members of all congregations are urged to be present. An offering will be made that night to cover the necessary expenses of the week.

Three Hundred Persons Killed In Three Days

One Result of the Street Fighting Following Proclamation of Republic—All Work Stopped Throughout Germany.

MACHINE GUN BATTLES

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 9.—The Spartacan revolution is spreading throughout Germany, according to despatches received from various sources to-day. Bolshevist uprisings were reported in Dusseldorff, Munich, Frankfort and Schwerin.

Three hundred persons were killed in the three days' fighting at Dusseldorff, where a Bolshevik republic was proclaimed.

At Munch, where 5,000 unemployed staged a demonstration, two persons were killed during a machine gun battle.

Bolsheviks, led by sailors, seized the barracks and public buildings in Schwerin, but were later driven out.

All banks in Frankfort have been closed and business was reported at a standstill.

The army classes of 1919 and 1920 have joined the Spartacans, according to a Berlin despatch received by the "Express" to-day. Fighting was said to have taken place in Leipsig and Wittenberg. An unnamed American newspaper correspondent was wounded by a grenade during street fighting in Berlin.

Entente troops, at the request of Chancellor Ebert, will occupy Berlin, according to rumours current in that city, and Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam reported to-day.

TWENTY PERSONS KILLED IN BATTLE DURING STREET RIOTS

By John Graudenz.

(United Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 9.— Twenty persons were killed in the American Embassy, which was damaged by rioters. "There is nothing in the cable to indicate that the victims were Americans."

Rumours were heard on every hand to-day that Allied troops would occupy the city to quell any rioting during national elections, January 9th. The majority of inhabitants would welcome them. Government officials would make no comment regarding the rumours.

The fighting yesterday centred in Wilhelmsplatz, in front of the American Embassy.

Prince Leopold's palace is a veritable machine gun fortress. A hundred government soldiers, wearing trench helmets and armed with grenades are camped in the ball room.

The Reichstkangler is guarded by artillery. A pitched battle is expected hourly.

The Bourse has been closed by government officials, who escaped with the key to main vault when the Spartacans seized the treasury yesterday.

WORK HAS BEEN STOPPED IN ALL PARTS OF GERMANY

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Jan. 9.— All work has been stopped throughout Germany as a result of the spreading revolution, despatches from various sources reported to-day. A Bolshevik government is said to have been proclaimed in Mannheim and Oberhausen.

A revolt has occurred in Nuremberg, where the Bolsheviks have seized the newspaper "Tagepost." In Brunswick a general strike has been proclaimed. Ten thousand persons paraded the streets, pillaging shops and occupying newspaper offices.

NO REPORT.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The State Department early to-day had no despatches bearing on the reported killing of twenty in the American Embassy at Berlin. It is regarded as possible that there were some Americans there or that the group may have included Spanish diplomatic agents, handling American affairs.

BOLSHEVISTS IN POWER AT MANY POINTS IN HUNLAND

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Jan. 9.— Street fighting continued throughout yesterday but on a smaller scale than the two previous days. The government has again obtained control of the railways.

Karl Radek, representative of the Russian Bolsheviki, motored up and down the Unter Den Linden to-day addressing the crowds.

A Bolshevik government is reported to have been proclaimed in Muelheim.

There are two Muelheims in Germany. One is located on the Rhine, nearly opposite Cologne. It is within the British bridgehead. The other is on the Ruhr river, fifteen miles northeast of Dusseldorf. The latter probably is the one referred to in the above despatch.

GENERAL STRIKE PROCLAIMED BY THE SPARTACANS

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 9.—The Spartacans have proclaimed a general strike throughout Germany for January 19, in order to prevent elections to the National Assembly, scheduled for that day, it was reported in despatches received here to-day.

Government troops have arrived in Berlin from Potsdam. The despatch said the government has captured the "Red Flag," the official newspaper of the Spartacans.

An attempt by a mob to storm the Reichsbank on Tuesday night was repulsed with machine gun fire.

Sailors from Kiel are rushing to Berlin to aid the government, it was reported in an agency despatch from Amsterdam to-day.

The despatch said the Republican Cabinet in Dermstadt has resolved to support Chancellor Ebert.

CANADIAN ORDNANCE STORES SOLD TO IMPERIAL AUTHORITIES.

LONDON, Jan. 9. — Canadian ordnance stores on this side have been sold to the Imperial authorities under an arrangement ensuring that the Canadian Government should receive 100 per cent. on all new equipment.

GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN OVERTURNED DESPATCHES SAY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Spartacans, after accepting a truce with the Government yesterday, resumed their demonstrations in Berlin, an official wireless despatch from the German capital reported to-day.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—The Ebert-Scheidemann government in Germany has been overturned, the extremists having gained the upper hand in Berlin after sanguinary fighting, according to latest German advices received here. A new Revolutionary government has been proclaimed, composed of Independent Socialists. A part of the Government troops are reported to have gone over to the rebels and Spartacans now hold the principal points in Berlin.

A DIVISION OF CAVALRY IS MASSED OUTSIDE BERLIN.

(Special to Examiner.)

BERLIN, Jan. 9. — Chancellor Ebert has issued the following manifesto:

"Liebknecht has declared war to the knife against the non-socialist population. We have hesitated too long. Therefore I appeal to you to form a volunteer republican defence guard.

General Ludendorff was reported in the Berlin despatches to-day, to have arrived in Leipzig.

A division of cavalry is reported to be massed outside of Berlin with the object of protecting the National Assembly.

THREATENS TO RESIGN.

(Special to Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 9. — Foreign Minister Brockdorff-Rantzau has threatened to resign unless ordr is restored, according to a Berlin despatch filed on Tuesday night and received by the "Handelsblad" to-day. He notified the government that the Spartacans had seized his office and that he and his staff had been forced to suspend work.

There were more than a hundred casualties, chiefly Spartacans, in the street fighting on Tuesday night, the despatch said. The government troops drove the revolutionists from the railway station and and the railway head quarters in Potsdam and Anhalt by the use of artillery.

FRESH ATTACKS BEGIN AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

The Spartacans, according to a despatch, captured the Imperial Printing Works, and 18,000,000 marks ($3,600,000) in currency.

The government has been practically imprisoned in the Imperial Chancellory, which, however, the Spartacans have been unable to capture.

This (Wednesday) morning, the Spartacans established a truce after both sides had declared that they would not use force except in defence, the despatch said.

How the armistice was adhered is is shown by the fact that at 5.10 the Spartacans stormed into Unter der Linden with printed circulars declaring that negotiations would be reopened. At 11 o'clock fresh demonstrations against the government were begun.

GARRISON TROOPS RUSHED TO BERLIN IN AUTOMOBILES.

(Special to Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, January 9. — Liebknecht, Ledebour and Scholtz, have formed a new government and have established headquarters in the Central Police Station, the Berlin despatches report to-day.

The government will declare a state of siege in Berlin, it was reported in despatches filed in that city last night, and received here to-day.

Government troops, the despatches said, have been ordered from many garrisons to rush to Berlin in automobiles.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities"

THURSDAY, JANUARY 9TH, 1919.

GENERAL HEMMING.

In the death at Kingston yesterday of Major-General T. D. R. Hemming, the soldiers of Eastern Ontario have lost a true friend. General Hemming, who until a short time ago, was the officer commanding No. 3 Military District with headquarters at Kingston, had not only proved himself an efficient and hard-working officer, but had in addition showed that he was considerable of a man as well, because he never lost sight of the interests of the private soldier and as far as lay in his power tried to make the path of the rank and file as pleasant as possible. He was never too busy to see a soldier with a grievance, and listened sympathetically to the complaints that were brought before him. Soldiers have been heard to say that it was easier sometimes for Tommy to have an audience with the General than it was to have a grievance investigated by the commanding officer of his unit. However that may be it is recognized that General Hemming, in so far as he was permitted by the red tape of his position, administered the affairs of No. 3 District with the rights and privileges of the rank and file always in mind. He has been sympathetic too towards the returned soldier, and his death will be regretted by service and ex-service men throughout the district.

A COMPREHENSIVE SCHEME.

Bruce County is to be congratulated upon its enterprise in dealing with the question of inducing returned soldiers to settle upon the land. The details of its plan to co-operate with the Ontario Government in this important matter have just been published and reveal a comprehensive, progressive policy that is far in advance of any other scheme organized in the province. Briefly it is proposed to co-operate with the Legislature in assisting Bruce County soldiers to establish themselves on farm land, principally in Northern Ontario. Shackleton Township has already been set aside by the Government for settlement by the returned soldiers from Bruce County of which it is estimated that at least one thousand will not desire to go back to their former occupations. One of the principal features of the plan is that the men from Bruce will be kept together in this new sphere of life and the friendships of peace and war days will be preserved. The Bruce Preparedness League which has been largely instrumental in preparing the details of the scheme, has succeeded in securing an agreement from the Ontario Government that the latter in addition to setting aside one township in Northern Ontario, and another if required, will construct necessary roads, employing returned soldiers for this purpose, and will erect and equip in the township the necessary camp buildings including sleep-houses, dining-room, blacksmith shop, carpenter shop, storeroom and laundry. The Government will also maintain a sufficient number of horses, wagons, sleighs and farm machinery for the use of the Bruce County Colony, will provide a sawing machine for cutting firewood, experienced foremen to supervise bush work, and trained agriculturists to look after farming operations. The County of Bruce has agreed as its part of the scheme to give initial financial assistance of $50 per soldier to help in locating him in the township, and paying his transportation and to also make a grant to the Ice Soldiers' Settlement Co-operative Association, which will be incorporated for the purpose of maintaining supplies for the soldiers.

The Bruce League and those who are assisting it in its splendid scheme have set the pace for the rest of the province.

THE HUNTER ST. BRIDGE.

The letter of Mr. R. R. Hall to His Worship Mayor Duncan, a copy of which appears in another column in to-day's issue, contains some information that should be extremely valuable in pressing the claim of the City Council in regard to Government assistance in building the Hunter St. bridge. Mr. Hall points out that in 1907 when he was the member for West Peterborough in the House of Commons, this question was taken up by him with Hon. Sidney Fisher, at that time acting Minister of Public Works, and with Hon. Dr. Pugsley who became Minister of Public Works in the autumn of the same year. The matter entered into the discussion concerning the dredging of the river north of the Hunter St. bridge, and the construction of a turning basin. It was pointed out to the Government officials at that time that it would be useless to make the river navigable north of the bridge unless the Government provided a swing in the Hunter St. bridge and assumed the expense of its operation, and Mr. Hall says that both ministers recognized the truth of this assertion, and agreed that this obligation should be undertaken by the Government. What has a more important bearing upon the present situation is Mr. Hall's statement that it was distinctly understood that when the time came to construct a high-level bridge at Hunter St., which would relieve the Government of the expense of putting in a swing in the present structure and maintaining it, the Dominion would make a substantial grant towards the construction of the high-level bridge.

"I remember distinctly," writes Mr. Hall, "that this proposition was acquiesed in and approved of by both the Hon. Sidney Fisher and the Hon. Dr. Pugsley."

The principle that was approved by the Government in 1907 should appeal with equal force to the Government of 1919. The facts are that the river was dredged and made navigable north of Hunter St., and the channel thus provided is of no use, unless it is possible for vessels to pass through or under the bridge at this point. It would be necessary if the work of making the channel in that part of the river is not to be wasted to place a swing in the present bridge and this is a matter that would have to be carried out by the Government. If the Government is relieved of this responsibility through the City of Peterborough constructing a high-level bridge, then the Government in justice should in lieu of what would have had to be expended pay a portion of the cost. The recognition of this conclusion by the ministers twelve years ago should be emphasized by the City Council in taking up the matter with the present Government.

A WAR MEMORIAL.

At this time when so much is heard of memorials for Canada's heroic soldiers, homes for veterans, and other suggested ways of expressing the appreciation of the people to those who helped to bring victory to the Allied cause, the following article from the New York Outlook describing a plan that is being adopted in a little New England town may be of interest. The Outlook says:—

A town meeting was called to consider what form the memorial to the sons of Catasanqua who served in the war should take. The meeting hall was crowded, and no New England town meeting was ever more representative. Bankers and ironworkers, preachers and puddlers from the furnaces, cement burners and labourers, mingled with women who had rolled bandages for the Red Cross and thought of sons across the seas. The question was propounded for discussion: "Shall we have a monument or a memorial house which will be a real community centre?" and the memorial house won by a majority so large, that the votes for the monument were not even counted.

This is the plan they will follow. Every man, woman, and child in the community is asked to become a share-holder in the Memorial Society by making a subscription of one, two, three, four, or five cents weekly for a period of five years. With this they will build a house costing in the neighbourhood of $125,000, containing an auditorium, recreation-rooms, gymnasium, and swimming pool. There will also be a room for permanent records of the war with a bronze tablet containing the roster of soldier sons. It will be managed by a Board of Governors chosen by the subscribers, and the property will be held by a Board of Trustees chosen for life. It is proposed to make it the centre of the community life in every way. The auditorium will have gatherings where every public question may be discussed. Here also on Thanksgiving Day or on other National occasions the churches of the community will gather for united worship. Catasauqua was founded by Welsh ironworkers, and the Welsh love of music has not died from the hearts of their descendants, so that it would be strange if an eisteddfod were not occasionally held there. Lecture courses of all sorts have a place in the plan. The gymnasium will afford facilities for dances of a better type than those found in the usual dance-halls. But most of all it will be a place peculiarly for the soldier who comes back, where he can gather with his comrades and recount the tale that America will never tire of hearing—of Chateau Thierry and the Argonne. This place will be his, erected in his honour, and because it is his and because he and his comrades are naturally going to lead the community in the coming years, just as his grandfather did after he came from the Civil War, so more and more the community life will centre about the Memorial House.

Catasauqua might have inflicted another monstrousity on the world, but instead it has given it a breeding-place for a better and more intelligent democracy. And what better memorial could there be for the men who made the world safe for democracy?

CORRECTING AN INJUSTICE?

A cable from England announces that it is understood that a decision has been reached by which the Canadian Government is to pay the cost of transporting to Canada the wives and families of Canadiana soldiers at present in England. It is to be sincerely hoped that the report is correct, and that it will also include the reimbursing of those soldiers who have had to pay the transportation of their families out of their own pockets. It has been a glaring injustice to Canada's fighting men that while civilian workmen who went to England to do war work have been provided with free transportation, with similar privileges for their wives and families to the country from which they came, soldiers' families have had hitherto to pay their own fare. There has been much complaint among soldiers over this condition of affairs, and the outrageous manner in which the men who risked all on the battlefield, have been discriminated against has attracted the attention of the well-known English publication, John Bull, which in a recent issue prints this crisp comment:

Who are the most important persons in the Empire? Well, that question may be difficult to answer. Try another! Who are the least important? In one big burst all the official persons shout "The common soldier!" But no, they don't shout it; they don't even whisper it. They just act as if it were so. We don't need to tell you what the Canadian trops have done in this war, and you would think they merited some small amount of gratitude from their Government and ours. Do they get it? Not much! At least not any that's worth a tinker's anathema. For in the plans to repatriate the wives and children of Canadian soldiers from England, less consideration is shown to them than to the merest alien. It is unbelievable, but it is true. A notice has been posted informing married soldiers that their wives and children must return home at once or wait till the normal passenger service is resumed. The fares will be as follows: 1st class, adults £13, children from one to twelve years £6 10s., babies under one year £1 10s.; 3rd class, adults £7 10s., children from one to twelve years £3 15s., babies under one years 10s. So much for the soldiers' families! At the same time the Ministry of Labour announces that workmen of British nationality who came to this country from overseas for Government work will be entitled, together with their wives and children under eighteen, to free conveyance to the country from which they came. Alien workmen are also entitled to free repatriation.

So outrageous is this difference in treatment that we shall try to believe either that (1) an official has gone mad, or (2) that an office boy has been allowed to draft the notice, and that what is really meant is that if the wives and children of Canadian troops go now they go free, but if they wait they will be charged full fares. But our wishes get a blow on the head when we learn that overseas forces are specially excepted from the assistance to be given to the wives and families of sailors, soldiers and R.A.F. men whose homes are abroad. These women and children will get free rail to the port of embarkation, free messing on board (except for officers' wives and families) and free rail and boat from the port of landing. The Canadian soldiers' family, then, is to get nothing. The civilian worker's family and the alien worker are to get all. It is monstrous. The debt we owe to these men is all forgotten. The sufferings of these women and children are all forgotten. The work so many of these women have done in the war is all forgotten. It is at the behest of a soulless shipping ring that the Government is prepared to commit this crime? The women and children must pass toll free.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Hull firemen who tapped a city sewer to salvage a quantity of confiscated whiskey, poured into the sewer by the police, showed an ingenuity that would be valuable in the political field.

Labour Men Ask Minister For Better Arrangements to Meet Him Here Next Week

Mr. A. J. Bidwell Succeeds Mr. J. J. Hartley as President of the Trades and Labour Council—Hugh Robertson Endorsed for Labour Bureau Proposed for Peterboro.

TRUSTEES' FINANCES SOUND

The Trades and Labour Council began the new year last night with a special meeting that drew an exceptionally large attendance, and with bright hopes inspired by the election of its four municipal candidates. Those of whom were present as aldermen-elect—Mr. A. J. Bidwell presided in the absence of Mr. J. J. Hartley, from whom a letter was received acknowledging the Council's kind wishes and their expression of sympathy in his bereavement.

Mr. Robert Morrison thanked the labor candidates for their support in the recent elections, and intimated to his supporters all those who had voted for their opponents. Labour candidates. Mr. Alex. Murray invited the Council to take up their duties in the City Council without any reservations to those south of the Murray region to the benefit of the whole city. He moved the following resolution, which was carried unanimously:

"That the Trades and Labour Council tender its hearty congratulations to Aldermen-elect Bidwell, Morrison, Murray and Carew on their success at the polls, and that we pledge them our hearty support in the Council in their endeavors to have the work at the Asylum for the Insane carried out as speedily as possible, and that we also pledge them our hearty support in their endeavors to have the Public Utilities Commission established in this city."

Mr. Murray moved that the Council go on record as favoring the appointment of Hugh Robertson as the Labour representative on the Public Library Board. Mr. Carew seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Bidwell moved that the Council go on record as favoring the appointment of Mr. Hartley as the Labour representative on the Board of Control. Mr. Murray

Describes Wild Scenes of Celebration in Trieste as Italians Take Possession

ROME.— Tales of wild enthusiasm and unbounded joy are being received daily from those who were in Trieste on the first day when the Italians triumphantly entered the harbour, November 3, and took possession of that Italian city, so long held by the Austrians. From before dawn, when the ship bearing the Italian Governor of Trieste entered the harbour, to daylight of the next day there was a continued round of festivities. At night the activities reached their height, and the revellers did not cease their celebrations until they were forced to do so from sheer exhaustion. The report of one of the Italian correspondents in the city follows in part:

"Every one of us (in the Italian exposition which came to claim the city) was embraced and kissed at least a hundred times. They filled our arms with flowers. 'It is four years we have been waiting for you,' they cried, and every one of us was worshipped like a god on an altar. The big stairway of the City Hall was flooded with light, with a new crowd, more flags and flowers. * * * For the present the National Guard is doing its best to keep order. Among them are men of all ages—men in civilian clothes, in Austrian uniforms, in Italian uniform, in hunting outfits, with large cockades and bits of the tricolour, small leather belts about their waists and guns in their hands; they rush up and down the stairway, trying to keep back the crowd; they want to show their hospitality, and they laugh and cry and are much befuddled in the use of their guns.

Dressed in Flags.

"The atmosphere is full of the feeling of '48. The women have flags for shirt waists, plumes of the bersaglieri and silver stars in their hats; pinned on their breasts are emblems with the faces of Mazini, Garibaldi, Dante, Verdi. Their faces are lit with enthusiasm, their hair dishevelled. Mingling with the crowd are Austrian infantry officers with the Italian tricolour in their buttonholes, officers of the Austrian navy with the colours of Jugoslavia. Italian officers who escaped from Austrian prisons in Hungarian uniforms, parading with a stunned and tranquil expression on their faces as one who has received all his rewards in one supreme moment.

"It is impossible for me to recount in order the gaudy happenings of that evening. I know that every now and then I found myself weeping with a weeping throng. In one saloon they were kissing flags. Outside in the square the bersaglieri of General Coralli were arriving. The bersaglieri in Trieste! Who would have thought it only two days ago? Music, marching, and still more flags and flowers! The clock of the municipal tower shone over the tumult like a nocturnal sun.

Seize Car Liquor Shipped as Gum

WINNIPEG, Jan. 7.—A carload of liquor was seized at the Canadian Pacific railway yards by License Inspector White. The carload was shipped as "chewing gum" from Montreal to a local warehouse, but this warehouse, not having ordered a shipment of gum, took no action in the matter when in the ordinary course of business it was notified by the railway company that the car had arrived. After notifying the warehouse a second time, the railway company wired the shippers in Montreal, and in return was notified that the shipment was intended for the Standard Chewing Gum Co., of Winnipeg, a non-existing firm. The liquor which had been shipped in every kind of containers, kegs, bottles, cases and tin cans, was removed in three lorry loads to the vault at the law courts. This is the largest seizure made in Manitoba.

PRONG OF FORK PIERCED THE EYE

OMEMEE, Jan. 9. — The sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fee met with a most unfortunate accident a week ago when endeavouring to take a knot out of her shoe lace with a fork, the fork slipping and penetrating the eye. The little sufferer was taken to a Peterborough hospital, where every effort to save the eye is being made.

The Government in 1907 Agreed to Pay Part of the Cost of a New Bridge at Hunter Street

Mr. R. R. Hall, in a Letter to Mayor Duncan, Says That in 1907 the Minister of Public Works Agreed to Assume a Share of the Expense—Reported the Matter to Late Mayor Best.

GOV'T DREDGED THE RIVER

In the following letter to Mayor Duncan, which has been forwarded to Hon. F. B. Carvell, Mr. R. R. Hall recalls the negotiations he had with the Minister of Public Works in 1907 respecting the Government's share in the cost of a high level bridge at Hunter street:

Peterborough, Jan. 7, 1919.

G. H. Duncan, Esq.,
Mayor of Peterborough,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Mayor,—

I have noticed by the Press that the Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, is visiting Peterborough and that you have made certain representations to him in reference to the construction of the new Hunter street bridge and the contribution that the Government should reasonably make.

During the time I had the honor of being member for West Peterborough this matter was informally taken into consideration by the Hon. Sidney Fisher who was then acting Minister of Public Works and later by the Hon. Wm. Pugsley, who subsequently became Minister of Public Works early in the fall of 1907.

I observe that on the 9th of April 1907 Mr. J. G. Sing, Engineer in charge for the Department of Public Works wrote me as follows:

"On the 23rd June last I sent to the Chief Engineer a report, plan and estimate of cost of constructing a channel North of the Hunter street bridge about 100 feet in width with a turning basin at the Northerly end thereof 150 feet by 300 feet. This channel extends about 1,000 feet North of the Hunter Street bridge.

"Also on the 27th of December last, I wrote to the Chief Engineer with reference to constructing the channel north of the Hunter Street bridge, stating that a certain portion of this work would have to be blasted and that I had made an examination and was of the opinion that the blasting could be carried on successfully during the winter months. The material would then be ready to be removed by the dredge in the spring."

"In reply to the above I received instructions from Ottawa dated the 6th of February, to proceed immediately with the work of drilling and blasting in the Otonabee River in accordance with my report of the 27th December last, and as you will see, in that report I referred specifically to the work North of the Hunter Street bridge, and it was for this locality that my report and estimate in the first instance, was sent to the Department accompanied by a plan showing the channel from Hunter Street bridge north."

You will observe that the Dominion Government authorized dredging to be done north of the Hunter Street bridge and proceeded with this work and I believe substantially completed the turning basin in question.

I might say that at the time I discussed this work with the Hon. Sidney Fisher and subsequently with the Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works that their attention was drawn specifically to the fact that the turning basin north of Hunter Street bridge could not be used unless a swing were placed in the bridge at the expense of the Dominion Government and unless a man was kept in constant charge by the Government and at its expense to operate the swing bridge and that this swing in the bridge would have to be maintained at the expense of the Government. Both the Ministers conceded to that.

I advised them, however, that the City of Peterborough contemplated building a high level bridge across the Otonabee River at this point and that there was no immediate necessity for the placing of a swing in the bridge. It was distinctly understood that when the time came to construct a high level bridge and if the Government were relieved of the expense of putting in a swing and operating and maintaining it, the Government would make a substantial contribution to the cost of the cost of the construction of the bridge in lieu thereof.

I remember distinctly that this proposition was acquised in and approved of by both Hon. Sidney Fisher and Hon. Mr. Pugsley. I do not appear to have any letters from either of the Ministers particularly referring to the Hunter Street bridge, but I do remember distinctly reporting the result of one of my interviews to the late Mayor Best and to Mr. Robert Stuart as to the Government's willingness to make a substantial contribution to the construction of the new high level bridge at this point in lieu of having to build a swing in the present bridge and maintain and operate it for all time to come.

Yours faithfully,
R. R. Hall.

Frederick Lewis and Louise Orth in "The Wanderer," the Massive Production, with over 100 people at "The Grand," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week. The box sale opens to-morrow (Friday) morning.

An original metropolitan cast, almost in its entirety, is promised for the production of "The Wanderer," at the Grand Opera House, three nights, commencing Monday evening, January 13th, with matinee Wednesday.

Prominent among the well known players are Frederick Lewis, Flo Florence Auer, Richard Thornton, Olga Newton, Henry Duggan, Louise Orth, Mabel Montgomery, Francesca Karmonova, and a host of others.

"The Wanderer" is based upon the parable of the Prodigal Son. Maurice Samuel wrote it. David Belasco staged it, William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Cost produced it.

Its success wherever it has been shown has been unprecedented. In New York it ran through two solid seasons. In Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago it remained for three months in each instance.

1,876,411 Tons of Shipping Built in England in 1918

Article in London Observer Tells of Wonder Work in Naval Engineering.

LONDON—In an article on shipbuilding the Sunday Observer says the total output of the United Kingdom during 1918 of both naval and mercantile ships was 1,245 vessels, or 1,876,411 tons and 4,34,,260 horse power.

"The wonder work of the war period," says the Observer, "is to be found not in mercantile shipbuilding but in naval and above all things in naval engineering. On the Clyde alone during the war 481 vessels of 770,347 tons and 6,093,830 horse power were constructed as additions to the naval strength of the country. In this total are included no merchant vessels ordered by the government and no general service trawlers, tugs or handycraft built on government order.

"The list is composed of battle ships, battle cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers and submarines, together wit harmed merchant cruisers, seaplane carriers, monitors, mine sweep sloops, which are really little lighter than cruisers, or low speed destroyers, gunboats, patrol boats, hospital steamers and also the "O" boats and "PQ" boats, of which so little could be said while the war was on or can even yet be said.

All Except the Hood to be Scrapped

"The battle cruiser Hood was the greatest of all our mystery ships. She and the Rodney would have been the greatest surprise packages of the war. In speed and gun power they were to have exceeded anything afloat. Only the Hood, however, will be completed as a great specimen of the latest in British naval architecture. All that existed of the Rodney will be scrapped.

"But it is really in marine engineering that the year 1918 and the war period as a whole have been extraordinary. The twelve months' record in production of the ships' machinery is held by the Walls & Shipway Company, Ltd., of Wallsend-on-Tyne, which turned out engines of 316,200 horse power.

"This year 1916, however, was the year of the highest records, the Fair field Company, on the Clyde, alone producing marine propelling machinery totalling 468,410 horse power. This was the year when high power destroyers were being turned out almost en masse by all firms for the purpose of hunting down German submarines, and it will live for all time in the industrial annals of the United Kingdom, as a year of extraordinary shipbuilding activity and one which contributed more than any other to the supremacy at sea which ultimately strangled Germany and compelled her to cry aloud for peace."

Shipping Situation Eased.

Sir Joseph Maclay, the Minister for Shipping, said in an interview that the ending of hostilities had eased the shipping position enormously and had permitted tonnage available for bringing imports to the British Isles to be increased by something equivalent to 10,000,000 tons of goods per annum.

"Shipping losses having ceased and the output of tonnage continuing to increase," said Sir Joseph, "the position grows easier day by day. The time is not far distant when it will be possible to release tonnage from requisition on a substantial scale and thereby create a free market in tonnage and freight.

"Already the amount of space available for commercial cargoes in the North Altantic has been doubled and instead of cargo competing for space is now competing for cargo. In spite of our heavy losses we have no reason to think that British shipping will not be fully equal to the demand likely to be made upon it.

"The great need of the moment is coal for export. On coal exports the whole of our shipping and financial positions depend. We hope that with the release of miners from the army it will not be long before ships which now have, perforce, to go in ballast, can take outward cargoes, thereby at once relieving the financial situation.

Tenants of Apartments Fined if They Stay Out After Hours

WARSAW, Jan. 9.—The waiters and janitors of Warsaw, who are among the few having steady work and good pay, have gone on strike, and the house servants are expected to follow their example. The domestics even now are only consenting to work if the mistress does her share of the labours of the household, especially the dish washing and similar services. The waiters demand fifteen per cent of the profits of the hotels and restaurants, while the cooks are asking tweny-five per cent.

The janitors demand a ten-hour day, with the front doors closed at 9 o'clock in the evening. As the tenants have no keys to the front doors of the apartment houses they are obliged to stay indoors through fear of being compelled to pass the night in the streets. The janitors, however, express willingness to concede permission for the tenants to go out after 9 o'clock and come in late if they pay a fine of one mark for each time they thus trouble the janitor. Most of the evening engagements of apartment dwellers are being given up owing to this situation and the streets are virtually deserted at night.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

A Valuable Hint
Adjusting and fitting glasses should not be attempted by anyone unskilled.
It is not alone a question of good looks and comfort. Glasses to be right and helpful to the eyes must fit correctly, otherwise the eye muscles are subject to a continual strain, which most often results seriously.
We use every aid known to modern Optometry. Our lenses are ground correctly. Our Glasses fitted and adjusted so that the lenses are capable of fulfilling their duty without the handicaps of misfits and poor design.

REVIEW OF EGG MARKET AND POULTRY SITUATION

Chinese Eggs Are Coming Into the Market—Storage Stocks—Noticeable Increase in Receipts.

The market is now approaching the season which frequently causes more or less uncertainty. The factors in ordinary seasons are,—first, the quantity of storage eggs on hand at the first of the year; second, the extent of current production; respecting which the weather is an important factor; third, the availability of Southern States eggs; fourth, the possible arrival of other foreign eggs, particularly Chinese. Storage stocks in both the United States and Canada are low for the season. The new lay with mild weather is increasing, fresh local receipts being now a considerable factor on eastern and British Columbia markets. Two years ago the first Southern States eggs came on the Canadian market shortly after the middle of January. Last year with interrupted transportation they did not appear until March. The current lay is reported heavy in the Southern States and in California, and these eggs are now a considerable factor on the eastern States markets. While for a time it appeared as if Chinese shell eggs would be a considerable factor this year, the scarcity of shipping has to be taken into consideration. Considerabe quantities of dried and frozen Chinese eggs have been arriving for some time and some 600 cases of shell eggs reached Vancouver on the 2nd instant. Under these conditions it is difficult for even the best informed to forecast the market from day to day. The situation is normal and the undertone firm but at the same time producers and country shippers would be well advised to keep their stocks cleaned up daily.

Supplies Increase

Montreal and Toronto report a noticeable increase in fresh receipts during and particularly towards the close of last week Some Toronto dealers have decided to reduce their jobbing prices from 3c to 5c per dozen, to keep the decks clear. Trading is somewhat nervous. The strong feature in the market is the scarcity of storage eggs. Some delaers are now out of stock and have to depend entirely on fresh receipts to supply their regular trade.

A sale of 100 cases October storage eggs was reported during the week at 60c delivered Toronto. Ontario country shippers report sales of fresh gathered at 58c to 70c f.o.b. The latter price for fancy specials.

Reports from the United States markets show prices up one day and down the next. At the close of the week ending December 28th the Chicago price of Fresh Firsts dropped to 58½c. to 59c and by Tuesday had reacted to 62 to 63c.

Poultry

Toronto and Montreal report few arrivals of fresh dressed birds during the week, but there was sufficient left over from Christmas to more than meet the demand for New Years. Demand was fair. No chage in prices as compared with Christmas. The demand for carlots is said to be increasing in Montreal, some having been shipped and others are on order. Usually there are considerabe arrivals of crate-fatted stock after the turn of the year. This class of stock should meet a satisfactory market in the course of ten days to two weeks.

The New Year's market in New York was very satisfactory. It is reported to have been the best clean-up in years. The same situation was reported from Buffalo. Western Ontario shippers who sent their live poultry to Buffalo last week, report having received returns which netted them 28c for both chickens and fowl.

Export.

Eggs—Season closed.

Poultry—Montreal reports cable inquiries form London asking for quotations on chickens.

Weather—Extremely cold in middle West, also lower temperatures last week in Brjtish Columbia and Lastern Canada. After two below zero days Sunday and Monday, there is a change in Eastern Ontario and Quebec (Tuesday) to milder weather with light snow.

Lakefield Council Held a Meeting

It Was Decided to Purchase 800 Feet of Fire Hose.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 9.—The Village Council met in the office of the clerk, Mr. W. Sherin, on Monday night. The Reeve and all the Councillors were present. It was decided to purchase at once 800 feet of hose with nozzles and couplings.

Reeve Moore and Councillor McDonald were appointed to secure premises for a Council room, libreray, etc., and with power to purchase furniture for the same.

Official Record.

The many friends of Capt. Marling will be interested to learn the particulars of how he received the Military Cross. The record reads:

"Capt. T.W.B. Marling, 2nd Batt., Eastern Ontario Regiment, for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his company through intense machine gun fire and assaulted a wood with great determination. Though severely wounded he carried on until he had handed over to the next officer."

Party Entertained.

Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie entertained about thirty of their friends at "The Grove" on Tuesday evening. The party, which was intended for the children, was a delightful affair and was fully as enjoyable to the grown-ups.

Children's Party.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Tate gave a most enjoyable children's party on Friday evening last.

NORTH SMITH

A very pleasing event took place Friday evening January 3rd., when the friends and neighbours of Pte. John Montgomery gathered at Wesley Methodist Church, of which Pte. Montgomery was a valued member. The gathering took the form of a reception to welcome Pte. Montgomery home from France. He having arrived home on New Year's day.

The evening was spent in musical selections, patriotic songs and addrss followd by a fowl supper, after which was rendered "For he's a jolly good Fellow," for Pte. Montgomery The gathering dispersed after singing "God save the King."

Pte. Montgomery enlisted and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion from Peterboro. While in England he was transferred and went to France with the Canadian Mounted Rifles. He has seen considerable active service, was wounded at Vimy Ridge and was returned to England to a hospital. On recovering he went to France a second time. About the middle of last September, he was taken prisoner and remained in the hands of the Germans until the signing of the armistice. Pte. Montgomery can relate many thrilling events of his experience in the firing line and his return from prison camp.

Many a good reputation has been stabbed by a pointed tongue.

The County Roads Question Discussed by Mr. E. Elliott

A Reply to the Letter Written by Mr. Brethen of Norwood—The City of Peterboro.

On reading a letter written by Mr. Brethen of Norwood, the only conclusion you can come to is that he is conscienteous and has no special object other than the bettering of the roads, and whilst others might not agree to everything he advances, I trust he will not call it "personal abuse."

True the farmer does not use the hoe, the sidkle or the flail, yet 100 farmers do not pay 80 and 60 per cent. of the cost of modern machinery, for every 20 out of the 100 to use, each must buy his own, and machinery purchased for county roads, lan only be used on county roads, and this is where the trouble begins. He states that the City of Peterborough would contribute $7,000 from a $14,000,000 assessment, but the assessment is $12,000,000, and instead of $7,000, $6,000 would be available for a suburban era for a certain distance out from the city. At all events t he amount available from the city elicited reference from Mr. Brethen acs a substantial sum to assist in such road construction and maintenance. Then $20,000 auto fees would make the sum $27,000.00. Then with Government assistance on county roads to the extent of 40 per cent. on construction and 40 per cent on maintenance would be more like up-to-date provision.

You can plainly observe that a city is limited to ⅓ mill on the dollar, and their auto fees are available only upon the farmers of the county paying 60 and 80 per cent to get them to expend on the only roads the people of the cities travel outsid of the city.

With regard to Mr. Brethen's statement about "political rancour or prejudice," I do not know who he refers to. As for myself I have opposed the scheme for 20 years when advanced, as I see it, unfair to the farmers. Referring to the majority of the County Counuils adopting it, appears to Mr. Brethen as conclusive evidence that it is the proper scheme. Then why not submit it to the ratepayers as a whole and not railroad it through the County Council or stampede" it as he says, then the majority at the poles would evade many misinterpretations.

Do not overlook the fact that a city cannot be compelled to raise more than ½ mill on the dollar in a year to construct and maintain the roads they do all of their county travelling over, and those same roads are used constantly by not more than 25 per cent of the farmers, yet with the assistance set out in the Act from the Governmnt and the ½ mill from the city at least 4 mills would be required from the farmers, and all interior roads to keep up besides.

Yurs resepectfully,
ED. M. ELLIOTT.

IRVIN S. COBB ON THE SALVATION ARMY.

(From the Saturday Evening Post.)

I have yet to meet any soldier, whether a brigadier or a private, who if he spoke at all of the Salvation Army did not speak in terms of fervent gratitude for the aid that the Salvation Army are rendering so unostentationusly and yet so very effectively. Let a sizable body of troops move from one station to another and hard on its heels came a squad of men and women of the Salvation Army. An army truck may bring them or it may be that they have a battered jitney to move them and their scanty outfits. Usually they do not ask for help from anyone in reaching their destination. They find lodgment in a wrecked shell of a house or in the corner of a barn. By main force and awkwardness they set up their equipment, and very soon the word is spread among the troops that at such-and-such a place the Salvation Army is serving free hot drinks and free doughnuts and free pies. They specialize in doughnuts, the Salvation Army in the field does, the real, old-fashioned, home-made ones that taste of home to a home-sick soldier boy.

I did not see this, but one of my associates did. He saw it last winter in a dismal hole on the Toul sector. A file of our troops were finishing a long hike through rain and snow, over roads knee deep in half-thawed, icy slush. Cold and wet and miserable, they came tramping into a cheerless, half-empty town, within sound and range of the German guns. They found a reception committee awaiting them there—in the person of two Salvation Army lasses and one Salvation Army Captain. The women had a fire going in the dilapidated oven of a vanished villager's kitchen.

One of them was rolling out the batter on a plank with an old wine bottle for a rolling pin and using the top of a tin can to cut the dough into circular strips. The other woman was cooking the doughnuts, and as fast as they were cooked the man served them out, spitting hot, to hungry, wet boys, clamoring about the door, and nobody was asked to pay a cent.

Interesting Letter From a Peterboro Soldier in Germany

Sapper P. Lynch is in Germany With the Canadian Army of Occupation.

The following interesting letter has been received from Sapper R. Lynch, a former member of the 93rd Battalion now in Germany with the Canadian army of occupation. The letter which is addressed to his wife, Mrs. Lynch, 29 Victoria Avenue, follows:

Bonn, Germany,
Hotel Reinscheir

My dearest wife:—Just a line to let you know that I am in the best of health and I hope that you and the children are the same. We arrived in this city on Wednesday afternoon. It is nearly farther up than we were before and we are on the banks of the famous Rhine river. We are supposed to stay here until the terms of peace are signed. This includes the bill of damages and the Germans have only five more days to get a stable government and if they do not we will take possession of the whole of Germany and rule the country ourselves.

One Hostile.

The people are friendly enough but some of them are hostile and as usual every one of us go around armed and we don't intend to be caught napping. This city is noted for its university and it seems a very rich city. There are some very wide streets and big buildings and as you will notice by the post cards that I send you the people are the usual square headed bunch. There is a big bunch of our men staying in the university and every one has a good bed to sleep upon. Myself, Irish and the captain are staying at one of the leading hotels and Irish and I have a large room and everything up-to-date. To-day all the Canadians marched through the city and the Burgomaster told the people to raise their hats when they saw the flags.

Although the people seem well dressed they have been nearly starved to death and what food they do have is all doped up with all kinds of chemicals. How long we are going to be here I don't know. There has been nothing but rain since we came here The people have to be off the streets by 7:30 and it is up to them to make the best of a bad job. There is one thing, his railways are all right and we will soon have trains running up direct.

Give my best regards to everybody I remain,

Your loving husband,
R. Lynch, 195129,
Canadian Corps of Signallers,
Headquarters, B.E.F., France.

Begin Efforts to Float Transport

Last of Stranded Ship's Passengers Reach Hoboken After Night on Destroyer.

BAY SHORE, L. I., Jan. 8.—With a clear sky, a favoring wind, and a calm sea the work of floating the transport Northern Pacific was begun here and word was sent ashore that the job was progressing favorably This is interpreted to mean that the fleet of powerful wrecking tugs straining at the stranded hull have succeeded in moving the Northern Pacific nearer deep water and away from the resting place in the sand she found at 3 o'clock on New Year's morning. It is thought here that the Northern Pacific will not be clear of the sand until high tide. Big wrecking tugs and scows equipped with powerful machinery are alongside the stranded vessel awaiting each favorable opportunity to pull her from the sands.

Although the bleak strip of sand known as Lonelyville, held but a few Red Cross workers and lifeguards yesterday, standing by on the remote chance that their services might be needed, many curious persons, principally from adjacent Long Island towns, tried to get over to Lonelyville to see the beached boat. Those who braved a rather choppy sea in Great South Bay found that their ten-mile trip through spray and piercing wind had been in vain, for the detachment of men from Company E 13th Infantry, had orders to refuse landing to all except relief workers.

The Norther Pacific has fisted still further to seaward, and, urged by the pounding of the surf, slid another twenty-five feet or so off shore. This shifting of the ship, according to Commander Kayes, in charge of the work of floating the ship, indicates that the wrecking tugs should have little difficulty in their task. It is expected here that when the Northern Pacific is floated she will be towed in to New York Harbor, and laid up in dry dock for examinaion and for repairs to her condensing apparatus, which has been slightly damaged by sand, which came through her intake pipes.

Orchestra Arrived This Morning

Valuable Harp Fell to the Ground and Escaped Damage.

The famous symphony orchestra with "Hearts of the World," arrived at eight o'clock this morning via Grank Trunk, and as the instruments were being unloaded from the baggage car the valuable harp used by Mr. Anthony Briglio fell to the ground heavily. It was thought to be damaged badly, but when taken out of its case was in perfect condition with the exception of six strings being broken which were replaced by Mr. Briglio. Several of the famous "Birth of a Nation" soloists are with the aggregation including Mr. Briglio, Adolph Koller and Joseph Williams, violinists; Frank Lapetina, the young 'cellist; Carl Wawner, contra bass soloist, and Henry Strube, the renowned tympanist.

Fringe still appears on skirts.
Round necks continue in dresses.
Many capes have huge cuffs of fur.

CLARKE-KENNEDY AND PTE. YOUNG WINNERS OF V.C.

Commander of 24th Battalion and Stretcher Bearer of 87th Grenadier Guards Win Highest Awards in Empire.

Two more Montrealers have been added to the gallant little band of Canadians who have merited the Victoria Cross, the highest decoration which it is in the Empire's power to give the bravest of its men.

Lieut.-Colonel Clarke-Kennedy and Pte. John Francis Young are the last names to be added to Montreal's V.C.'s.

The decoration is open to all ranks and may be won alike by brigadier-general and by private. But only daring and gallant conduct involving extreme risk of life can bring the Cross as a reward.

Of the five Montreal men who have won the honour two lost their lives in the winning of it. To the names of Major F. A. C. Scrimger, the late Corp. Fred. Fisher and the late Sergt. Robert Spall are added the name of the officer who commanded the 24th Battalion through the spring and summer campaign, and the name of a stretcher-bearer of the 87th Grenadier Guards.

Col. Clark-Kennedy, V.C.

The details of the gallant action for which Lieut.-Colonel Clark-Kennedy has been awarded the Victoria Cross have been received by The Star in a cable despatch from London. The Cross was awarded for "most conspicuous bravery, initiative and skilful leading on August 27 and 28 last, when commanding the Twenty-fourth Battalion. On August 27 he led his battalion with great bravery and skill from the Crow and Aigrett trenches in front of Wancourt to the attack on the Fresnoy-Rouvroy line. From the outset the brigade, whereof the battalion commanded by Colonel Kennedy was the central unit, came under very heavy shell and machine gun fire, suffering many casualties, especially among the leaders. The units became partially disorganized and the advance was checked. Appreciating the vital importance to the brigade front of a lead by the centre, and undismayed by the annihilating fire, Colonel Clark-Kennedy, by sheer personality and initiative, inspired his men and led them forward. On several occasions he set an outstanding example by leading parties straight at the machine gun nests which were holding up the advance and overcame these obstacles. Colonel Clark-Kennedy, by controlling the direction of the neighboring units and collecting the men who had lost their leaders, rendered valuable services in strengthening the line and enabled the whole brigade to move forward. By the afternoon, very largely due to his determination and disregard for his own life, his battalion, despite heavy losses, had made good the maze of trenches west of Cherisy and Cherisy village, had crossed the Sensee River bed and had occupied the Occident trench in front of the heavy wire of the Fresnoy-Rouvroy line under continuous fire. Colonel Clark-Kennedy went up and down his line until far into the night, improving the position and giving wonderful encouragement to the men. He sent back very clear reports.

"Next day he again showed valorous leadership in the attack on the Fresnoy-Rouvroy line and Upton Wood. Though severely wounded soon after the start, he refused aid and dragged himself to a shellhole, from which he could observe. Realizing that the exhausted troops could not advance further he established a strong line of defence, thereby preventing the loss of most important ground. Despite intense pain and serious loss of blood he refused to be evacuated for over five hours, by which time he had established a line in a position from which it would be possible for relieving troops to continue the advance. It is impossible to overestimate the results achieved by the valor and leadership of this officer."

Also Has Croix de Guerre.

The Victoria Cross is the culminating honor that has fallen to Lieut.-Colonel W. H. Clark-Kennedy, but the distinguished commander of the 24th Battalion already holds the Croix de Guerre with palm, the D.S.O. with bar, and the C.M.G.

Colonel Calrk-Kennedy has been in the Daughters of the Empire Hospital in Hyde Park, London, since early in September, when he fell upon the battlefield, shot through the knee. He will return to Montreal next month, according to information received by his wife's relatives here.

The Clark-Kennedys are a fighting family. Colonel Clark-Kennedy's grandfather was decorated on the field in the Battle of Waterloo. His father gave his life for the Empire in the Boer War. His three brothers in the Old Country and William Hew Clark-Kennedy in Canada all volunteered for service at the outbreak of the Great War, and two of the four sleep in soldiers' graves.

When Captain W. H. Clark-Kennedy of the 13th Battalion left Canada in the autumn of 1914, he had already a record of gallant fighting in South Africa behind him. He had also been connected with the Canadian Militia, as he held a position as Captain in the 5th Royal Highlanders.

In the famous action at St. Julien and Langemarck in the Ypres salient in the spring of 1915, Captain Clark-Kennedy was reported killed, but the official news of his death was shortly contradicted by a private cable from him to say that though the battalion's losses had been heavy he had come through scatheless. France awarded him her highest military honor, the Croix de Guerre with palm, for his gallant work in that action. Later he won his majority and was appointed brigade major of the 5th Brigade, 2nd Division. The Distinguished Service Order was awarded him after Festubert.

Recommended Once Before.

Last February he was promoted Lieutenant-Colonel and appointed to the command of the 24th Battalion, serving with it until wounded in August. His gallant conduct in the August fighting has already brought him a bar to the D.S.O. and the C.M.G.

Colonel Clark-Kennery has been recommended for the V.C. once before, following the second battle of Ypres.

Born in Scotland in 1880, Colonel Clark-Kennedy came to Canada in 1903, and in eleven years of his residence in Montreal became widely known and equally widely popular. He was connected with the Standard Life Assurance Company, first as secretary and afterwards as assistant manager. While training at Valcartier in September, 1914, he married Miss Kate Reford, daughter of the late Robert Reford. Mrs. Clark-Kennedy is at present in England.

Before going to Valcartier, Colonel Clark-Kennedy had been living at the Linton with his close friend, Major Warmington, who was later killed in action.

Many of Colonel Clark-Kennedy's friends remember his close association with the organization of the big St. Andrew's ball of 1913, one of the most brilliant social events ever held in Canada.

Pte. J. F. Young.

Pte. John Francis Young was a stretcher-bearer with the Canadian Grenadier Guards, 87th Overseas Battalion. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles Young, whose home is at 386 St. Phillipe Street, do not yet know the nature of the heroism that won for their son the highest honor that the Empire can confer upon a soldier. "Frank," as his family and chums know him, has been reticent about his experiences at the front.

Pte. Young has been twice wounded since he went overseas in April, 1916, the last time at Cambrai, October 2, 1918. He is still at the C.A.C.C. No. 4, recovering from wounds of the head. In a recent letter, Pte. Young writes that he was able to return to the base on the day that followed the signing of the armistice. His letters—affectionate letters, eagerly inquiring for all the details of home life—convey no suggestion of the deed that won his decoration.

Pte. Young was previously wounded on August 15, 1917. At that time his commanding officer wrote: "After being hit, Pte. Young bravely carried on with his duties as stretcher-bearer, attending to the wounded. He would not go out until all were attended to."

To Be Married Soon.

Pte. Young, who is 27 years old, was born in Kidderminster, England. His parents came to Montreal six years ago. He was employed by the Imperial Tobacco Company until the time of his enlistment. At the outbreak of the war, Pte. Young was determined to enlist, and devoted his evenings, after the day's work, to training with the McGill Corps. As soon as the Canadian Grenadier Guards were formed, Pte. Young enrolled, and was given the post of stretcher-bearer.

Pte. Young will bring with him to Montreal from Kidderminster, England, his fiancee, to whom he has been engaged for more than three years.

Signaller Robert Young, 3rd Siege Battery, a younger brother of the winner of the Victoria Cross, is overseas.

Heroism Described.

The deed for which Pte. Young was decorated is described in a cable from London as follows:

"For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty in the attack at the Duryarrs section, September 2, 1918, when acting as a stretcher-bearer attached to D Company of his battalion. This company in the advance over a ridge suffered heavy casualties from shell and machine gun fire. Young, despite the complete absence of cover, and without the least hesitation and in an open fire-swept ground, dressed the wounded. Having exhausted his stock of dressings on more than one occasion he returned under intense fire to company headquarters for further supply. He continued this work for over an hour, displaying throughout a most absolute fearlessness. To his courageous conduct must be ascribed the saving of the lives of many of his comrades. Later, when the firing somewhat slackened he organized and led stretcher parties and brought in the wounded, whom he dressed. All through the operations of September 2, 3 and 4, Young continued to show the greatest valor and devotion to duty."

Hastings Victim of Influenza

Two Hastings Soldiers Welcomed Home.

HASTINGS, Jan. 8.—A sad death occurred on Saturday morning, when Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bearish, fell a victim to Spanish influenza. Deceased, who was about 26 years of age, had been in Western Canada for some time and had come home to spend the holiday with his parents, when he was taken ill and gradually sank until the end. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to the Trent Valley cemetery, where interment was made.

Soldiers Return.

A large crowd gathered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening to tender a reception to Pte. Wm. Langley and son Fred, who have recently returned from the front. The chair was occupied by Reeve Hess, who after a few introductory remarks, called upon the several speakers. Mr. Gerrard, of Peterborough, favoured the audience with two vocal selections which were well received and encored. Two patriotic selections, "The Red, White and Blue" and "The Maple Leaf" were heartily sung, after which an address and a handsome locket were presented to each of the returned soldiers, who suitably replied. The gathering dispersed after singing the National Anthem.

New Year's Day passed off very quietly, a number of the citizens spending the day with friends in other parts.

No Election.

No election was necessary this year, the council being composed of Dr Hess, reeve; C. Plant, R. C. Dossee, A. E. Chapman and Dr. Wilson, councillors.

A Shower.

A pleasant evening was spent on Friday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lobb, when a number of young people met and tendered the young couple a miscellaneous shower. Everyone present appeared to enjoy the evening.

Personals.

Rev. Atchie Thomson, of Moncton, has been the guest of his parents, Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thomson.

Rev. Fr. Powers of Parry Sound, spent the holiday with friends in this vicinity.

Hand Cut.

Mr. J. Mulholland is suffering from a severe wound in his hand, received while at work with a saw in the kinding factory. It was very fortunate that the young man escaped without the hand being completely severed.

Capt. Walter Thomson of Kingston, spent the holiday with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Thomson.

Mr. and Mrs. Winter Runnels, of Peterborough, spent the holiday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Runnels.

Mr. Ostrafider has moved his family to Deseronto, where he has secured a good position.

Judge Rogers, of Cobourg, was in town on Tuesday, presiding at the court.

Mrs. T. Leaymouth is visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mr. W. Haycke of Peterborough, spent the holiday with friends in town.

Schools have re-opened after the Christmas vacation, with Mr. Prentiss as principal.

Miss Laura Smith is in Nicholls hospital, Peterborough, undergoing an operation for throat trouble.

The week of prayer is being observed by union services in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

Lindsay Won From Port Hope

Midgets Meet Peterboro Juniors Here To-morrow Night.

LINDSAY, Jan. 8.—In the opening junior game of the season the locals defeated Port Hope by 7 to 3. Garnett and Kelly were the best men for Lindsay and Southwell for the visitors. Both teams showed lack of condition, but played fast hockey. Lindsay scored five goals in the first period. The second period was Port Hope's. The teams:—

Lindsay—Goal, Williamson; defence, Green and Garnett; centre, Kelly; wings, Killen and Stoddard; subs., Bell and McElroy.

Port Hope—Goal, Copeland; defence, Irvine and Deylen; centre, Hill; wings, Southwell and Weir; subs., Crig in.

Referee—Lew Brown.

HOCKEY NOTES.

To-morrow night's game will be the only chance in several weeks that the fans will have of seeing the Peterboro Juniors in action. Their next home game is not until Jan. 31, when Port Hope will play here.

The Peterboro Intermediates will play an O. H. A. game in Lindsay on Monday night.

All Saints' hockey team will practise at Brock street rink to-night at 6 o'clock. A full turnout is expected.

Three Hundred Persons Killed

NOON DESPATCHES DO NOT INDICATE VERY MUCH CHANGE

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—Street fighting in Berlin attained the greatest intensity between eleven o'clock Tuesday night and five o'clock Wednesday morning, according to a Berlin telegram to the Frankfort Nachrichten. Heavy artillery firing continued uninterruptedly. The despatch says the government is still master of the situation. Large bodies of troops, particularly artillery, it is added, continue to be sent to Berlin. Premier Ebert is reported to have told a friend that he had no doubt about the issue of the fighting. The government has decided to take energetic measures and has assembled a large number of troops. Premier Ebert has issued a manifesto to the workers and soldiers denouncing the Spartacans as being responsible for many persons being killed and wounded.

Reports Conflicting.

Reports are conflicting in regard to conditions in Berlin. Paris says the Ebert government has been turned out and an Independent Socialist is in control. Despatches from Switzerland declare that the Ebert government soldiers have fought rebels out of the main buildings and streets of the capital. One things sure is that bloody fighting has been in progress there for days.

CASE ADJOURNED UNTIL MONDAY

Emmet Faux, who it is alleged mixed the spirits which was the cause of the death of Omer Bourgan and who gave Pte. Walter Irwin a bottle of Columbian spirits on Saturday, December 29 was arraigned before the Magistrate this morning on a charge of selling liquor. Mr. J. Corkery appeared for the defence and Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted.

Mrs. Laura Bourgan wife of the late Omer Bourgan stated that she saw her husband give Faux a few dollars. He afterwards told her that he gave him $4 for the bottle. Faux said he would bring another bottle Sunday morning and Bourgan replied that he would have to wait for his money until Wednesday.

The case was adjourned until Monday.

Petes Came From Behind to Beat Whitby Soldier Team

Homesters Win First O.H.A. Battle by 7 to 6 After a Hard Fought Game—Visitors Were Ahead by 5 to 1 at End of Second Period, But Petes Made Great Finish.

START SEASON WELL

Coming from behind when they were apparently hopelessly beaten, the Peterborough intermediate O.H.A. team won their first game of the season at Brock street rink last night, beating the Whitby Military Hospital team by 7 goals to 6 after a game that was full of excitement if not of good hockey. For two periods the Petes looked to be out of the hunt entirely. They were behind 3 to 0 at the end of the first period and 5 to 1 at the close of the second, and when the last session opened their chances looked about as bright as the prospect of the German fleet being returned to the Kaiser. However, they staged the gamest kind of a finish, cutting loose with a spurt that took the visitors off their feet. Five times in succession the homesters whizzed the rubber past the soldier net guardian and the Petes were in front 6 to 5. Whitby came back with another goal, but once more the Petes flashed to the front and this time held their lead until the final whistle.

It was not championship hockey by any means. With heavy ice, on which the puck would hardly slide and with both teams decidedly lacking condition, it could not be expected that there would be much big league stuff pulled off. But there was excitement enough, especially in the last period, to more than make up for any deficiency in the quality of hockey, and the big crowd of fans could not have gone away happier if the Petes had won the final game in the Allen Cup series.

The local aggregation, considering that they have had only had a couple of practises, and the team as a whole had never worked together before, are to be congratulated, not only on their win, but on their gameness in battling through to victory when the game was apparently hopelessly lost.

Legros was the same reliable goalkeeper as ever, and Grover Halpin, although he had not his usual success in his rushes, checked well on the defence. Schultz, an old-timer who was performing a come-back stunt after half a dozen years' absence from the game, was a little shy on speed, but he made up for it in willingness. He was ready to give or take a bump with equal cheerfulness, and the fans, who immediately nick-named him the "Tank," were with him all the way. On the forward line, Ray Rose, Geo. Evans and Walter Jackson did sterling work, especially in the last period, when they developed a two and three man combination that earned them enough goals to win the decision. Rose was badly jarred when he collided with Curtis, the Whitby defence man in the second period, but he stuck on the job and finished strong. The individual honours for the Petes probably went to Walter Jackson who, handicapped by the fact that he had to play right wing, although a left-handed shot, was in the limelight throughout, scoring three goals and doing a lot of nice stick-handling and rushing. Kenneally did good work while he was on. Laidlaw, who formerly played with the R.A.F. team, seemed to have difficulty in getting started, and he was not used much in the later stages of the game.

The Whitby team, who by the way are real soldiers, inasmuch as five of them have been wounded in France, played fine hockey in the first two periods, although they faded badly on end. They showed a lot of speed in the early stages and checked back so speedily that the Petes were pretty well sewed up. Rice, who formerly played for Whitby juniors, played a fine game at right wing for the visitors, while Bunting at left wing, also distinguished himself. Macdonald, the little centre man, has been a prisoner of war in Germany, and played his last game of hockey previous to last night, in Switzerland, where he was interned after being released from Hunland. Curtis was the pick of the defence players. He hails from Simcoe, and was very effective in his methods. He was knocked out in a collision with Rose in the second period and was unable to finish the game. Meyers, the excitable little goal keeper, had a host of clever stop to his credit.

Lou Marsh handled the game satisfactorily.

The teams were:

Whitby—Goal, Meyers; defence, McKay, Curtis; centre, Macdonald; right wing, Rice; left wing, Bunting; subs Parker, Cook.

Peterborough — Goal, Legros; defence, Halpin, Schultz; centre, Evans; right wing, Jackson; left wing, Rose; subs, Kenneally, Laidlaw.

The Soldiers had much the better of the play in the first period, although at that the Petes had poor luck when close in and lost a number of golden chances. Whitby pressed for the greater part of the period and after Legros had handled several hard shots nicely, Bunting caught the local defence wide open and slipped inside for an easy goal.

Curtis went down a moment later and scored after a nice rush. When a little later a long scoop from the side by Rice fooled Legros, it looked as if the visitors were going to pile up a score. The Petes lost several good chances, hitting the post on one occasion, while Rose and Jackson both missed the net by inches when close in. Meyers, the Soldier goal keeper, drew a penalty for attempting to trip Schultz, but the Petes failed to get a shot at the nets while he was off, and the period ended 3 to 0.

The play was fairly even in the early part of the second period, and both goalkeepers were called upon to make clever stops. The Petes' stock went up some when Evans went down along and took Meyers' measure on a long shot from outside the defence.

Whitby came right back, however, and Cook scored from a scrimmage after Legros had blocked his first shot.

Halpin rushed nicely and apparently scored, but Referee Marsh over-ruled Goal Umpire Archie Barbeau's decision.

Bunting scored for Whitby a few minutes after when he followed his own shot in quickly and batted in a rebound. That left it 5 to 1, and the figures remained the same until the end of the period.

The real fireworks came in the last session when the Petes cut loose with all they had in an attempt to pull down the big lead. Kenneally started the fun when he scooped the puck past Meyers from a scrimmage. That made it 5 to 2, and Walter Jackson, grabbing the rubber at centre, dodged right inside and scored from the mouth of the net. The Petes were only two goal behind and the crowd rooted lustily for more counters. The spurt seemed to die away for a few minutes and then Jackson slammed one past Meyers after a pretty combination rush with Rose and Evans.

Back came the red shirts again, and Evans, after a rush with Rose, hammered the tying goal into the nets.

The crowd went wild a minute later when Jackson, coming in fast took a neat pass from behind the nets by Evans and beat Meyers.

The Petes were ahead for the first time in the game. They were not out of the woods, however, for Rice slipped a long shot past Legros and the score was once more tied.

The homesters were not to be cheated out of the victory, and Rose put the game on ice by a shot that carromed into the nets through a tangle of players and sticks.

Both teams were ready to drop when the whistle sounded. It was a great game to win and a hard one to lose, and the players of both outfits are to be congratulated upon keeping their heads in spite of the temptation to rough it that comes from a close game, poor ice and lack of condition.

The summary:

First Period.

1 Whitby, Bunting, 9 mins.
2 Whitby, Curtis, 2 mins.
3 Whitby, Rice, 3 mins.

FAST JUNIOR TEAMS TO CLASH TO-MORROW

Lindsay Midgets and Peterboro Juniors Will Meet in O.H.A. Fixture at Brock Street Rink—Promises to be Repetition of Memorable Games of Other Seasons.

The strong finish of the Peterboro intermediate last night has aroused the hockey appetite of the fans and they are pulling for the Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team to repeat the feat to-morrow night when "Cap" Simpson's redoubtable Lindsay Midgets will be here for a Junior O.H.A battle. It is not necessary to remind the fans that any time the Lindsay and Peterboro Juniors clash there is a real game on the cards and the wise ones who know that both teams have the majority of last years outfits in line are arranging to be on hand early ready for what they anticipate will be a thriller.

Given good ice there should be something doing all the way. Cherrett, Park and Hagerman and Co. have been going great guns in practice and they will take a lot of beating, but fans should not overlook the fact that Lindsay have a few speed merchants of their own including Wilford, who showed all kinds of skating ability last season and is said to be going faster than ever this year. The Peterboro team will be finally selected after to-nights practice and will be announced to-morrow There is keen competition for places on the line-up.

It is expected that Lou Marsh will handle the bell. The game is called for 8:15 o'clock and will start sharp on time as both the Lindsay team and the referee will reach the city early.

There is great interest in Peterboro in the Junior team and there will be a big crowd out to-morrow night to cheer them in their first appearance of the season. The young Petes have discarded their familar red white and blue uniforms and will appear in new maroon and white outfits to-morrow night.

Plaintiff Was Awarded Damages

A case originating in the Township of Percy, in the County of Northumberland, was tried yesterday at Campbellford, before His Honour Judge Rogers, formerly of Peterborough.

The plaintiff was Charles O'Neill the owner of Lot 12 in the 11th Concession of the Township of Percy and the defendant was Fred Richardson, the owner of an adjoining farm. It appears from the evidence that Richardson, had, without O'Neill's consent, pastured his cattle on O'Neill's property. The action was to have been tried at Peterborough, but was transferred to Campbellford. Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of Gordon, Widdifield & O'Brien appeared for the plaintiff, O'Neill, and Mr. G. A. Payne, for the defendant, Richardson.

After hearing all the evidence offered His Honour decided that Mr. O'Neill was entitled to damages it having developed during the course of the trial, that Richardson had, unknown to Mr. O'Neill, pastured his cattle on O'Neill's property, by the defendan'ts own admission, for at least two and one half months. The cattle did a certain amount of damage to the orchard on the premises, and His Honour gave judgment for Mr. O'Neill for $25.00 and costs. Mr. O'Neill claimed that the hay crop had been destroyed on a portion of his property by the cattle trespassing there. Mr. O'Neill's home is in the Western part of Canada.

RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT

Voice of The People

To Mayor and Council of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—With reference to Mr. R. P. Hall's letter to Mayor Duncan regarding the Hunter street bridge, permit me to say that the Laurier government stopped dredging the channel leading up under the Hunter street bridge to Quaker Oats after the appearance on the question paper in Parliament of inquiries about it. The stoppage by the late Government is the crux of the whole present difficulty. When the request for a contribution was laid before the Honourable Robt. Rogers later he found that after dredging the raceway of the Quaker Oats an alleged turning basin above the bridge and part of a channel below the bridge the Laurier Government stopped the whole project and thus rendered it useless. If Mr. Hall will apear before the Minister when he comes in a week or two and will expalin away this change of policy by the Laurier Government he will do much to free Mr. Carvel from the awkward box regarding a contribution to the bridge the present Government is in by reason of that fact. It would look very bad for us to further consider something which the late Government found it necessary to discontinue. Incidentally, I may say one answer by the late Government to a question on the Question Paper of Parliament in 1909 regarding this work reads as follows:

"Work done by day's labour with dredge hired from Conroy Bros." It was understood that the people who hired the dredge from Conroy Bros. and did the work by day's labour were Messrs. Clarry & Co. This face may have had something to do with the sudden stopping of the work when it was exposed. However, Mr. Hall had nothing to do with that matter as he was not then member, but he can now have much to do with enabling use to take the Hunter Street Bridge matter up legitimately as he will explain the dredging of Quaker Oats tail-race by the Laurier Government and other things connected with that job and the stoppage of the work. I hope the Council will invite Mr. Hall to be present. We will need all our resources to convince the present Government that Mr. Rogers refused to do something by way of expenditure that the present Government ought to do.
